The Congregationalist says that the closing scene on commencement night at Harvard College was a disgrace to all concerned. Many of the graduates, as well as some of the other students, were drunk, and the drinking on the campus was open and unconcealed.

Dr. Julius F. LeMoyne, of Washington, Pa., has again made a generous gift to Washington and Jefferson College. By a donation of $20,000 he has provided for a Professorship of Applied Mathematics, Civil Engineering, etc., in that institution. In addition to this, Dr. LeMoyne has given $1,000 for the equipment of this chair and the chair of Agriculture in the same College.

The Christian Union says: "The evil of trades-unions receives a new illustration in the strike which has just been initiated at Fall River. The whole original body of strikers is said to be not more than 800 in number, and it endeavors to arrest the industry of 15,000 working men and working women, at a loss to them of not less than $100,000 a week. The originators of the strike are recent English immigrants. The most prominent of them has been described as a weaver who can obtain employment in none of the mills on account of his bad reputation, and who has been twice arrested for keeping his own child at work in contravention of law. The indications all are that the strike can only succeed in producing temporary derangement and distress, and must still further weaken the power of that despotic imperium in imperio—the trades union."

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A DISCUSSION OF THEIR CHARACTER AND CLAIMS.

BY REV. DAVID McDILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDillin Six Chapters treats of 1 "Their Antiquity."—2 "Their Secrecy."—3 "Oaths and Promises."—4 "Profaneness."—5 "Their Exclusiveness."—6 "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

WISCONSIN STATE CONVENTION.

The sixth anniversary of the Wisconsin State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will be held at Evansville, Rock county, September 2d, 3d and 4th, 1879.

To Wisconsin readers:—Are you a friend to this reform? If so you cannot well afford to be absent from this meeting. You are needed to aid in planning, and starting the work of the year. Will you have a State Lecturer? If so, who? and how shall he be supported? Get your church or society to send delegates. If you cannot attend or get your church to send a delegate, direct a letter to the convention. Let the friends know in some way what you want and that you are a live anti-secret church or individual. Take a collection, send a contribution, or do something to help on the cause. Secretary Stoddard will deliver the opening address. Elders Barlow, Browne and Rathbun will be present, with others always able in council and eloquent in speech. Two or more degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry will be worked. This will be a favorable opportunity to subscribe for the Christian Cynosure and to obtain tracts and anti-secrecy publications on special terms. Don't fail to come yourself, but if you can't come yourself be sure "to send a hand."

Topics of the Time.

One of the most remarkable cases of suicide took place in the southern part of this city on the 21st instant. About two years ago an old and well-to-do citizen applied for a divorce from his second wife, an amiable and excellent lady whose life with her husband had become intolerable because of the insane ambition of two daughters, then some forty years old. The old lady soon died, overcome by her trials, and the daughters with a younger sister, feeble in mind and body, left their father's house and lived alone on the proceeds of property given them by him, amounting to some $2,300 a year. The older sisters had been highly educated and spent years in Europe, and their great ambition was to marry men of wealth, to make a "great match." Years passed with disappointment embittering each, until their mania took the shape of greed, and they left a home their contentions had already destroyed. They had difficulty in managing their property, and the fear of losing it rendered them insane on the subject, until, sending the younger sister up stairs while they made way with life, the two elder both hung themselves in their own parlor. Few sadder cases have been recorded than this of the curse of gold.

The yellow fever continues to result fatally in about ten cases daily in Memphis, while here and there all over the country the seeds of the disease carried from that city result fatally. Memphis is nearly depopulated. Only a few thousand whites remain and the ten or twelve thousand blacks and all the poor who have not means to flee are being quartered in camps at a distance from the city. The government has furnished a large number of tents and rations, and local treasuries have supplied all other demands for the present. The Howard Association needs no help from abroad yet, though physicians and nurses have freely offered themselves. The outlook, after a week's experience, promises to be less disastrous than last year. The disease can have comparatively few victims in Memphis, and vigorous measures may prevent its appearance at other points. But news may come any day which will dispel hope.

In the face of the wonderful temperance movements of the last four years the Internal Revenue Bureau reports a large increase in the consumption of beer. About eleven million barrels are used annually, or, it is estimated about eight gallons to every man, woman and child in the United States. The sales of whisky show that its use only keeps pace with the population, while the proportion of beer drunk increases much faster. On the contrary, the figures presented to the national brewers' association at St. Louis last month, showed that for the year ending June 30, 1878, in sixteen States and territories, the sales of malt liquors decreased 69,780 barrels, of which falling off Pennsylvania alone furnished 20,840. In Maine during the same time there were but seven barrels used, against 7,031 the year before; which proves that prohibitory laws can be enforced. But if, in the twenty-eight States not mentioned in this list, the increase of the consumption of beer has so largely increased this, terrible evil must be attacked from some new point of vantage. Miss Willard's great effort in Illinois to secure a temperance ballot for women, failed before the legislature by only one vote. It is reported that at Plymouth, Mass., lately, women were allowed to vote on the qestion of beer-selling and the vile stuff went down under a two-thirds majority. But neither can this means, or pledges, or ribbon clubs effect a permanent reform. We believe this work must be done by the churches of the living God in a more direct capacity than by such means, and his providence will ere long call upon them to undertake it.

The projects for great canals are so numerous as to remind us of the railroad-building mania of ten years ago. De Lesseps wants to blow up the mountains of Panama; Gen. Fremont would turn the Gulf of California upon the deserts of New Mexico; and the French had a plan for pouring the waters of the Mediterranean upon the sands of Sahara, which they have abandoned for a railroad project of two thousand miles long. While these schemes are fermenting, the Russians are actually re-opening an old channel for the river Oxus to return into the Caspian Sea. An examination of the map of Asia will show how the waters of this river now flowing into the Sea of Aral may by the change open up navigation into the interior of Asia, and the Russian engineers are even speculating whether the depth of the Caspian may not be changed so as to overflow into the Caucasian valleys and make a canal from the Black Sea practicable. The Oxus it is said anciently turned into the Caspian; but a great dam, built in the year 600, turned it aside into a reedy marsh which became in time the Sea of Aral. This dam was broken through in 1224, and as late as 1720 a Dutch geographer spoke of the river as having two branches, one running into each sea. The commercial advantages of this change have made Russia venture so far toward Afghanistan; and this gave a pretext to England's greedy war on that country.

We turn with delight from the dark pictures of German life—her warlike energy, her Sabbaths violated, her stupifying beer gardens, her infidelity and communism, to read from an address of the old Emperor; and if that could effect anything, we could wish these sentiments as widely disseminated and practiced as they are honestly spoken. Alas, the habits of the German people show little respect for the religious convictions of their venerable ruler when he says: "If there is anything capable of acting as a stay to us in the life and turmoil of the present time, it is the support alone to be found in Jesus Christ. Let not yourselves, therefore, be misled, gentlemen, by the tendencies prevailing in the world, especially in our days, and do not join the great multitude who either entirely leave the Bible out of account, as the only source of truth, or falsely interpret it in their own sense. You all know, gentlemen, that I, of full and free conviction, belong to the positive (not positivist) union founded by my deceased father. The ground and rock to which I and all of us must cling is the unadulterated faith as taught us by the Bible."

Masonic Reasons and Characteristics.

BY PROF. W. O. TOBEY.

Ascension day of last year was observed by the Freemasons of Dayton, O., with very "impressive" services in the Grace M. E. church. On that occasion Rev. T. H. Pearne, D.D., formerly pastor of that congregation, delivered the set oration which was published in the Daily Journal. He is a distinguished Knight Templar and a very influential man in his church as well as in his lodge. He has since that occasion been appointed by the bishop, presiding elder of the Dayton district in the place of Rev. Dr. Stephenson, who lately fell in a deplorable way and was deposed by his brethren.

There are some points in the oration delivered by Sir Knight Pearne which even at this late day, in view of his church promotion, deserve attention from those who do not believe that perfection is to be found in the dark ways of Masonry. He said:

In the United States, there are six hundred and two thousand Master Masons; one hundred and thirty-five thousand Royal Arch Masons, and forty-nine thousand Knights Templar. These last are to the whole population, as one to nine hundred. These large bodies of Master Masons, Capitular Masons and Templar Masons, are such, not of choice, but for what they deem good reasons. Whether non-Masons would deem those reasons good or not, it is too clear for doubt that Masons so regard them, or they would not be Masons. These different bodies bear relations to each other, somewhat as the base, superstructure and the apex of the pyramid. "All are but parts of one stupendous whole."

These Sir Knights have steadily advanced from the northeast corner of the Masonic Temple, where as Entered Apprentices they stood, just and regularly made Masons, up to the higher apartments of Masonic truth and attainment, where they now stand, High Priests, Kings, Scribes, champions and defenders of truth. The Masons present will understand and appreciate what I am about to say; non-Masons will receive it upon my word, viz: That these Sir Knights and all Sir Knights are, of necessity, among the very best and highest of Masons; not because of lineage, nor of blood, nor of wealth, nor of any externals, nor of any worldly distinction, but because of intrinsic worth; because they possess high moral qualities, principles and character, indeed, because they have a true nobility of nature.

Theirs is the nobility of truth seeking, truth loving, truth defending, truth discriminating. This is so from the very nature of the case, both as to Masonry and as to themselves. In the beginning Masonry selects from the common mass of men the best for building up the goodly Masonic fabric. She shapes, molds, squares, dresses, polishes and improves these materials until the rough, uncouth stone, as it was in quarry, becomes the perfect ashler, fitted for that place in Masonry where it can best promote the strength and beauty of the structure.

In Masonry advancement bears exact relation to merit and proficiency, so that selecting, at first, the best materials and advancing them only as they display proficiency, Knights Templar are, and they should be, the very best specimens of men and Masons. Knights Templar combine two most important characteristics: the possession of knowledge and the right exercise of power; the possession of knowledge and the due rendering of service to God and man; knowledge and beneficence; knowledge in its proper use and legitimate developments.

There was much more of the same kind of fulsome glorying in Masonic craft. But there are a few assertions in the quotation which show the arbitrary, proud and dangerous character of the dark system. The "good reasons" which actuate Masons in being such are not given. It matters not whether others deem them good reasons or not, the Mason justifies himself in his course, which is "not of choice." The question is, whether the people at large have not a right to know whether Masonic reasons are "good" or not. If Masons are not such of choice, why are they Masons? If their object is "charity," they ought to choose their profession of it, certainly. If they have any other good end in view, they ought to have choice in pursuing it. And whatever their motives and objects in being Masons are, they ought to let the public know whether these reasons are good or not.

That charity is not the main object of Masonry has been so often shown that I need not show it now. But it is worthy of remark that the so-called charity of all secret societies is not only not charity, but is one of the most unmerciful business transactions known among men. If a member has paid his dues into the treasury of the lodge for many years, and at last finds himself unable to continue the payments, he is most unmercifully cut off and deprived of the benefits of the money which he thought he was laying up against evil days. Justice, to say nothing of mercy, would require that the man who has become unable to pay should have some benefits of his investment. The sacreligious language of Dr. Pearne in calling Knights Templars "high priests," is unpardonable. Calling them "champions and defenders of the truth" is simple bombast. This reverend Knight has the assurance to say that "non-Masons" will accept it upon his word, that "all Sir Knights are, of necessity, among the very best and highest of Masons." It matters little to non-Masons about the claims of Masons among themselves, especially when these men cannot assign a reason for their membership. But it is amazing that Dr. Pearne will ask non-Masons to receive anything upon his word after as much as telling them that they are not capable of judging of Masonic motives and reasons, or have no right to judge of them.

The selection of "the fittest" among men for the Masonic fabric is a process that "non-Masons" do not see going on. It is a fact that some very good men are not Masons and some very mean, abominable men are even Sir Knights. The remarkable knowledge of Masons is not a thing which is of common observation. There are some remarkably ignorant men among Knights Templar. But we have yet to notice the most important utterance of our orator, that Sir Knights have the "right exercise of power." What is this power? Is it that which is symbolized by the sword? If so, it is a matter of interest to non-Masons to know how and when that power is to be exercised by the 49,000 Sir Knights of this country. It cannot be in defense of Christianity as Masons pretend. For whatever might be the enemy which should come against Christianity, whether Turk, Jew, Mormon or infidel, there would be brother Masons in its ranks, and Christian Knights could not wield the sword against them. Whether Dr. Pearne and other Masonic orators talk for talk's sake is not certain. But they say some alarming, else very silly things.

The Duty of Christians in Reference to War.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

That all war is wrong, contrary to the example and teachings of Christ, and never conducted in harmony with the principles of the Gospel, is abundantly obvious. It is equally plain that it causes the most oppressive and grinding taxation, and tends terribly to pervert and corrupt public morals.

No one attempts any justification of its spirit and practice, except that of necessity. It is held that governments must protect themselves, and that we ought to aid them in that protection. The end being right, the necessary means for the accomplishment of that end is held are also right, and hence Christians may lawfully engage in war. This is the argument for war, and the only one. It contains three false assumptions. First, that it is ever necessary for a government to disobey the law of Christ, or that it can profitably do so. Secondly, that a good end justifies the use of wrong means. Thirdly, that loyalty to the government is above loyalty to Christ. The divine protection and watchcare is abundantly promised to all nations that adhere to divine law and trust in Him. The nation that will not serve him shall perish. No end, however, desirable, justifies a departure from Christian principle; for to seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness is the first and highest consideration. Loyalty to to the government is always subordinate to loyalty to Christ, for he is King of kings and Lord of lords.

It is the plain duty of the individual Christian to wholly abstain from war and to oppose its spirit and practice. It is a blessed thought that we are not responsible for results, and that they may be safely left to Him who has all power in heaven and in earth. Strict conformity to Christian principles will always result in what is best for us, and best for the world. Having determined what the law of Christ demands, we need take no further thought in the matter. If I am asked what would have been the result if in our war of the Revolution, or in the late war of the Rebellion, all Christians had abstained from war and protested against it, I say I do not know. No one knows; but we do know that God has promised that all things shall work together for good to them that love God, and hence the highest possible good would have been the result.

Evidences of a Pure Heart.

BY MRS. H. E. HAYDEN.

"Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord! and who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." Ps. 24: 3-4. "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God. Mat. 5:8.

Many think that joy is the best test of purity, and if God does not bless them with a large proportion of the joys of salvation, they doubt the purity of their hearts; although God has given them the direct witness that the work is accomplished. It is true that those whose hearts have been purified by the all-cleansing blood of Jesus, generally do have frequent seasons of ecstatic joy; but not always. The heart may be pure, and yet seasons of heavenly joy few and far between. Some seek the blessing of purity and believe they have it so long as the joy lasts; and when that subsides they doubt. To such sister Palmer says, "you trust more in your feelings than in the faithfulness of God." If God has given me the blessing of purity, I do not lose it unless I knowingly disobey. Let sanctified souls remember this.

But what are the best tests? How may I know that my heart is pure? Let us answer a few questions. First, is that hateful, that earthly plant pride. cut up root and branch and exterminated from my heart? And has God planted that precious, that heavenly plant humility in its place? Do I feel that the humility of Christ covers me like a garment? Have I a positive dislike for the foolish fashions, the ostentation and display of the world? Do I loathe them? Does it grieve me to see God's money spent foolishly for gay and costly array, and costly furniture, etc.? Do I no longer feel the uprising of that anger that rests in the bosom of fools? The Bible speaks of two kinds of anger. There is a wicked anger and a holy anger: there is a sinful anger, and there is a righteous anger. Holy anger, or indignation against against sin and evil, is mixed with love, pity and compassion. Sinful anger is mixed with hatred and revenge. Anger, in itself considered, is always the same in its nature. Its character is determined by the ingredients with which it is mixed. Am I angry with an individual because of his terrible wickedness? And do I at the same time love him, and will I do him all the good in my power? Then the anger that I feel is righteous anger; such as God feels when he is "angry with the wicked every day." St Paul says, "Be ye angry and sin not; let not the sun go down upon your wrath." When the sanctified man feels anger against evil and wrong rising up in the soul, he should check it very soon, lest through temptation it might change in its nature and become that "anger that rests in the bosom of fools." If we are not very careful we will not only hate the action, but hate the actor too. This holy indignation controlled and kept within certain bounds, will rouse God's children to greater activity in tearing down the strongholds of Satan.

But let us continue to search our hearts and question ourselves. Is the last lingering desire for riches, honor, fame, or reputation taken away? Do I delight to walk in the valley of humility with Jesus? Is my will subdued? Can I say, Father, "thy will be done," though it lead me through the bitterest persecution and into the fiery furnace? Have I no doubts or fears with regard to my acceptance with God? Do I feel that nearness to God that Satan cannot tempt me on this point? Do I love God with an intensity that I cannot describe? Can I say that every thing I do is done for his glory? Have I a teachable spirit? Or do I wrap myself up in my dignity, and conduct myself as though I already knew about all there was to be learned? If I can answer the above questions in the affirmative, I have no reason to doubt but that God has, by the still small voice or the whirlwind, purified and cleansed my heart.

And now, dear brethren and sisters of all the churches, you whom God has raised up to be especial teachers of holiness, please suffer a word of admonition from your unworthy sister. When we speak of the word anger in connection with entire sanctification, let us make the distinction between sinful anger and righteous anger, and thus save those who have just stepped upon the highway of holiness much trouble and anxiety, and also save them from stumbling and falling in the the way. When we make the broad assertion that the sanctified soul never feels the uprising of anger, we state what is not strictly true.

It is right to despise fools; it is wrong not to fear them.

"Figures don't Lie."

The sensation produced by the paper on "The Church and the Lodge," read before the late Illinois Congregational State Association, would not have been so overcoming had the figures furnished been examined a little. Women form a part of the Christian church by no means to be ignored in passing upon its benevolent work. But that was done, and the following figures were given to show the superiority of the gifts of the secret orders to those of the Protestant churches of Quincy, where Mr. Anderson lives. He gives as the number of men enrolled in all those orders there, 4,952. In all the Protestant churches, 1,813 men. The amount paid out by the former he puts down as $26,872.44, or an average of $5.42⅛ to each man. The sum contributed by the church members he gives as $11,610.52, or on an average of $6.40⅘ to each member! He does thus involuntary homage to the church of Christ as compared with man-made secret orders. The German churches he specifies as especially benevolent! Does he not know that these churches are set as a flint against secret societies, while his own and other Protestant churches in Quincy divide their benefactions between the church and those secret orders? We blush to think of a body of venerable ministers and laymen listening to and applauding such a production. Well may we inquire whither we are drifting?

Congregationalist.

Garrison.

In the North American Review for August Wendel Phillips contributes a paper on Wm. Lloyd Garrison, which is so able a vindication of the principles of reform and the character of reformers, that we venture to present the whole in two numbers of the Cynosure.—Ed.

Mr. Garrison began, inspired, and largely controlled the movement which put an end to negro slavery in the United States. This fixes his place in history.

There had been, before the Revolution, tracts printed and individual protests made against the system. The Quakers and Covenanters never ceased their testimonies; and the Methodists spoke brave words—not much heeded, as they were only words, and often spoken by men who continued slaveholders. The conventions which formed the State Constitutions, and those which adopted them, discussed it. That which framed the United States Constitution gave it a very exhaustive examination. Before and during the war of 1812 it again attracted public attention; and, in 1819, the time of the Missouri Compromise, the antagonisms of the two sections, slave and free, nearly broke the Union.

But no man or church proposed, much less set on foot, any plan or movement for its abolition. Each and all seemed confounded and disheartened at the complexity of the problem and the vast work. There was the most entire ignorance and apathy on the slave question. If men knew of the existence of slavery, it was only as a part of picturesque Virginia life. No one preached, no one talked, no one wrote about it. No whisper of it stirred the surface of the political sea. The church heard of it occasionally, when some colonization agent asked funds to send blacks to Africa. Old school books tainted with antislavery selections had passed out of use, and new ones were compiled to suit the times. If any dissent from the prevailing faith appeared, every one set himself to crush it. The pulpit preached at it, the press denounced it, mobs tore down houses, threw presses into the fire and the stream, and shot editors; religious conventions tried to smother it, parties arrayed themselves against it. The great leaders Webster, Benton, and Clay, in solemn and set phrase, pledged themselves to keep silent respecting it. For Garrison's first antislavery lecture in Boston, in 1830, no church could be had; the only building that could be procured was a hall used by the followers of Abner Kneeland, who called themselves infidels. Equally honorable to both sides, infidels and young abolitionists, was his frank declaration, without protest from that generous roof, that "no power but Christianity could destroy slavery."

Mr. Garrison first organized a movement specially and solely devoted to the abolition of slavery. He first announced a plan—immediate and unconditional emancipation on the soil—the only proposition which would ever have attracted public attention and supported an agitation capable of effecting a settlement of the question. He searched out the means which could help to that result, combined and marshaled them to efficient action, and finally accomplished his purpose.

His life was given to this work, Declaring that his reliance was wholly on moral means—the agitation and discussion of the right of slavery—he tested everything by reference to this self-evident principle: a man's right to himself. By this he tried church and State, sects and parties, and individual leaders; every man, or organization, which doubted, or denied, or opposed, this self-evident principle he denounced as intellectually blind or morally rotten.

The exact amount of sin each one was guilty of in God's sight depended on his birth, training, and light. This he did not undertake to settle. But any general or continued denial of self-evident truth he counted as a moral delinquency.

The Constitution, whose cement was as an agreement to keep millions in chains, he denounced as a "covenant with death and an agreement with hell." The party which, under our Declaration of Independence, held power by silence and complicity with such oppression, he rated as hypocrites; as laying down for others a rule against which they would themselves indignantly rebel. The church, which sanctioned the denial of marriage, education, and the Bible to these victims, and their sale on the auction-block, he pronounced no church of Christ, but a synagogue of Satan.

This merciless and incessant criticism, in private and public, by speech and the press—using each event that occurred as a text for his exhortation—was his only means of agitation, Though church and State, college and exchange, two thousand million dollars of slave property, commerce based on cotton, fashion, wealth, and literature, great leaders and strong parties, were arrayed against him, he appealed only to the conscience and the moral sense; never, in the darkest hour, doubting their omnipotence.

Though the battle-axe did finally break the chain, it was conscience, stirred by his appeal and enlightened by his teaching, that provoked the conflict between two civilizations, fought the battles, and enabled the State to abolish slavery.

Never on the antislavery platform was there any criticism of Whig or Democrat, as such, but only as each supported slavery. No fault was ever found with Baptist or Methodist, or any sect, except as and when it gave sanction to slavery. Only pro slavery parties and sects met with any rebuke. Hence, in the first fervor which answered Garrison's appeal, everything sincere in the church rallied to his side. After ten or twelve years this changed, and, unable to endure his criticism, the church organizations either wholly withdrew from the movement, or formed societies exclusively of their own members. But the church showed no real interest in the subject; the clergymen who remained true to their first pledges were flung from their pulpits, and, more or less formally, disowned by their denominations; and church-members who made themselves prominent were often excommunicated.

Some have claimed more, and some less, as the share such church societies had in producing the final result. One thing is evident: but for Mr. Garrison's ten or twelve previous years of agitation, the church would never have wakened to her duty. And even after 1840 it was mostly because shamed by his exposure of her delinquency, roused by his appeals, and awed by his example, that she persevered in her testimony.

About the same time (1840), some of the floating elements and margins of political organizations attempted distinct political action, and this half-abortive effort finally culminated, in 1848, in the Free-Soil party, and at last in the Republican party, in 1854, which made no war on slavery itself (except that in the District of Columbia and the territories), but confined itself to resisting any extension of the system. This political party, no doubt, largely aided in creating the public sentiment which enabled the government to abolish slavery during the war; and there can nowhere be found an earlier or more generous appreciation, or more flowing eulogy, of these men and their labors than in the columns of Mr. Garrison's journal, The Liberator.

But Mr. Garrison always kept his movements distinct from this political agitation, and his movements had very great advantages over it. The moment party lines were drawn, the meetings and conventions of each were attended mostly, if not only, by its own members. The mass of mind reached by their speakers was just that which did not need influence or change of opinion. Political agitation is an educational force to only a limited extent. Hampered by the compromises of the Constitution, obliged to conciliate opponents, to keep appeals and arguments within such limits as would secure immediate results — votes — the Republicans could only assail the outworks and abuses of the institution, and even those with bated breath. Such fettered assault effects little when the aim and need are to change entirely public opinion.

Said Governor Chase, of Ohio—afterward our Chief Justice—to the graduating class of Dartmouth, just before the war, "Gentlemen, I will give you a life-long motto: No slavery anywhere." Enthusiastic applause instantly drowned his voice. "Not yet gentlemen," he continued. "Wait a moment. I've not finished. No slavery any where outside the slave States!" No applause followed the completed sentence.

When logic stops thus half-way, it makes few converts, and chills all enthusiasm. But this was as far as, under the Constitution, and in the ranks of the Republican party, the speaker could go. Stevens, Wade, Giddings, Lovejoy, Andrew, and Sumner overpassed such limits. But the party held itself responsible for no such rash utterances.

The Garrisonian, on the contrary, gathered all classes, and both sides into his meetings. He broke up the fallow ground, appealed fearlessly to first principles—right and wrong—tore parchment contracts to pieces, followed out his self-evident truth to all logical results, kindled enthusiasm and roused the keenest opposition, so that the land rocked with an agitation that went down to primeval depths. As Seward said to me in New York, "Yes, you make opinion, and we use it."

But the fact which needs to be emphasized, and proves the exact relation between Mr. Garrison and these parties, is this: no matter how much or how little influence is claimed for honest men in the pulpit and earnest men in the parties, there is no dispute that each and all of them were waked to action by Garrison's summons, and achieved whatever they did achieve by following in the path—immediate abolition—he had opened, and using the method—agitation—he had proposed. A keen observer says, "Garrison made Lincoln possible."

The antislavery movement converted these men; it gave them a constituency; it gave them an opportunity to speak, and it gave them a public to listen. The antislavery agitation gave them their votes, got them their offices, furnished them their facts, and gave them their audiences. If their friends claim that they cherished all these principles in their own breasts before Mr. Garrison appeared, then if the antislavery movement did not furnish them their ideas, it surely gave the courage to utter them. The relation between him and all antislavery statesmen and divines is very much that which George Stephenson, the inventor of locomotives, bears to the engineers on our railway trains. In Wade, Stevens, Sumner, Seward, Jay, Tappan, Beecher, May, Lovejoy, and Bacon, Mr. Garrison created an antislavery purpose and then gave them an efficient method which no one ever dreamed of before. Yes, and, considering the fore-front place he held in the constant manufacture of opinion on every phase of the question as it presented itself, it may be truly said that he not only set them in motion, but he also, to a great extent, kept them in motion. Further, in many a critical moment his was the bold, wise, and single-eyed counsel which saved the cause from compromise and shipwreck.

To-day scornful priests say Garrison did nothing. He was only a stumbling-block in the way. His bitterness only hindered the movement, and his criticism of the church put off success for twenty years. When free speech cost something, and claims for justice angered the nation almost to slaying the speaker, then timid church and party hid themselves from all responsibility for the agitation, and left Garrisonianism to keep the movement alive. The work done—the tempest over—fair-weather sailors stalk forth to doubt if there were, after all, any storm, or even any rough sea, but what the pilot raised.

Each one of these followers, the moment his blows began to tell, was charged with the same intolerance of judgment and bitterness of speech that Garrison was so universally accused of. Neither Sumner's rhetoric, nor the extreme caution with which Channing handled the argument, was any shield for them against the accusation. In truth, it was not the manner nor the language that stung the sinner: it was the bare fact that his sin had found him out.

Men who were and are unwilling to give up all for principle, and who seek to buy the name of reformer at half-price, still harp on Garrison's mood and language. But history shows no such work ever done unless by an earnestness which seemed to half-hearted men bitter and intolerant. Fox, Luther, Isaiah, and even the Divine Master, could not escape such criticism. "There is a prudent wisdom," says Goethe, "and there is a wisdom which never reminds you of prudence." A truth Swift saw earlier when he said:

> "The stupid cant, 'He went too far,' despise,
> And learn that to be bold is to be wise."

History will show that neither the fierce Saxon of Fox, nor Isaiah's hallowed lips, nor Luther's lurid denunciation, ever outran the truth, or did anything but good. Show us one efficient reformer who has escaped this charge, before you blame Garrison for what seems an inherent element of human nature and a necessity in human affairs. Our history shows that he was none too bitter, not a whit too earnest, and in judging his fellow-citizens he only half appreciated their moral dullness.

How slowly and reluctantly they answered his appeal! All the heed they paid him for a quarter of a century was mobs and hatred. What niggard support they gave him at the very last! And even in the death-grapple, when, the flag bowing low in peril, selfishness broke the chain, we turned the negro out, after centuries of wrong, ignorant, penniless, naked, without a roof, surrounded by the wealth he had created, and yet left with the ownership only of his bare body! The shock Garrison is alleged to have given this people—all necessary to stun us, drunk with prejudice, into sobriety—has never yet lifted us to a thoroughly just and honorable mood. Look even to-day at the timid selfishness with which northern trade and party let the Mississippi be blockaded, the national arm defied, and ten thousand houseless victims, deluded into believing that law could protect them, subjected to piteous agony.

You sometimes hear even now some narrow and superficial talker styling Garrison as a man "of one idea." Men with their eyes open see that, as Carlyle says, "every road leads to the end of the world." So every great moral question must hold all others within it. No sooner was this question of mere chattel slavery afoot than it opened the way to all others. Toleration of opinion, the limits of authority, the relation of the citizen to the law and to government, the place of the Bible, the sphere of woman, race, layman, and priests, State rights and nationality—all were stirred and became involved. Mr. Garrison shrank from the discussion of none of them. On all he showed the same serene intrepidity, independence, and sagacity, and the same true conservatism, as in his original crusade. Alive to all, ready for each one as it crossed his path, his agitation contributed more than any one force in our time to the strenuous, practical, and fearless discussions of these issues. Whether an abolitionist should be heard in any town; whether his subject should be allowed in the lyceum; whether he himself should be countenanced, even if speaking on a popular theme—these questions taught toleration to common men who never read Locke. New England took at last the freedom of speech which Luther and Calvin had argued for, but which neither they nor most of their followers had dared to use.

"WHAT IS IT?"

Barnum excited curiosity and drew crowds to see his woolly horse. Masonry knows how to excite curiosity and draw in its dupes to see its woolly horse! "What is it?" No matter if Morgan the martyr, and Bernard and Colver and Greene and many others who have been Masons and withdrawn from the fraternity have told of the woolly animal, yet the crowd go in heedless of warning until they find the Masonic web has fettered their freedom and their wings are henceforth useless, and the fly becomes fit food for the central spider.

But "what is it?" The landmarks are the Masonic creed, and its twenty-fifth says, "That the landmarks of Masonry can never be changed." After that let the laws of the Medes and Persians and "infallible" popes be set aside, and let all the world know that "The landmarks (or creed) of Masonry can never be changed." Every Master Mason must swallow them whole. Now let us see what its third landmark says:

"The legend of the third degree." Yes, that's all. But what is that legend? Aye, there's the rub. Turn to Mackey's Ritualist, page 109, and read: "By its legend and all its ritual it is implied that we have been redeemed from the death of sin and the sepulcher of pollution!"

The Mason is "redeemed!" for that is implied by the legend and ritual of the third degree of Masonry! Redeemed from the death of sin! Redeemed from the sepulcher of pollution!

After that what need of Christ as the Redeemer? None whatever, if the statement be true. But if not true, then it is as gross and dangerous a falsehood as can be imagined by any Christian, or invented by any anti-Christ. How strange the delusion which binds to silence so many ministers and members of churches into apparent approval of the foul statement.

But Christian, if you have been "snared" there is good news for you. Your Lord's commands are to abandon such works of darkness. Their obligations are an offence to him. Come out and be separate and he will richly bless you.

HOMO.

AROUND THE HORIZON.

—There are sixty thousand ministers in the United States, one-third of whom are out of business. There are 180,000 saloons in the United States, and all their proprietors are busy. To sustain the former costs say $30,000,000. To the latter are paid out yearly, $700,000,000, or twenty-three times as much as is annually paid to the ministers. Is this a good showing for a professed Christian nation? Don't it look as though we are in need of missionaries?—The Trumpet.

—The consumption of tobacco is, in the aggregate, at present something fearful to contemplate. The quantity consumed annually in Great Britain is estimated at 20,000,000 pounds; in France 44,000,000 pounds; in Austria 81,000,00 pounds; in Russia 25,000,000 pounds. It is said that one firm in this city paid for a single month a revenue tax to the Government on its tobacco sales of $123,000 and that its average monthly internal revenue tobacco tax is over $100,000. It is also said that the shipments of snuff by this house to one town in North Carolina amount to 100 barrels a month, or 1,200 barrels a year; and that is but a tithe of the snuff sold by one firm. The tax upon consumers, pecuniarily, for all this tobacco is enormous; the tax upon physical health is yet more serious; and as a stimulant to drinking and drunkenness it has become a national and well-nigh world-wide scourge, from the wasteful and destructive effects of which all good men and women should labor and pray earnestly for speedy deliverance.—Nat. Tem, Advocate.

—It is stated that the war with the Zulus will throw the missionaray cause amongst them back ten years. The hatred engendered among them by it towards Christians will not be easily removed. Generations will pass before it will be entirely effaced. When will the nations learn war no more is a problem among God's people yet as it was in the early age of the church. Civilization, science, and intellectual advancement will never efface the terrible evil without the powerful influence of the undefiled religion of Christ. The destruction of life and property, added to the sorrows and broken hearts and homes consequent to it, cry for peace, and Christians still live in hope.—Gospel Preacher.

—The Telescope notices two sad deaths at Dayton. One was of Mr. Rouser, a reformed drinker, and late foreman of the job office in the U.

B. Publishing House. He returned to his drinking habits and was drowned lately in the Miami river.

"The other case of sad death was that of a lawyer of this city, who some days ago left his family and home, and eluded all attempts at finding him. He was searched for in neighboring towns and was sought in distant places; but nothing could be learned of his whereabouts. At last he was found in the last agonies of suicidal death at a hotel in Madison, Wis. He left on the stand of his room a letter addressed to the Worshipful Master of the Masonic lodge of that city, stating that he was in good standing in a Dayton lodge, and asking that the Master of the latter be informed, and intrusted with the remains. In due time the deceased was brought back to this city and disposed of in due Masonic form. The causes of his sad course are not definitely known, except that he had a little business trouble, and had a taint of insanity in his blood. It is a question as to how much he was nerved for the rash deed by the false notions of future immortality held by the fraternity of which he was a member. He died in that faith, and do doubt expected to enter the Grand Lodge above."

—The liberty of the age is manifesting itself in attitudes and performances that argue no moral stimulus to society, nor religious power to the church. In the face of precedent, necessity and duty, the world to-day carries a high head of independence, alike regardless of the prayers of men and the commands of God. The Sabbath, once so tenaciously held to holy purposes, is rapidly losing its sacred associations. and in being utilized as a day for anything and everything, is failing to exert those peculiar and salutary influences that make pure morality and holy experience. As a direct result, domestic, sanitary, and spiritual prosperity is waning, and ere long, saint nor sinner will have a day of rest for either soul or body. Upon a recent Sabbath, following the dedicatory services of the new Roman Catholic Cathedral, in this city, 200 prelates, priests, and laymen, sat down to "eat, drink and be merry." Feasting superseded worship, uproarious laughter took the place of prayer, the clatter of conviviality was substituted for hymns of praise, and numerous toasts, in silence and with cheers, were drunk to the virtues of the living and the memories of the dead. This in a Christi an land, on the Christian Sabbath, in honor of a vaunted Christian temple, by men who boast superior Christian attainments, and who affirm apostolic succession. The offence to propriety and religious institutions is all the more grievous, since it comes from those who profess themselves the lovers of Christ and his church. The time has evidently come when pulpit, press and individual remonstrance should speak out clearly and emphatically in defence of the sacredness of Jehovah's Sabbath.—Baptist Weekly.

Reform News.

Springville Lodge, No. 139, Opens.

Clarence, Iowa.

On the evenings of July 1st and 2d Springville Lodge No. 139 was opened by Sam'l Starry on the first and second degrees for labor, at Springville, Iowa. Bro. Starry has recently demitted from Springville Lodge No. 139 A. F. and A. M., and by the expositions he has given has proven himself a bright Mason. The craft were quite non-plussed to see one of their own number ruthlessly expose their gods to the gaze of the vulgar and profane. A large audience witnessed the expositions, who knowing Bro. Starry, by his previous residence among them, to be a man of truth and respectability, received them as they are—Masonry; one member of the craft admitting they were true. Elder D. P. Rathbun was present. He considered the "work" excellent, and thinks Bro. Starry will without a doubt prove a success in the field.

—Bro. I. R. B. Arnold has returned to Sycamore after an extended lecturing trip and will rest till September. He visited Wheaton last Friday evening to assist Prof. Fischer in illustrating with the calcium light a lecture on the Fixed Stars before the Normal Institute.

Correspondence.

From a Brave Woman.

Morrison, Ill., July 18, '79.

Editor Cynosure:—I am still a reader of your excellent paper, and always interested in the "Our Mail" department. I write now for the benefit of Mrs. M. Tapley. I think with her that what the world needs is more light and a true understanding of the nature and designs of secret orders. How true it is that many good Christian people stand aloof from the reform movement, because they don't know what is best to do, some are ignorant on the question and don't want to be enlightened, lest they know and utter their sentiments and thus bring trouble upon themselves. Want of moral courage is one great hindrance to success in this great work. I have been an earnest Christian fifty-two years, but never knew anything of the evils of secretism until about ten years ago, when Professor Finney's wonderful book was put into my hands. That opened my eyes. Then I read Bernard's Light on Masonry, and Richardson; then Morgan's expose; then the Cynosure and Ronayne's expose; then the Master's Carpet, all of which I have circulated widely, for I owe my strong Anti-masonic principles to their teachings.

I adhere to these principles because I am fully convinced that secretism conflicts with the best interests of this mighty nation, and is blight and mildew in the churches, a hindrance to the onward march of Christ's kingdom in the world, a system of iniquity, which must be overthrown before the ushering in of the millennial glory.

My husband and I have suffered much for our strict adherence to reform principles, and are minus thousands of dollars in consequence. We stand where we do to-day for Christ's sake, and count it all joy to suffer for him, having the full assurance that by and by we shall reign with him.

I have witnessed for once the iniatory process into the first and third sublime degree, by Elder Rathbun, and was more disgusted than words can express. How ministers and Christian men can allow themselves to go through such tomfoolery, silly nonsense and blasphemous rites and ceremonies, and still follow their calling I cannot understand. God, for this, will certainly bring them into judgment and recompense accordingly. I leave them with him.

I have for many years felt a deep interest in the African race, have pitied them in slavery and rejoiced in their emancipation; but oh how scattered and peeled they yet are! I am more and more anxious for their complete deliverance from cruel tyranny, their evangelization and redemption to Christ. I want them to enjoy their equal, God given-privileges with the whites. For they are as precious in his sight.

Yours for victory,

Ann Paley.

Masonic Funerals and Mobs.

Derby, Conn.

Editor Cynosure:—I would like to give you a little of my experience. The devil has had a revival in this place for the last few months in the shape of masked balls from the parlor to the Odd-fellows, Freemasons, etc.; and to cap the climax one by a certain notorious rumseller, composed of characters from two notorious dens, one on the east and one on the west side of the Housatonic river. And what have the churches been doing all the winter past to counteract these influences? Nothing out of the ordinary way. How could they when so many of the members have been engaged in Odd-fellow and Masonic masked balls? Whither are we drifting, when such Christless institutions are controlling the church and its ministers? The minister I am sitting under has taken the higher degrees in Masonry and has preached a sermon for the order on mysteries—"mysteries all around it." I think I understood it if Masons did not. I have talked plainly to him and given him Cynosures and appropriate tracts to read.

Three or four weeks ago a notoriously wicked rumseller died, after sending his victims to the river and under the cars to die a drunkard's death. He died by his own hand in delirium tremens. He was a brother Mason. It was decided that the brotherhood out turn in procession to bury him. In the forenoon of that day I posted a notice on the sign post asking all the brethren of the white-apron fraternity to meet at the lodge room to attend the funeral "per order." Soon after another notice was appended:

"Notice.—The seducers of virtue are requested to meet at any time at the residence of Isaac J. Gilbert.

P. S. The traducers of the dead are also invited per order."

In the afternoon I went to the funeral and was standing on the sidewalk when one of the fraternity accosted me, saying I had no business there, and to clear out. I told him I supposed I was at liberty to be there, and I remained till the procession formed and then followed on to the grave and heard the mock ceremony, but did not hear the words "transported to the Grand Lodge above," as formerly. And it is no wonder! They have heard enough of sending drunkards and rumsellers to the Grand Lodge above and passing resolutions, "Whereas it hath pleased," etc. I told them I thought I had been the means of leaving off that wicked blasphemy. The procession numbered thirty all told. There were five or six that would be called respectable, including the lodge master.

The seducers of virtue did meet at my house that night in the order of a mob, and at 12 o'clock threw a volley of stones through my windows breaking out eight large panes of glass and scattering it over the carpet. The concussion aroused all in the house and the near neighbors.

Our paper here sided with the mob and the whole community blamed me for putting up the notice and attending the funeral. I told them I was ready to stand by the notice, and it was my practice to attend funerals, and never heard any objections before Masons told me I had no business there. The fact was the Masons were so ashamed of the brotherhood they did not want to expose them.

I have stood in this community alone a number of times, and sometimes when they were ready to mob me; but future events have demonstrated every time I was right. When the cloud was heavy on me I fully believe that through the providence of God a Baptist minister from Meriden, Connecticut, came to our church on Sunday morning and preached a sermon such as we have seldom heard before; text, "But let a man examine himself." He spoke of Luther and the leaders in reforms, and then such a scathing he gave the rumsellers as but few could give. It was such a vindication of my course that but a few in the church did not feel it. I told the minister after church that I believed the Lord had sent him here as it was just what we needed. I told the people after I went out of the church that I never was more fully vindicated and God helping me I never would fear to do my duty again.

In the evening at prayer meeting I spoke of the wickedness of Masonry and that not long since in that desk the religion of Christ had been compared to Freemasonry; that I believed a curse rested on the church for such doctrine and because members of the church were affiliating with the wickedest men in the land and saying, "Alas, my brother." Is that coming out from the world?

If our Methodist bishops and so large a number of our Methodist ministers unite with the order to become decoy ducks for wicked men to swear by and call them good Masons, and also so many of our members, Masonry will overrun the church. Many of them say now, It is better than the church. What a terrible responsibility ministers will have in a coming day. Masons have no arguments but mum and mob. ISAAC J. GILBERT.

AN EXPERIENCE WITH LODGES AND CHURCHES.

WINONA, Iowa.

When I came to this State I brought with me a letter from the M. E. church in Virginia to use in connecting myself with any church I made choice of. I concluded to join the M. E. church at Asbury chapel about two and a half miles north and west of me. But, learning that there was disunion among their members on the subject of Freemasonry, concluded not to join them then, but staid out of all churches. I had a name to live but was dead spiritually. At that time I was a Freemason, and had been a Good Templar; afterwards I joined the Odd-fellows, and this was my crowning act in secretism. At this time I was regarded by the majority of the different professing Christians, especially by Bro. Coulter, a member of Asbury, as a "bully good fellow," as he styled it.

About three years ago I was deeply convicted of my lost and undone condition. God showed me that I must give up my idols, the lodge, whisky and tobacco, and to come out from the world and be separate before ever I could be newly born. At this time I was in the mercantile business, and I knew if I obeyed God that loss was inevitable in my business. But finally, after many severe and trying seasons I concluded to take up the cross. The moment I made the sacrifice and covenanted with God to devote the remainder of my life to his service I received the witness of my acceptance, and realized that I was now a child of God. I was absent from home at the time and on returning I made known what the Lord had done for me, coming out in a Methodist class meeting and bearing a testimony for the grace I had received, and against secretism as detrimental to progress in the divine light.

Since that time I have had many severe and trying seasons with the enemy, many of them my former friends and brethren in the lodge. But God's grace has sustained me. Praise his holy name! And now to show you how professors will do, to show you what the spirit of Masonry will do against all those who renounce its evils, I will mention the case of this brother Coulter, a member of Asbury chapel and a Mason.

When I was a Mason, a Good Templar and an Odd-fellow; when I had a name to live and was dead, then he said I was a "bully good fellow." After I became redeemed from the world and all its evils, and bore a testimony against all those evils, and for this grace of God in the soul, then this so-called brother and professor of religion tried to slander my character by circulating the report that the letter I brought with me from Virginia was a forged letter to join the M. E. church. He thought I had no means to justify myself, as he knew the letter I had brought out here years ago was out of my possession. But the minister who had received me into the church in Virginia and baptized me, sent me a certificate of my standing in the M. E. church at the time of which I was class-leader. Taking the letter and certificate up to the Chapel, I confronted this professor of religion and Mason and handed it to one of their members to read in his hearing. He skulked out of the house and returned to his home, where I hope the good Lord will bring him to repentance and help him to see what a miserable creature he is without salvation.

If ever there was a time when God calls men and women to stand by his truth it is now, and we ought to keep ourselves pure from the sins of this age. I do not think we ought to support any so-called minister of the Gospel who will not bear a testimony against those hidden things. I do not think we ought to patronize any county paper whose editor is bound by their cut-throat oaths; and I do not think we ought to support any man for any public office who is bound by those hellish oaths. The final battle with this evil (as it was with slavery) will be at the ballot box. Then, friends of reform, let us be united in this great work! The wicked are united to a man—why are not we? We must be if we would conquer. Then let us covenant with God that we will not encourage any paper which is edited by a secret order man; that we will not support any so-called minister who has crawled into those secret lodges (for a new birth); that we will not support any man who runs for any office who belongs to those secret clans. But that we will use a part of our time, money and talent to show to the world what secretism is doing towards destroying this government and sapping the spiritual life out of the different religious organizations and separating men from their families, while they are dishonoring God in their midnight assemblies.

I remain yours in Jesus,

JOHN W. HOUGH.

OUR MAIL.

Brother Gilbert of Derby, Connecticut, writes:

"There is no paper I read with more interest than the Cynosure. It cannot help but do good."

E. B. Cunningham of Mulberry Grove, Bond county, Illinois, writes:

"I have tried hard for three or four months past to get subscribers for your paper, but have made a signal failure. I have circulated tracts and books for some time. There seems to be a little light now in the East. I have talked to ministers who have left the lodge, but not one word can I get out of them in public. I spoke to one of the brethren who profess holiness; he told me we must just let the Lord put down the lodge. We need light on Masonry here more than anything else. If you can send us a good lecturer cheap, please send him on. I know of only two who will pay anything. No part of the State of Illinois needs work more than this."

Friend Cunningham must try to attend the State convention at Westfield, Clark county, next October and get a speaker to go home with him. Perhaps Rev. D. S. Faris of Sparta, Illinois, can help in Bond county.

A. G. Hull of Granville, Iowa, writes that the expositions at New Sharon, which he attended with the greatest interest, first brought him into the work. He says:

"I soon thereafter had an opportunity, and did subscribe for the Cynosure. I liked it splendid at first and think it improves rapidly. I expect to be a life subscriber and will do what I can to extend the circulation. Mr. Gough of Pella, Iowa, a renouncing Mason, was present at the exposition at New Sharon and helped to work the degrees. After the three degrees were worked Mr. Gough stated publicly that the degrees were given as he received them in the lodge, and referred any or all who doubted his veracity to write to any one at Agency City, Iowa, where he lived thirty years. He is a man of noble appearance. You will please send supplements and blanks for subscriptions and I will do what I can for you and the cause."

Dr. H. Alford of Goshen, Indiana, a veteran of eighty years, writes:

"Elder Brenneman, editor of the Gospel Banner, gives me your paper. I am doing all I can for the cause; the best men in Goshen I persuade to read your valuable paper. I know many substantial men for our cause heart and hand. When Freemasonry, the cross the ark and anchor leave the Baptist church I will go in and not before. If you have any tracts to circulate, or any use for me 'here am I.' Elder Bartholomew who lived five or six miles out on a farm and preached was a Freemason. He turned against it and was hooted out of the place, I am told. He is a man of talent and might be of help to you. I will try to get some subscribers for you and will try and be one of them. Elder Brenneman is sound and a good man, but he has to be careful; he does all he dare do. The serpent is coiled always ready to strike its fatal blow. Can't you send some wise man down to reconoitre and see how the land lays? The Hawkses, the Hesses, and many more are on the Lord's side for you."

Wm. B. Poplin, Somonauk, Ill., writes:

"I live in a hard place. It is hard to tell what we will come to, as we have lodges all around, though not many lodgemen in the churches. We have seven churches here. None of the ministers will say anything against the lodge. If they are spoken to about it they answer that they do not want to meddle with other people's business."

LESSON XXXII.—August 10, 1879.—THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.

SCRIPTURE.—Gal. 5: 22-26; 6: 1-9.

22 But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness,
23 goodness, faith, | Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. |
24 And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and
25 lusts. | If we live in the Spirit, let us
26 also walk in the Spirit. | Let us not be desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAPTER VI. 1 Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thy-
2 self lest thou also be tempted. | Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. | For if a man
3 think himself to be something when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself. |
4 But let every man prove his own work, and then he shall have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another. |
5 For every man shall bear his own burden.
6 Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth
7 in all good things. | Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. |
8 For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the
9 Spirit reap life everlasting. | And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6: 7.

INTRODUCTORY.

The Apostle has shown that the old life in the flesh is opposed to the new life in the Spirit. The flesh had proved its depravity by a long catalogue of sins, which shut out from the kingdom of God. On the other hand, the Spirit develops all Christian graces.

What do you learn from this lesson as to—

1. The way to lead a truly faithful life?
2. The Christian's duty to the weak and erring?
3. The commonness and the danger of spiritual pride?
4. The duty to support ministers of the Gospel?
5. The enduring influence of all actions?

SUGGESTIONS.

Galatia was a province of Asia Minor. "It derived its name from the Gallic tribes, who, about 280 B. C., made an irruption into Macedonia and Thrace. It became a Roman province B. C. 25. It was the Gaul of the East, and the epistle might be called the letter to the Gauls, as the Greek historians speak of the inhabitants of ancient France as 'Galations.'" The Galatian churches were founded by the Apostle during his second missionary journey, A. D. 51. when he was detained among them by sickness (chapter 4: 13). He visited them again during his third missionary tour, but not a name of a person or a place remains to us. All we know is gleaned from the epistle itself.

THE LETTER TO THE GALATIANS. The difficulties among the Galatian churches were occasioned by Judaizing teachers, who followed the Apostle, and declared that circumcision was necessary, that one must become a Jew in order to become a Christian (chapters 5: 2; 6: 12). They spoke deridingly of the Apostle, and made light of his authority (chapter 1: 1, 11). By means of this false teaching some were led astray, and the growing evil led Paul, through the Holy Spirit, to write and send this letter to correct the evil.

It has been called "the Gospel banner of freedom," and Luther is said to have bestowed more time and care on the exposition of this book than any other of the New Testament; and to this epistle, and that to the Romans, are traced the ideas and energies of the Reformation.

In this letter we have law and grace contrasted, and we are taught that "the promises" were before "the law," and Christ came after to fulfil the promise. He redeemed us from the curse of the law, not by setting the law aside, but by fulfilling it. "He was made a curse for us." Our freedom, therefore, is, that we are dead, dead to the law because Christ our substitute died for us. Then it may be asked, why was the law? It is a looking-glass, in which we may see our uncleanness and go to the fountain and wash. The law was our schoolmaster until Christ came; now we (who believe in him, we who have died to sin and law) are going to school to Christ, and are learning from him.

But if that is true, then we certainly should live a different life from our former one. If we have died to sin we ought not to live any longer therein (Rom. 6: 1-12), and if we have a new life and are learning from Christ, we should bring forth the fruits of the Spirit. This is the lesson of chapters 4, 5. If we are not slaves of sin (under bondage) we cannot be compelled to serve sin, and if we do so, it must be because we consent to it; and if we are heirs of God, if we are Christ's freemen, if we have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in us, how reasonable that God should demand that we put off the old clothes and fashions of sin, that we forsake the works of the flesh, and that we put on the heavenly apparel, and wear the white robe so that it can be seen and walk in the Spirit and bring forth his fruits. Therefore, the contrast is also between "the flesh and the spirit," the old and the new.

OUR NEW ENGLAND CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WORCESTER INSTITUTE OF INDUSTRIAL SCIENCE.

The senior editor of the Cynosure will perhaps remember that some fourteen years ago, when the late Hon. Ichabod Washburn was contemplating the liberal endowment of the Technical Institute in this city, with a Machine Shop and a fund for its support, the proposed letter of gift (since published) was submitted to him for consideration and suggestion. In it was a clause requiring that the Superintendent of the shop should be a man of Christian character, loyal to the Lord Jesus Christ. And this was the prefatory language of the sealed instrument of conveyance, whereby Mr. Washburn's estate was holden for the completion of his benevolence should he be removed by death before its consummation:

"I have long been satisfied that a course of instruction might be adopted in the education of apprentices to mechanical employments, whereby moral and intellectual training might be united with the processes by which the arts of mechanism, as well as skill in the use and adaptation of tools and machinery are taught, so as to elevate our mechanics in the scale of intelligence, and add to their personal independence and happiness, while it renders them better and more useful citizens, and so more like our Divine Master, whose youth combined the conversations of the learned with the duties of a mechanic's son; and whose ideas and teachings now underlie the civilization of the world. It has seemed to me that the establishment of an Industrial Institute, such as it is proposed to found in Worcester, offers a favorable opportunity for attempting to accomplish this purpose."

The ninth class in this admirable institution (as yet the only one of its kind in the country) has just graduated with honor, the number being twenty-two. The Annual Address was by Prof. R. W. Raymond of Brooklyn, with addresses on the part of the Trustees by Charles H. Morgan, Esq.; C. O. Thompson, Principal, and Hon. Stephen Salisbury, President of the Board of Trustees. The thoughts and sentiments expressed therein deserve emphasizing as being of exceptional value and interest. The address of Prof. Raymond was very naturally on "Specialization," or the work of the Institute in building the superstructure of a special education.

His closing remarks were as follows: "The graduates of this school have a specially honorable two-fold duty. You represent, gentlemen, the result of an experiment in technical training, upon which many eyes are directed. Thus far it gives the fairest promise. It may prove to be the long-sought solution of a part of the educational problem of our times. These beautiful and convenient buildings, this ample apparatus of instruction, this corps of faithful and wise teachers, bear witness that nothing has been neglected which money and thought and skill could supply to insure success. This applauding audience surrounds you with a potent inspiration. It now remains with you to demonstrate that the system under which you have been trained has not weakened either hand or head, in the attempt to educate both, but has rendered you, as I believe it has done, competent to handle a tool with the one and a principle with the other; nay, more, that in you the skillful hand is more skillful because of the guiding judgment and the reason more sure and swift because of the practiced experience.

But, beyond this, you have to demonstrate that your technical training has not made of you monstrosities of one-sided development; that thorough knowledge of your profession is not incompatible with broad culture, intelligent and sympathetic interest in all human affairs, and high ideals of character. Man plus machinery—that is the product of the evolution of the centuries! Man greater than machinery, including it, controlling it, creating it, and learning by the use of it to be the more truly and nobly man—to lift himself in loftier stature of individual growth, to link himself in closer fellowship with the human brotherhood, to march with no lagging step in the great procession to successive heights of victory, yonder and yonder—and yonder!"

The address on the part of the trustees wisely counselled the graduates that by good care and proper exercise they establish and maintain good health; and also that they have the courage to be called "one-sided" in the main pursuit, saying as one of old, "This one thing I do." They were charged not to scatter but to concentrate all their forces in a narrow groove. Emerson tells us difficulties exist to be surmounted, and the great heart will no more complain of obstructions than the powder within the iron walls of a gun which hinders the shot from scattering and gives it irresistible force in one direction. Economy was counselled as the sure road to success. Economy as defined by one of America's most successful teachers, the art of providing well at the least expense. Economize in the use of all the forces and materials with which you have to do. One pound of good coal when best harnessed to its work by the science and skill of the modern engineer can perform more work than the strongest young man before me can execute in five hours. But it has more work still in it when we learn better how to economize. A few years ago with wooden steamships and old-fashioned machinery it took twenty-two tons of coal to carry eight tons of cargo across the Atlantic, but economy has reversed the figures by producing better steamships and machinery, and today eight tons of coal will transport twenty-two tons of cargo. If "Technical Education" means "a training to bring forth," "to produce," let the future find that you have added a mechanism or devised a process that shall give the world cheaper bread or clothing, cheaper shelter, or cheaper locomotion, or in some way you have mitigated the burdens of industry. Then you, too, may honestly claim to be following the mechanic and peerless man of Nazareth, whom the conceited Pharisee of cultured Jerusalem held in contempt.

The Principal of the institution, C. O. Thompson, in discharging his last official duty to the graduating class, urged them in view of what the history of business men the last ten years has recorded in letters of fire, to exercise a wise and salutary self-watchfulness and fear. It is always time for a man to stop and think when he ceases to discern the inaccessible heights of possible knowledge and good, and finds himself growing satisfied with any present attainment; when he finds himself siding with noisy and boastful people; whenever, for one instant, he forgets George Herbert's mighty words:

Man is no star, but a quick coal of mortal fire;
Who blows it not, nor doth control a faint desire,
Lets his own ashes choke his soul.
Life is a business, not good cheer,
Ever in wars.

Young gentlemen, I have urged this reverential fear as a prime virtue, because presumption is the great sin of these times, and for this I know no other cure. But, filled with this fear, you have nothing to be afraid of.

A familiar incident in the campaigns of Napoleon perfectly illustrates my meaning. Observing a young captain of infantry turn suddenly pale when an attack was ordered, "There," said the emperor, "is a brave man. He comprehends his peril and does not flinch."

Lieut. Gov. Long, on the part of the State of Massachusetts, being gracefully introduced by President Salisbury, congratulated the graduates that they were among the first to secure here an equipment for practical and business life better than a college diploma. He reminded them that the commonwealth, like England before the battle of Trafalgar, expected every man of them to do his duty.

The number of graduates of this institution to the present time is 186, most of whom now hold remunerative situations as civil engineers, chemists, teachers, superintendents and engineers of manufacturing establishments. It is the opinion of the managers of the Institute, and of all who have watched its operation hitherto, that the connection of academic culture and the practical application of science is advantageous to both, in a school where these objects are started together and carried on with harmony and equal prominence. The academy inspires its intelligence into the work of the shop; and the shop, with eyes open to the improvement of productive industries, prevents the monastic dreams and shortness of vision that sometimes paralyze the profound learning of a college.

The Shuey Discussion Closed.

The last Telescope gives what Rev. Mr. Shuey intimates is to be his last reply to Rev. Mr. Floyd. In closing he is somewhat bitter on myself; thinks I have "crowded my editorials with misrepresentations bordering on personal abuse." Yet that I "came down and treated him like a brother," etc.

Now I wish to say that I have never intentionally treated Mr. Shuey otherwise than as a brother; but as a brother whose eye, not being "single," and who vainly endeavoring to reconcile moral opposites, to satisfy and appease the god of the secret orders in this country by letting the "minor" orders into the Brethren church, was endangering the reform, the church of the United Brethren, and the whole cause of Christ. His plan of making peace between his church and Freemasonry by taking the "minor" orders into fellowship, is as utterly irrational as the hope of pacifying the mother bear by taking in her cubs and excluding herself.

If Mr. Shuey has not informed himself, by a careful examination of their origin, that Good Templarism and the grange are cubs of Masonry, he has been led into the issue of his semi-clandestine circular and the discussion following with Bro. Floyd and others, in an ignorance of his theme wholly unworthy a gentleman of his intelligence. Andrew Johnson, who was kept sober long enough to be raised to the 21st degree in Masonry, furnished Kelly, Grosh and others the money to start the grange; which was first contrived to soothe, satisfy, unite and amuse the ex-slaveholders to whom Johnson went over after he became President by Booth's assassination of Lincoln. Good Templarism was born previously of the same parentage, viz., Masonry and Odd-fellowship. The very terms "lodge," and "Templarism" have come to us from popery and the Crusades, through French Masonry, as any one may learn in fifteen minutes reading by the index of Rebold's history of Freemasonry in Europe, a book which Mr. Shuey could easily obtain in Cincinnati, where I got mine, and if he has come forward, from his publishing agent's desk, to change and alter the practice of his church by taking into it secret orders of whose history and nature he is substantially ignorant; if he is, as I have always regarded him, a brother in Christ, he may live to bless the brethren who have resisted him in limine in his dreadful undertaking. The very sensible editorial by Prof. Tobey in last week's Telescope on the difference between secrecy and secret orders, shows the inadequacy and poverty of Mr. Shuey's ground proposition, viz., that secrecy in a society should not necessarily exclude the members of that society from the church. The thing which the church is doing is not to filter out secrecy but to get rid of a secret brotherhood and order, whose members are packed in layers of degrees, each upper layer being pledged or sworn to secrecy from all below, and from their uninitiated brethren and sisters in the church. And for Mr. Shuey to treat his church as if it was a mere secrecy filter is wholly unworthy of him.

Equally futile is his main doctrine that "the church must proportion punishment to crime;" for neither is his church a punishing machine. If a thief should be penitent he is not to be expelled; but if a brother should sit all day making up faces at his minister he would have to quit it or be expelled the church, though making faces is a childish offence. So joining little secret societies must stop. They not only contemn the example of Christ, who belonged to none, but they wear rags taken from the diseased carcass of the lodge, which is contagion.

Some time ago I wrote these words, which I find quoted in Bro. Shuey's last article: "I have been accustomed to consider Christ as the only lawgiver, and the Bible, the only law of the church, and to regard all church power as ministerial and declarative."

These words are cited by Mr. Shuey to justify himself in disparaging his church's law against secrecy, which law his brethren are striving to nullify, and he is seeking to change. But the doctrine that "All church power is declarative," and that no church can legislate but only declare Christ's laws against offences, this doctrine surely affords no cover or justification of Mr. Shuey's attempt to weaken his church law for the purpose of letting in the "minor" secret orders. I agree with brethren Floyd, Tobey, Davis and others that these distracting man-made "brotherhoods" are excluded by the word of God; and only differ, (if I do differ) with them in that I would have the law declarative instead of authoritative in its form merely. Brother Shuey goes for church-legislation in general, but attacks the single law against secrecy and quotes me as his cover! While, if I was in the Brethren church I would not pluck a hair from the head of that law, nor consent to alter it at the instance of Bro. Shuey and the church of which he is a trustee. That First U. B. church in Dayton, whatever its pastor may write, I do certainly know, bore hard on the now sainted Bishop Edwards on account of his reform sentiments.

Here let us hope this painful matter may end by the withdrawal of Bro. Shuey's attempt to procure legislation in behalf of grangers' and Good Templars' lodges. The United Brethren fathers stood against "Freemasonry in every sense of the word," which certainly excludes grangers' and Good Templars' lodges; their constitution in degrees; their secrecy and brotherhoods beside Christ's; their secret passwords, grips and signs. For "Masonry" means the principles of Masonry and the rites of Masonry wherever found.

A New and Interesting Book.

Rufus Blanchard, Esq., known to the public for many years by his learned maps, has just issued a book entitled "Discoveries and Conquests of the Northwest." It is a pleasant story, agreeably told. The retail price is but fifty cents, and no parent who has a family of children in danger of being beguiled by the weak and trashy novels of the day, should fail to supply them with Mr. Blanchard's book. It has the charm of romance, with the solid merit of truth.

One hundred years before England sent Braddock to take Fort Du Quesne, French Jesuits had planned a string of forts through the heart of North America, from the mouth of the St. Lawrence to the mouth of the Mississippi, and this book gives a concise story of the execution of that plan, whose object was no less than to subject the conscience of this mighty continent to the Pope of Rome; yielding civilization to a system which has cursed the soil wherever it has set down its foot.

This mighty scheme to Mexicanize this continent was defeated by the providence of God, and the agency of English-American ideas and men. Quebec, Montreal, Ticonderoga, Crown Point, Detroit, Sandusky, Machilimacinac, St. Joseph, Green Bay, Kaskaskia, Vincennes, Miami, St. Louis, and so down to New Orleans—these were but part of the strongholds which the Jesuit priests, Marquette, Joliet, La Salle, Tonty, Hennepin and a host of others, had built and filled with French muskets, while they converted many and astonished all the natives by prayers said in Latin, and masses said by priests, in honor of "the Conception" and other feasts, who did not know the meaning of the word "mass."

To see this mighty cordon of intellectual darkness and despotism give way and the forts change masters, so that France has now not a foot of jurisdiction from Quebec to New Orleans, is what one gets by reading this book, and surely those who live along the line where these stupendous changes occurred, will read it.

—Elder Rathbun was last week opening the lodge to the public in Fayette, Iowa. All will be glad to read in Bro. Hall's letter of the success of a new worker.

President Hayes and the Cynosure.

Hon. Z. Eastman of Maywood, Illinois, whose connection with the anti-slavery reform of twenty years ago is well known, is visiting some of the men and women whose labors and courage and high faith have won for them enduring names among the reformers of mankind. He has visited Lucretia Mott, the noble Quakeress, and others at the East, among them Hon. Austin Burchard of Fayetteville, Vt., of whom in a long letter to the Inter-ocean of this city he writes thus:

At the time of the Anti-masonic political excitement he was in the prime of active life, and became a pronounced politician. Previously he had been a Republican of the John Quincy Adams school. When that venerable statesman (as did William H. Seward and William Wirt,) uttered pronounced views against secret societies as antagonistic to our republican institutions, it was gratifying to him, as an active political citizen. He was heartily engaged in this theory of political reform, as many other citizens were, some years later, as anti-slavery men, and, like them, met with ridicule and denunciation. The antis are a class of reformers that do not at first meet with popular favor. He was among the young and active politicians that carried the State on the Anti-masonic ticket electing the Governor and all the State officers, and the Legislature, which they held for some years. As a reform they saw their work completed in the State, as anti-slavery men saw theirs completed in the nation under Lincoln's proclamation, for Masonry was broken up, the lodges surrendering their charters, yielded to State law against extra-judicial oaths, which, for the time being, killed the institution in the State. But it revived again with its revival in the nation, the intriguing Democratic party aiding in the restoration for its own advancement, as it now seeks for ascendency by favoring the restoration of Southern rule. During this period popularity rested upon him as a public man who had succeeded in carrying the cause. He was elected a member of the State Council, a department of the government of great importance, being the cabinet of the executive. To this office he was re-elected as long as the Anti-masons held power. On the restoration of the Whig party he was again elected to the same office. After the adoption of a new constitution, and the old council board abolished, he was elected to the State Senate. He was an early anti-slavery man, a conscience Whig, co-operating with William Slade, Jacob Collamer, and Hiland Hall, and was with the Republican party as soon as it was organized in the State, and at once became the dominant party. But at this time Mr. Birchard had retired from business and active political life through old age. He never gave up his anti-secret society principles, but became a supporter of our neighbor, President Blanchard, in his modern warfare in this cause, and a subscriber to the Cynosure till, as he supposed, it opposed the election of President Hayes, who was never a member of any secret society, a thorough temperance man, and an abolitionist: such a man as ought to have been acceptable to a cynosure of the most brilliant order.

Mr. Eastman has our thanks for calling attention to the grand record of Mr. Burchard. In Vermont, he is best known as Uncle Austin Burchard, his reform principles, maintained with singular integrity through a long public life, are not unappreciated. His co-operation with the present movement against the lodge was welcomed and held in deserved estimation before the election of 1876 and we are not without hope that it may soon again be given.

The Cynosure has had scarcely a word of blame for Mr. Hayes' political course, much as that has been condemned by the party press. It has held that the President was honest in his purposes toward the South, and had his overtures been met in an honorable spirit there would exist a different temper in that region. The temperance principles of Mrs. Hayes have honored the nation before the world in their practical results in Washington. On the 10th of August, 1876, we published from a correspondent that Mr. Hayes claimed to Bro. Rownd of Summerfield, O., that he had been made an Odd-fellow while young but had left them. His campaign life, however, published him as an Odd-fellow, and from Cincinnati we learned that he claimed when there to take a lively interest in the order. More lately, Mr. Hayes, with his wife, attended an Odd-fellow celebration held in a Methodist church of Washington City, on the Lord's day, April 27, 1879, and the fact was published all over the country "for the good of order."

From these facts Mr. Burchard must know that, if his honored nephew is not a member of any secret society now, yet he has been, and has never publicly disowned his connection; and, moreover, he gives one lodge the encouragement of his presence at a Sabbath desecration in its honor. Mr. Burchard, we are sure, will also object to these things; and we sincerely hope he will use his influence with the President so effectually that our respected chief magistrate may become truly a free man in every sense, which he can not be while he pays his respects to a secret lodge, and courts its favor upon his administration.

A Neglected Work.

Elder Findley of Mansfield, Ohio, writes very sensibly to the Christian Instructor urging for a more faithful instruction of the children in the home and Sabbath-school. In his view the tendency of the United Presbyterian church is toward liberalism, "a willingness to give up our distinctive character as a church, and avoid the reproach of unpopularity, to which a faithful adherence to our principles exposes us." The same letter commends the Covenanters for their correct appreciation of this matter and the careful training of their children in the principles of that church. As a single evidence of the propriety of this admonition we have yet to learn of a Covenanter who belonged to or defended a secret order, while a U. P. professor wrote us awhile since that he feared his church was honey-combed with secret societies. We cannot expect the children to grow up and escape the enchantments of the lodge if parents are silent on the subject and they hear nothing from the pulpit or in the Sabbath school which shall inform their quick and expanding minds of the fatal forces of evil, silently but powerfully working to destroy the sole foundation for true religious faith or their freedom as citizens. The Cynosure has not remembered the children as they deserve, and we must reform in this respect. We shall endeavor to give a Sabbath school lesson once every quarter which will enable faithful teachers to make plain the dangers of idolatry as practiced by the lodges and impress the much-needed lessons of the Word of God upon this subject. The first one will be given for the last Sabbath in September. We shall make an effort also to have the principles of our reform illustrated in the children's department of the Cynosure in an attractive manner suited to the intelligence of our young readers. Our little folks must be patient with us in this matter, however, and give time for the preparation of such articles as are worthy the readers and the great truths we maintain.

John Vaupell, Holland, Mich.
Jonas Brown, E. Swanton, Vt.
C. W. Zorn, Plymouth, Ind.
Peter Van Sickles, Lena, Ill.
Mr. Mitchell, Savanna, Ill.
Thos. K. Doty, Cleveland, Ohio.
Rev. Lester Monroe, Olive, Mich.
Rev. Mr. Baucher, Barrington, N. H.

Rev. B. W. Coe, Ft. Atkinson, Iowa.

Our last report was made three months ago when the list had reached 252. The eleven names given above make a total reported of 263. This is a list which every sincere and godly man and woman wishes to see enlarged until we should be able to fill a column each week. Let there be more work with prayer to this end. Pray also for those brethren whose names are published to all the world as willing to "stand up for Jesus," that their faith and courage fail not, but their number may be increased a thousand fold.

—The tract committee of the National Christian Association have just prepared tract No. 6, especially for distribution among the colored people of the South. It was prepared by Bro. Eli Tapley of Columbus, Miss., in very simple terms so as to be easily understood by thousands who have had little or no opportunity for instruction.

—Another good work is just begun for the freedmen. A brother recognizing the urgency of informing their preachers on the principles of our reform has started a fund for the gratuitous circulation of the Cynosure among them. From the information received from the South many colored men it seems are being wheedled into the lodges of various names. There should be a strong counteracting influence, instructing them in regard to the nature and tendencies of secret orders. Additions to this fund are requested from all who are interested in the elevation of the ex-slave, and his delivery from a bondage as dark and degrading as that from which God has once delivered him.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman, after a short stay in Maine returned to Massachusetts on the 17th inst. and not finding the friends in readiness to take hold of the lecture work at present returned home on Tuesday last. He reports the cause in Vermont in a much more hopeful condition than he had been led to expect—more hopeful, indeed, than in any other of the New England States.

—A Methodist Episcopal minister, who has taken the three degrees of Masonry but now abhors it, was awhile since, talking with a member of the same church who was a Mason and supposed the minister faithful to the wicked oaths of the lodge. He was asked what he thought of the order. The adhering Mason was astounded to hear the reply: "I hate it. It is a humbug. Dedicated to the holy Saints John!—dedicated to the devil! Brother, you and I have been made fools of;" and other words of like purport. Rallying, the Methodist brother and Mason said, with dark and significant emphasis, "Wherever you go as a minister I will see that this thing follows you."

—The Romish church has a Masonic proselyting organization, with a false name, whatever may be its character. Thus we read that during the early part of July the "Supreme Lodge of the Catholic Knights of America" held their annual session at Indianapolis. A Romish priest welcomed them and their "Supreme President" replied, and their "Supreme Secretary" reported an increase of 1,975 during the past year. Leo XIII. would do wisely to recognize their supreme nonsense long enough to put it under the ban. Let him by virtue of that infallibility which must discern the incongruity, put a end to the race of supreme presidents and secretaries, in the name of everything reasonable. There is no doubt, however, that men who can submit to use such a nomenclature are only fit for the tools of priests.

The Exodus.

Washington dispatches inform us of some interesting facts respecting this remarkable movement which promises to become national in importance. Last week ex-Congressmen Haralson was in that city advising with prominent Republicans on this matter. He believes the northward movement of the colored people will begin in the fall with an earnestness and wholesale sweep not now dreamed of. He says that not less than 15,000 will leave his district alone, this fall, to say nothing of other parts of the State. The same rate from the other districts will take 100,000 from Alabama alone. Mr. Haralson describes himself as not much of an exodus man; that is, he believes it is a remedy which should be used with great caution. He says, however, that his people are infatuated with the idea of going North this fall, and no earthly power can prevent them, no matter if they have to walk and beg bread, they are going, he says. It is as useless to argue with them about it as to debate with the east wind. The black man who speaks against it is called a traitor to his race, and loses influence. If they will go, Haralson does not believe they should go to Kansas, being enough there already for a timberless country. He favors southern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, where they can scatter out and get work from the whites. To-day he had a long talk with General Raum, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who lives in southern Illinois, upon this subject. General Raum thinks four or five hundred families could get work and make a living in three or four counties of southern Illinois and be welcomed by farmers, especially about potato-digging time. Haralson said that if the men could make from $8 to $12 monthly they could live on it, even though the females could not get work. General Raum thinks four or five hundred families could find work in southern Illinois and several thousand families throughout the State. He advised Haralson to go out and look over the ground himself. Haralson says there are now two committees from his district in Kansas looking for a place for 1,000 or 2,000 families to settle this fall, but he thinks they should scatter out into Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and even Wisconsin, where there is timber, rather than go to Kansas; if they can secure good treatment in Alabama he thinks it much better that they stay there. He is more disposed to discourage than to encourage the exodus.

Home Circle.

Waiting.

Learn to wait—life's hard lesson,
Conned, perchance, through blinding tears,
While the heart throbs sadly echo
To the tread of passing years.

Learn to wait—hope's slow fruition;
Faint not, though the way seems long;
There is joy in each condition,
Hearts though suffering may grow strong.

Constant sunshine, howe'er welcome,
Ne'er would ripen fruit or flower;
Giant oaks owe half their greatness
To the scathing tempest's power.

Thus the soul untouched by sorrow,
Aims not at a higher state;
Joy seeks not a brighter morrow—
Only sad hearts learn to wait.

Human strength and human greatness
Spring not from life's sunny side;
Heroes must be more than driftwood,
Floating down a waveless tide.

Sunday in New Orleans.

Sunday in New Orleans! There is none, except you shut yourself in your own closet or in church. A few weeks ago I spent a Sabbath there and was startled soon after breakfast with a cannon report in LaFayette Park. Everybody was soon in the street and presently a military band came along, followed by a cannon, an artillery company and a great crowd of people of all colors and tongues. The artillery company was off for a pic-nic. Soon after a fire company headed by a band, paraded the streets on its way to pic-nic No. 2. In a short time a colored band leading a great crowd of colored people passed the hotel. That was pic-nic No. 3. Toward noon the steam and horse cars began to fill up with the thousands going to the great horse race of the "New Louisiana Jockey Club"—the "grand event" of "the spring meeting," and the several railroads to Lake Pontchertrain had crowded trains of perspiring citizens, seeking coolness and amusement in the beer gardens on the banks of the lake.

One brass band after another came and went, and finally a crowd was drawn off to witness a contest between a base ball nine from Houston, Texas, and a New Orleans nine.

As the shadows began to lengthen, the notes from another band were borne upon the air summoning the people to the Academy of Music to hear the plays "Oxygen" and "H. M. S. Pinafore."

This disregard of the Sabbath in New Orleans is, in part, an inheritance from the old French settlers, and, in part, due to the rapidly increasing German element.

There is, of course, another picture of New Orleans on Sunday, but it is very unobtrusive and invisible to the traveler, unless sought for. There are many excellent churches doing good work, but what a field for missionaries!

In conversation with a railway conductor upon the growing carelessness in our country upon the Sabbath question, he said he thought it was largely due to the running of railway trains. Their passage accustoms people to the violation of the Sabbath, and they soon not only think lightly of it, but easily find an excuse for making Sunday journeys; that I would be surprised to know what good men would ride all day Sunday when away from home. Railway employes felt the evil. He wanted to go to church with his family, but got only one Sunday in five. He thought it wrong, and that the road would make more money by lying still one day in seven. The business would all be done just as well. The government was in part responsible in requiring mail trains to run; but for that everything could stop except trains with perishable freight. He had always noticed, he said, that Sunday-keeping roads were the most profitable, and believed "Providence had something to do with it; no use in man trying to get ahead of Providence."—Oberlin Gazette.

Japan.

Nagasaki was our last peep at Japan, and we wandered through the streets reluctant to bid them good bye. Two men with a huge drum-like tamborine beat a long tattoo, and when they stopped, a third man called out in a loud voice the name of the play at the theater, and invited the people to come. A blind man passed along blowing a shrill plaintive note upon a reed, and thus clearing the way. Some wrestlers stopped—men overflowing with fat and muscle in curious combination, and representing the most popular amusement of the country, for even the throne was once wrestled for; and, indeed, in the matter of games, foot-ball is as aristocratic and as popular as the legend running that an emperor scored well at it 1200 years ago, while foot-ball days were always announced in the government gazette.

We had not seen any tubbing of this much-bathing people in the open street, nor that promiscuous washing of their person which appears in travllers' tales. Both have no doubt occurred, but they are exceptional, and may have been as little a mark of the nation as the baths at Lukerbad characterize the Swiss. Though we have seen anois, they had not performed their favorite dance, which consists in imitating the noise of a chain passing over a pulley, the regular motions, the feet representing the motions of a man who turns the wheel of a crane and the time kept by clapping the hand. We had missed the light-hearted courtesy of Japanese towns, where no man seems ever rude to his neighbor, where common porters will salute one another with an air of perfect breeding, and where a cabman helps his weaker fellow up a stiff bit of a hill, and is repaid by a charming thank you. But shop-keepers were as busy with their small wares; the children toddled about as happily, sisters carrying brothers as big as themselves, and every one of them with a shaven head on which the hair grew in four black tufts, the forehead, the crown, and above each ear; their fathers laughed with them as they flew dragon flies like kites, tying a thread round the body of the unfortunate insect so as to let it up or down; the women walked about painted and powdered like their own dolls; peasants came in from the country thatched from head to foot in a mantle of straw against some passing shower; broad umbrellas (each stamped with the owner's name) lay on the streets to dry, and the sun streamed through their oiled paper of every shade of brown; and paper wares were vended of every kind, parasols and overcoats and carriage aprons, fans and twine and paper (and not canvas) paintings, and pocket handkerchiefs, of which as a lady uses one she throws it away, and anxious people chewed paper prayers as well in their mouths and spat them at their god.

Then we lingered about Desima, the little scrap of artificial island or "made land," covered to the water's edge with Dutch warehouses and native churches, the tiny foothold which the Dutch maintained with such magnificent patience, and surely the strangest of all trading factories or sea prisons. It was impossible not to think of what Japan had been till thirty years ago. Then it was absolutely shut off from the world, now it is represented at every European capital; then it was a capital crime for a Japanese to leave his country, now he studies in a dozen foreign colleges; then it was death to a foreigner to be seen on the public road, now he takes his seat beside a Japanese in a railway train; then their only ships were junks, pierced by a hole in the stern that was to warn them against pushing out to sea—junks that occupied months in a journey between two of their ports, now they own steamers that trade along the coast as the steamers trade along the Clyde; they have a line to China, and as we sailed up the Red Sea we met a Japanese gunboat steaming down, and there was not a foreigner on board; then the sea was their bulwark, now it is their pathway; the taxes were then collected in kind, and now in money; then Buddhist temples made the bravest show, now hundreds of them have been suppressed, their revenues diverted to the State, and their bells sold for old bronze; then there was a perfect feudal tyranny, now there is a limited monarch, a responsible cabinet, and the code Napoleon; then the Emperor was absolutely invisible, now the people are not even compelled to kneel as he passes; then there was a bitterness of caste, now even the out-caste Etas have received citizenship; then the edicts against Christianity were posted up at the street corners, now there are over a hundred missionaries, and Christian men are in the employment of the State.—Good Words.

A Just Decision.

A supreme court at Boston has lately settled a question of good manners, a subject on which that court, as now constituted, is supposed to speak with peculiar authority. A hotel clerk sued his employers, who had discharged him before the expiration of the term for which he was engaged, giving as a reason that he had injured their business by undue familiarity with the guests of the house in addressing them by their Christian names or by their surnames only, without the customary titular prefix. This was not denied, and the court said: "To address a person by his Christian name, unless the parties have been intimately connected, socially and otherwise, is uncalled-for familiarity, and therefore insulting to the party addressed. To address a party by his surname only shows a want of respect, and would imply that the party so addressed was beneath the party addressing; therefore it is discourteous, and would be considered insulting. To speak of employers by their surnames only shows a great want of respect on the part of the employe toward the employer. While it may be customary for a person to address his junior clerks or under servants by their Christian or surnames, to address others so shows a want of respect, and the party so addressed would naturally evade contact in the future with any one who had previously so addressed him. Politeness," added the court, "costs nothing; but the want of it cost the plaintiff the loss of his situation."—Exchange.

In an autobiographic speech not long since, Mr. Spurgeon gave some interesting facts about his life. Among others, he said he well remembered a little old woman, poorly dressed, coming into the vestry some years ago at a time of great straits, which not a soul in the world knew, not even a deacon of the church; and she said to him in the most strange way: "Thus saith the Lord, behold I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee." She put down £50 on the table, vanished, and I have never seen her since. He never knew her name even, and never should, perhaps, until the day of judgment. He supposed she would be in heaven now; it was some years ago, and she was very old then. Things had happened so, and his impression was that they would occur again.

Harm is done by everything which tends to vulgarize religion. Religion is the highest and most solemn concern of man. Anything like an adequate conception of God will inspire a religious assembly and popular preacher with profound awe. Everything that savors of levity or flippancy, in connection with this subject, ought to excite the deepest repugnance.

PETROLEUM PRODUCT.—Recent statistics show that there are now 10,882 wells producing oil in the State of Pennsylvania, and they pour out about 50,000 barrels of oil daily. The product this spring has been twenty-five per cent. greater than last year and about three times as great as the yield three years ago. One thousand eight hundred and eleven new wells were opened during the past year, and there appears to be no danger of exhaustion of the supply. This vast product adds immensely to the country's industries, and the tranportation of it affords large revenues to the carriers.

At the recent Yale College commencement, Yung Wing of Macao, China, who graduated with honor in the class of 1854, was present and made a speech at the alumni meeting. He was the first native Chinaman graduated in an American college, and, after serving the Chinese government at home for some years following his graduation, came back to New England as Chinese Commissioner, having in charge the education of a considerable number of Chinese youth, who were put to school in the various academies. Three of them are now at Williston Seminary, at East Hampton, Mass. One, Chun Lung, of Hien Shang, graduated in the Yale class of 1879; and Tun Yen Liang, of Kwang Tong, is a member of the present sophomore class. At the commencement exercises of the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, Kakiehi Mitsukuri, of Tokio, Japan, made one of the nine theses that were presented on that occasion, and Jeme Tien Yow, of Canton, China, received one of the prizes for excellence of the studies of freshman year. Nawokichi Matsui, of Tokio, and Owyang Keng, of Canton, are also members of the same school.—Inter-ocean.

The modern sentimentalism about Nature is a mark of disease—one more symptom of the general liver complaint. It is well enough for a mood, or a vacation, but not for a habit of life.—Lowell.

Every good and holy desire, though it may lack the form, hath, in itself, the substance and force of a prayer with God, for he regards as prayer the moanings and sighings of the heart.—Hooker.

We must not think to trust God, and then live as we list. It is not trusting, but tempting him, if we do not make conscience of our duty to him. Nor must we think to do good, and then trust to ourselves, and to our own righteousness and strength. We must trust in the Lord and do good.—Matthew Henry.

We should act with as much energy as if we expected everything for ourselves; and we should pray with as much earnestness as if we expected everything from God.

I Will Trust.

Jesus I will trust thee!
When across my soul
Like a fearful tempest
Doubts and fears shall roll.
When the tempter cometh,
Surely he will flee
When I tell him, Jesus,
I am trusting thee!

Jesus I will trust thee!
There is none beside;
In thy arms of mercy
I will ever hide.
And for my acceptance,
This my only plea—
Jesus died for sinners
Jesus died for me!

Jesus, I will trust thee!
Trust thee even now,
Trust thee when the death-dew
Gathers on my brow.
Trust thee in the sunshine,
Trust thee in the shade,
With thy precious shelter
I am not afraid!

Jesus, I will trust thee
For I cannot doubt,
"Him that cometh," surely
I will not cast out—
Thou, O Christ, hast promised
So I come to thee,
Bringing that sweet promise
As my only plea!

The News Room at Northford.

BY MRS. ANNIE A. PRESTON.

"What have you there, Walter?"

"A book Jack Amidon lent me, papa;" and the lad, with his brown, curly head resting in his hands, and his elbows with a book between them, on the center-table, went on with his reading.

"You seem very much interested. I should like to look at that book a moment, my son," said Mr. Bennet, presently, looking up again from his newspaper.

The youth, with just a shade of impatience gathering on his fair, wide brow, rather reluctantly passed the highly-illuminated covered pamphlet over to his father.

"I can take it only for one hour this evening, papa," he said anxiously after a few minutes, in which Mr. Bennet had slowly turned over the rough and badly printed leaves of the letter press, and looked critically at the execrable woodcuts. "Jack wants me to read the beginning of the continued story," went on Walter, after another moment's silence; "he said after I once began it I should lay awake nights wondering how it was coming out. It's awfully exciting, I know. Mr. Hyde the news agent lent the book to Jack, and he says if he can get a dozen subscribers he will send for them every month; and Jack says that everybody that has read the story has put his name down. We take the books at ten cents apiece each month, you know."

Walter was getting quite impatient by this time, and kept tapping his feet on the carpet and drumming on the table with his fingers until his pleasant, sweet-faced little mother begged him to be quiet.

"Ha! there is Jack now," cried Walter, peevishly, as the bell tinkled at the side door entrance, "and I have only read one of the two chapters."

"Come in, Jack, come right in," said Mr. Bennet pleasantly, going to the door and ushering in a bright-faced, well-dressed boy. "I am glad to see you, Jack. We are going to have some popcorn by and by. You must help Walter about it; boys always have a lively time popping corn, because the corn has such a lively time, I suppose. I have just been looking over this book," the gentleman said, resuming his seat at the table, "and I must admit that I am myself a good deal excited over the adventures of 'The Haunted Huntsman of the Mighty Missouri; or, the Bold Boy Avenger of the Southwest." The next time I go West I think I should like to follow the Missouri River up into Washington Territory! It must have a nice time of it getting across the Rocky Mountains!"

Walter looked in a puzzled way at his father, but said quickly, "I never knew before that the Missouri went away up through there so far." Jack laughed, and observed, "I noticed that blunder, sir, and thought it might mislead some boy. Of course the story is all made up, but it's very exciting, and the last part of the last chapter in this first book fairly makes your hair stand on end."

"There is some exciting grammar, too," said Mr. Bennet. "I was getting very much wrought up as you rang, trying to hunt up the antecedents of several pronouns. Have you been long in the habit of indulging in this kind of literature, Jack?"

"No, sir," said Jack, honestly, with an abashed air that made Mr. Bennet quite sorry that he had asked the question. "We have always had a nice magazine or two, and my mother used to have a religious paper with some very nice stories for boys and girls, so that we became very fond of reading. But this year my father said the times were so hard we must economize in some things, so he didn't renew any of our subscriptions. Sometimes he buys an evening daily for himself, and mother says we read it all to rags. My sister and I have a weekly allowance for paper, ink, and pencils, and such things, and we save all we can of it and put it together to buy reading matter. But there is never enough for the magazine we used to take, and we never see it at the news office, and mother says she never can find at the news stands in the city any weekly boys' and girls' paper that she likes. But Mr. Hyde told us about these cheap books and the boys' papers he keeps on hand where you get more reading for your money—long continued Indian stories, and stories about life in London and New York. My sisters believe them every word, but I don't, though I like to read them; and we boys lend our books and papers to each other, so I have read a good many, sir."

"How do you find so much time for reading when you are in school?"

"Well, sir, a number of us have left off our grammar and United States history this term. Mr. Hyde says they are branches one acquires by general reading better than by study. He reads a good deal, and is always pleasant and willing to tell us what are the most exciting and amusing stories."

Mr. Bennet rolled up the thin book that he held in his hand, and putting it in his pocket, said, with a comical air that made all his listeners laugh heartily, "I should like to borrow this book for an hour, Jack. I don't think it will make the least difference with you, Walter, for the space of an hour at least, whether or not that highly imaginative Haunted Horseman, astride that high-headed horse, overtakes that bewilderingly beautiful Indian maiden who is so marvellously overcoming time and space through the enchanted valley on the back of her milk-white reindeer—in Missouri. Now, my boys," he continued seriously, "there is no reading so good as history for a youthful mind craving deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice. My library is at your service. After you have finished the lives of Washington and his Generals, the history of the Revolutionary War and the War of the Rebellion—if you want something to make your 'hair stand on end' until you are quite sated with horrible scenes, you can take up my Mediæval History yonder. After you are through with that, come to me and I will set you upon a new track."

Mr. Bennet now turned to his desk, took a sheet of legal cap paper, and writing a few lines, folded it and put that in his pocket also. Then rising, he said "Go for the corn and popper, Walter, and see to it that you and John have a heaping panful of popped corn by the time I get back; and sis, she must look out for a dish of those rosy Northern Spies;" and putting on his overcoat and hat the gentleman went down to the street.

[Concluded next week.]

A Pretty Story.

A pretty story is told of two little Westfield children who went alone on a recent Sunday to church. They took a seat near the front, and after the minister had got well into the sermon, the smallest child whispered to his sister that he would like to go home. People who sat beside them heard the little girl tell him that he must not go without asking the minister's permission; so hand in hand they left their seat, and standing before the clergyman, the little chap lisped out his petition. The minister was naturally surprised, but without interrupting his discourse, nodded his assent. That did not satisfy the children, and again the little boy asked permission to go and was answered by another nod. Then the little girl, fearing that the minister had not understood her brother said, "Please sir, may brother and I go home?" The minister stopped and verbally granted the request, and with a sweet "thank you, sir," and a courtesy, the children went down the aisle together. The minister happened to be one from out of town, and he was, after the service, quite anxious to know if that pretty custom was a common one in Westfield. —Banner of Holiness.

July 13, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—At the last regular meeting of Old Tebo Baptist church, W. M. Love pastor, and moderator, the following was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, we have seen the evil effects of organized secretism upon Christ's cause, and

Whereas, we wish again in as public a manner as possible to bear testimony against this sin and encourage others in so doing. Be it

Resolved, That we ask to be enrolled as one of the Associated Churches of Christ, in opposition to secret societies and all other sins condemned by God in his Word.

On motion the clerk was directed to forward account of the action of the church to Cynosure for publication. JOHN V. BAKER, Cl'k.

FROM THE SOUTH.

COLUMBUS, Miss., July 14, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Yesterday I went to a Methodist church in Lowndes county, called Simon's Chapel. As they were already opposed to all secret orders, in a short explanation of only a few minutes I set before them the object of the Associated Churches of Christ. I remarked before the vote was taken that the preachers ought always go before in any good thing. The "Circuit Rider," the Rev. J. Murrah, immediately rose and said, "Brethren, I am opposed to secret orders," and the church followed with a vote to unite with the Associated Churches. Bro. Murrah is a good man and is laboring earnestly for the salvation of his race. He said in his sermon that the yellow fever and drought were sent on account of secret sins.

I spent some time lately riding round, partly in Mississippi and partly in Alabama, distributing tracts and talking with the people upon the subject of organized secretism. I am much encouraged by the fact that the number of those willing to be known as opposed to secret orders is rapidly increasing. The strongest opposers are those who have been members. There are, however, no more public renunciations. A good many say they will never be seen inside of a lodge again. A Master Mason said to me solemnly, "I believe that Masonry is an abominable thing that God hates." ELI TAPLEY.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. D. S. Kinney assisted at the dedication of a new church at Hague, New York, on the western shore of Lake George, July 13th. The building was all paid for and a surplus applied to the parsonage debt of $375, which was all raised. Several united with the church on the occasion.

—Editor Stratton of the American Wesleyan will assist at the dedication of a new church in Tomkins, Michigan, on the first Sabbath in August. This church is under the pastoral charge of H. A. Day, corresponding secretary of the Michigan State Association.

—Rev. J. A. Richards, of Fort Scott, Kansas, has been in very low health. On attending his quarterly meeting during the early part of this month he was so ill that he had to be carried home.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley's family at Wheaton, has been greatly afflicted but all are now recovered and he hopes to visit Missouri again soon in response to the call from the eight appointments opened by him during May.

—Rev. A. F. Dempsey has removed to Brandon, Vt., where he has been cordially welcomed by the church.

—Rev. G. M. Hardy, who felt called of God to visit the brethren in North Carolina, has been greatly blessed in his work. A State convention, prefatory to an annual conference was opened July 4th and continued over the following Sabbath with great interest. The sacramental season in the afternoon was a time of great spiritual power. Bro. Hardy writes to the Wesleyan: "When the Southerners become excited religiously, they rise right up and begin the process of hand-shaking with an astonishing display of friendship. At the sacramental board there were men who had been in the Union and Confederate armies and they acknowledged together the death and suffering of our only Savior and Redeemer. It was worth many hundred miles of travel to be in such a meeting. In the evening God was with us and the meeting has continued until last evening. Some have been revived, and the influence of the convention which was organized on our national birthday will never die. Since I came into this State two new churches have been added to this work."

FREE METHODIST.

—Brethren Baker and Arnold of the Free Methodist visited Wheaton on the 16th to officiate at the wedding of Mr. A. Hadley and Mrs. A. W. Smith. Bro. Hadley was one of the first Wesleyans on the ground in Wheaton and helped organize a class before the College was founded. That class grew into the First Church of Christ, yet worshipping in the College, though the present Wesleyan church in Wheaton separated from it some seventeen years ago. Mrs. Smith was the widow of Rev. Milton Smith a pioneer Wesleyan and reformer for abolition and anti-lodge principles.

—A petition is sent from Texas for the formation of a new conference on the 28th of August in connection with the State Holiness camp meeting.

—Bro. Matthews reports a grove meeting attended with a blessing on many souls at Hudson, Michigan, during the early part of July. Beside several Free Methodist brethren, Elders Martin and Cheeney of the Wesleyans assisted in the preaching. The Holy Spirit came down, all were of one heart, and forgot that they were called by different denominational names.

—The July camp-meetings seem to have been seasons of joy to many souls this year. In this particular direction of religious effort the Free Methodist brethren are probably in advance of all others. The appointments from June 4th to September 10th number fifty-four.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—A new church was dedicated July 6th at Smithfied, Va. Two are to be ready for the worship of God in August, one in Hanover, Pa., the other at Mill Grove, O.

—Rev. W. J. Pruner has entered upon his work as agent for the Biblical Seminary, Dayton.

—At the Walla Walla camp-meeting, Washington Territory, nineteen were received into church fellowship.

—Rev. John Fohl of Chambersburg, Pa., who was with others crowded out of the East Pennsylvania Conference last spring on account of his reform principles, writes that "by the grace of God we stand and shall stand unmoved, and we are all the time gaining friends." Let us thank God for his grace to brethren Fohl, Bishop and others in the Chambersburg church. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."

LUTHERAN.

—The body of T. C. Kidd, the Dayton merchant who committed suicide at Madison, Wis., having being taken in charge by the Masons for burial, arrangements were made with some of the trustees to hold services in the First Lutheran church; but Rev. Dr. Stelling, the pastor, learning that they were to be of Masonic character refused to take any part in them, thus refusing to dishonor his Master Christ, by sharing in the pagan rites of the lodge. Rev. Dr. Whiting, for a similar refusal while pastor of the Congregational church at Janesville, Wis., nine years ago, raised such a storm that he was under the necessity of leaving the church. In few communities where this question has been discussed could the lodge have such power to-day.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Prof. E. D. Bailey who ministers to the Tonica church, preached on Sabbath evening in the College chapel at Wheaton.

—During a recent severe storm at Red Cloud, Nebraska, lightning struck the barn of Rev. Geo. Bent killing his horse. The barn being but four rods from the house, all the inmates received quite a shock and were thankful that the blow was no more disastrous.

—The Plymouth church of this city has lately paid off a debt of $60,000 quietly and thoroughly. The subscription was made and the money all in hand before the public had notice of the fact.

—The members of the late Bloomingdale, Ill., council, presided over by a Knight Templar, are in a controversy over the result which does little honor to the churches of Christ in that locality. The members of the council were members of Elgin Association or sympathizers with them in their Masonic attack on the church and College at Wheaton. They are now charged in the local papers with holding a pretended mutual council which was really ex-parte, and with doing injustice to the leading members of the Bloomingdale church; and the members of the body are themselves in a bicker about the "tone" of its report. If men who have covenanted with the Lord forsake his plainest commands, he will leave them to their own folly. Would that their prayer might be like David's, "Create in me a clean heart, O God," that then sinners might be converted to the truth.

GENERAL.

—Very excellent results have attended the open-air meetings held here on the lake front Sunday evenings. The attendance has increased each Sabbath, and the interest shown has been very encouraging to the members of the Young Men's Christian Association, who have conducted the services. B. F. Jacobs spoke last Sunday evening at a meeting held near the foot of Van Buren Street.

—The first missionaries ever sent among the Dakota Indians were sent out forty-four years ago, and were Presbyterians. Ten Presbyterian churches have been the outcome of the work.

—The Free St. George's church in Edinburgh, Scotland, gave last year for the support of the weaker churches of its name throughout that country the sum of $15,276; the largest gift of its kind, it is said, made by any one church in the world.

—John Ruskin says: "It has become a point of politeness not inquire too deeply into our neighbor's religious opinions. What is in reality cowardice and faithlessness we call charity, and consider it the part of benevolence sometimes to forgive men's evil practice for the sake of their accurate faith, and sometimes to forgive their confessed heresy for the sake of their admirable practice."

—Twelve large donations to missionary societies have been made within a few months, aggregating $3,000,000 and upward. Miss Lapsley of Indiana, left $300,000 to the Presbyterian Board, and Deacon Otis of Connecticut. $973,000 to the American Board. Gifts of $100,000 each from India and Africa are included in the list.

News of the Week.

—The Lincoln Park Commissioners of this city have inaugurated a series of week-day concerts, to be given on Saturday afternoons. These concerts will be given entirely by subscription, and a number of wealthy men are taking hold of the matter in order to counteract the Sunday afternoon concerts started by a prominent Democratic politician.

—Last Thursday the President and Secretary McCrary had a long consultation as to the threatened Indian war in the Northwest, and what steps had best be taken to prevent it. From what information they had they agreed that war is not necessary, and that all reasonable precautions should be taken to prevent it. Special and positive instructions have been sent by the War Department to prevent General Miles from bringing on an Indian war, and telling him that the only purpose in sending him into the field was to protect navigation on the Missouri River.

—Illinois has more money-order post-offices than any other State. She leads the list with 443. Next comes New York.

—Cincinnati boasts of selling $350,000 worth of liquor in a week.

—General Walker, Superintendent of the Census, expresses the opinion that the coming enunciation of population will show an increase of 10,000,000 since the last decade, or a total of 48,000,000.

—A bed of coal of fine quality and 116 feet thick has been discovered in Pierce county, Washington Territory, on Carbon river, and close to the line of the projected line of the Northern Pacific road. The quantity that can be mined from this bed without pumping, is 26,900,000 tons, enough to supply the Pacific coast for nearly fifty years. It can be delivered in San Francisco for $4.50 per ton.

—Charles Sumner's grave is to be marked by a handsome sarcophagus of white Concord granite, bought with the funds left over after paying all expenses connected with the statue of Sumner made by Ball and erected in the Public Garden in Boston.

—The settlement of accounts at every postoffice in the United States to the end of the first quarter has been made. It appears that the receipts for the quarter reached the enormous sum of $7,940,000, being the largest quarter's receipts in the history of the government.

—The propeller Portage, of the Union Steamboat Company, brought the largest load of freight ever shipped from Buffalo to this city. It consists of over 1,750 tons of general merchandise, the combined loads of eighteen canal boats. At a rough estimate it would require 175 freight cars to carry this enormous load, which would make up a train little short of a mile in length.

—Minnesota will produce 45,000,000 bushels of wheat the present year. Statistics indicate the yield will, with favorable weather for harvesting, reach a couple of millions more than this estimate. Two million eight hundred thousand acres is a good-sized wheat field for one State.

—There are two World's Fair committees in New York city. One headed by Judge Hilton, is opposed to fixing any date for the World's Fair in New York until the site is selected and character of buildings determined; and the other, headed by Thurlow Weed, in favor of holding the fair in 1883. This committee was originally organized April 9, 1879, and consisted of three hundred leading citizens. To these were afterward added the names of two hundred and fifty delegates of the United States Board of Trade convention.

—A dispatch from Bismarck, D. T., says that Joseph Lambert, a woodman, and family, living six miles above Wolf Point Agency, on the Missouri, was attacked by the Indians on the 20th instant. Lambert, wife and four children were killed and scalped. Two other children were seriously wounded, and cannot recover, and one little girl carried into captivity.

—A severe storm visited the lower oil country of western Pennsylvania last Saturday. The oil towns of Petrolia and Karns suffered terribly. Twenty-five houses in the former place were swept away and destroyed, and the line of railroad between Parker and Karns City was submerged, bridges washed out, culverts destroyed, and the road ruined in many places. The people of that section in many instances barely escaped with their lives. The rainfall up the Monongahela valley and along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad was the heaviest known for years. Houses, fences, outbuildings, lumber, and other property was swept away, and many of the coal mines flooded, the miners in some of them narrowly escaping drowning.

—A gravel train on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad backed over a cow near Waukegan, Ill. The train was thrown from the track wrecking it badly. Four men were killed and seven injured.

—It is announced that in consequence of domestic bereavements, Mr. Welsh, Minister of the United States, has resigned, and will sail for home about Aug. 20.

—The committee of the French Assembly has unanimously approved Deputy Froust's proposal for the demolition of the ruins of the Tuilleries in Paris.

—The Russian Minister of the Interior reports 3,501 fires during June, causing damage to the amount of over 12,000,000 roubles; 508 of fires were incendiary.

Further particulars of the fire at Nijni Novgorod, on the 19th of the present month, state that while the fire was raging, fourteen explosions occurred in the bazar, killing and injuring forty persons.

The theater in the Kremlin, at Moscow, was burned by the Nihilists.

—A Berlin correspondent says: "The Caucasus having become the military basis for Central Asia, Russia has determined to expel the mountaineers, in order to prevent their rising, and to transport them to Saghalien. Most of them will probably die on the road."

—A Berlin correspondent telegraphs it is positively announced Monsignor Masella, the Papal envoy, has arrived at Kissingen. A Rome correspondent says it is reported that a settlement of the difference between the Vatican and Germany is near at hand, and before the end of the month Bismarck and Masella will agree on a concordat.

—The London Times, which ridicules De Lessep's prospectus of the canal, publishes an interview with him by a lady, and reports him as saying: "To remove the Culebra Mountain, we shall first dig wells to the depth of forty to fifty feet, and from these points chambers will connect the whole top of the Culebra. Then, trains of powder being prepared, the whole top will be blown up at once. To carry away the debris, steam cars will be run on a circular tramway. The canal will be forty-seven miles long and thirty feet deep, with the same width of channel as Suez, with eight basins for anchoring passing steamers, built alternately on either side of the canal. Thus fifty vessels in a day, if necessary, could pass and draw water, as in the open sea."

—The Zulu war is thought to be at an end. Lord Chelmsford lately repulsed the natives with great loss to them. The question whether Cetywayo will surrender or not is of little importance, as in the event of his proving stubborn the British can place his brother Oham, who surrendered some time ago, in possession of the lower and far more fertile part of Zululand, and, by assuring Oham some little support at the commencement of his reign, establish a complete bulwark between Cetywayo and the British colonies. The continuation of the war would be an arduous and fruitless task, as beyond Ulundi the country is a wilderness where the difficulties of transportation would exceed anything yet experienced.

Home and Farm.

Advantage of Small Farms.

It is one of the most foolish things a farmer can do to try to cultivate more land than he can profitably. It is a source of delight to gather fine crops, and in no way can it be done to more advantage than to limit ourselves to a small number of acres, and to repay the land well with a good supply of fertilizing matter after the exhausting season of cultivation is over. As an illustration of this, a gentleman was telling us that he has a garden of about three acres from which he has gathered his farm produce for the winter—realizing a handsome profit for his labor. He said he planted about one-eighth of an acre of corn, the cut-worms destroying some portions of it, which he afterward went over and put in beans where the corn was destroyed, and realized a good yield of corn and four bushels of nice shelled beans. From less than half an acre he dug one hundred and twenty-five bushels of fine table potatoes—proving that a "little farm well tilled" is of more profit than more acres half cared for.—Vermont Farmer.

THE TURNIP.

The Herald says: Any soil adapted to Indian corn will produce good turnips. They are most successful, however, on new land or freshly-turned sand. As an early crop for market, sold bunched in the green state, the cultivation is the same as for the early beet. It is more particular about soil than the beet, and for an early crop succeeds best on light sandy or gravelly soils, highly enriched with manure. Previous to sowing turnip seed a suitable quantity of lime, soot, or tobacco dust should be procured, so as to be prepared for the attacks of insects. As the seed will sometimes sprout in forty-eight hours after it is sown, whole crops are frequently devoured before a single plant is seen above ground. A peck of these ingredients, mixed with an equal quantity of ashes or road dust, scattered over the ground morning and evening for a week after sowing, will secure an acre of ground. This must be spread in such a way that the wind can carry it over the whole plot. As the wind often changes cross the land in a different direction each day, as the wind may serve. Radishes, cabbages, and other vegetables subject to the attack of insects, would be saved from great loss if this course were pursued. Rutabagas may be sown from May to September, according to the section of country. In this locality the finest roots are obtained by sowing the first week in June. According to Henderson the white and yellow varieties should be sown from the middle of July to the middle of August. There is always plenty of land upon the farm that can be used for late varieties. Plow under wheat, rye or oat stubble, give a light top-dressing and it will be ready for turnip seed. A farmer cannot have too many roots for feeding stock in the spring, when the grass is just starting. Turnips whether for early or late crops, should always be sown in drills, about fourteen or eighteen inches apart. One pound of seed will be enough for an acre. To have turnips in perfection they should be hoed in about a month from sowing. Working between the rows with a light cultivator will be found beneficial. The yellow Aberdeen and Golden Ball are both good late varieties. The former is excellent for culinary purposes, is very solid, keeps well through the winter, and as it attains a great weight under favorable conditions, is much used for stock. The Golden Ball has smooth, solid roots, flesh of a rich orange yellow, very nutritive and sweet.

Antidote for Loss of Hair.—Strong sage tea and borax mixed. Wet the hair and scalp and brush thoroughly. Add alcohol sufficient to keep from souring.

What the Birds Do.

The swallow, swift, and nighthawk are guardians of the atmosphere. They check the increase of insects that otherwise would overload it. Woodpeckers, creepers, and chickadees are the guardians of the trunks of trees. Warblers and fly-catchers protect the foliage. Blackbirds, thrushes, crows, and larks protect the surface of the soil; snipe and woodcock, the soil under the surface. Each tribe has its respective duties to perform in the economy of nature; and it is an undoubted fact that, if the birds were all swept off from the earth, man could not live upon it, vegetation would wither and die, insects would become so numerous that no living thing could withstand their attacks. The wholesale destruction occasioned by grasshoppers, which have terribly devastated the West, is undoubtedly caused by the thinning out of the birds, such as grouse, prairie hens, etc., which feed upon them. The great and inestimable service done to the farmer, gardener, and florist by the birds is only becoming known by sad experience. Spare the birds and save your fruit; the little corn taken by them is more than compensated for by the vast quantities of noxious insects destroyed. The long persecuted crow has been found, by actual experience, to do far more good by the vast quantity of grubs and insects he devours, than the little harm he does in the few grains of corn he pulls up. He is one of the farmer's best friends.—Selected.

We call attention to the following means of purifying foul rooms and infected places. It is important to know this, and the means are very cheap. "One of the best methods of fumigating an infected room, as well as the most convenient," says Dr. Chandler, an eminent chemist in New York and its official one to the Board of Health in that city, "is to place some sulphur in an iron vessel and pour a little alcohol on it. The alcohol is set on fire, and before it is burned away the sulphur will be ignited. There will arise from the burning sulphur sulphurous acid gas, which, like other gases, will mix itself with all the air in the the house, without the aid of draught or currents. It will penetrate every crevice, and destroy the vitality of every disease germ which it comes in contact with. How it destroys their vitality is not known."—Kentucky Live Stock Record.

Eat Fruit.—The Spaniards have a proverb which says: "Fruit is golden in the morning, silver at noon, but lead at night." We agree with this in so far, that the greatest benefit from fruit is to be derived in the early morning, especially juicy fruit. Many people only eat fruit late in the day, and hence have not the idea of it that they would have if they had eaten it at a more proper time. They eat it as a dessert at dinner; this may be the most proper time to eat dried fruits, but it is not the right time to eat the juicy kinds. The Spanish people learned their proverb from eating very juicy fruits, like oranges. They should be eaten in the morning a little before or after breakfast. Early in the day they will prove to be the best possible medicine for the bilious.

Stock Pests.—Pests now run riot with stock. The bot-flies are perhaps the worst. Wash their eggs from the legs of horses with warm water or scrape them off with a knife. Protect cattle from the bot-fly, which lays its eggs on the loins, by rubbing a little crude petroleum on the backs of the animals. Tar sheeps' noses to keep the sheep bot-fly from laying eggs in their nostrils. These means of preventing will add much to the comfort of the animals. By keeping stables clean and dark, the hateful black fly (Stomoxys caltricans), in general appearance so much like the house-fly, will be less annoying. To get rid of flies and bad smells in and about the stable, get a small bottle of carbolic acid at the drug store (it is very cheap), pour half a pint or less of it in a watering pot filled with water and sprinkle the stable floor well with it. All disinfectants are enemies to flies, red ants, roaches, etc.—Farm and Fireside.

Book Farming.—"New England has now over 230 farmers' clubs, with 72,000 active members, and library books to the number of 21,000." That is the way it is done in New England. Put all the New England States together and their combined territory will hardly be larger than the single State of New York, and not much larger than Pennsylvania.—Lancaster (Penn.) Farmer.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A DISCUSSION OF THEIR CHARACTER AND CLAIMS.

BY REV. DAVID Mc DILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David Mc Dillin Six Chapters treats of 1 "Their Antiquity."—2 "Their Secrecy."—3 "Oaths and Promises."—4 "Profaneness."—5 "Their Exclusiveness."—6 "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created snch excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Heterodox Morality and Orthodox Wickedness.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The strangest paradox of modern times is in the mental and moral perversity represented by the above caption.

During a recent visit to Canterbury, N. H., I had a protracted interview with the leading spirits in the Shaker community of that place. I was kindly entertained and furnished with all needful information. They have seventeen communities in five States and number a little over 3,000. At Canterbury I found about 200 living in great simplicity and outward purity of manners and morals. War, marriage and voting are alike condemned by a people neat, thrifty, prosperous, and enjoying the respect and confidence of the churches and people around them, and yet as a church not only holding the grossest absurdities, but denying the very foundation truths of the Christian religion.

The following extracts from one of their published works, entitled, "Plain Talks on Practical Religion," will illustrate. In answer to the question, Are you not failing to keep the command, "Go forth and multiply?" they reply: "Certainly. This command, given to Adam and his followers, is not binding on Christ and his disciples. He who gave this command to Adam and Eve either changed the order of his government when he declared "Behold I make all things new," or it was not the same God! We incline to the latter opinion. The God of Adam is inferior to the God of the Christians."

Again, in answer to the question, Do Shakers worship Ann Lee? They say, "We do not; more, we do not worship Jesus! We love both for what they have done for the cause we have espoused. Ann Lee was an English woman; Jesus was a Hebrew man; merely as such we are positively ignorant of any Christian reason why we should honor either above the rest of their country folk. Jesus was a converted Jew; Ann Lee was a converted Gentile. Ann Lee was simply the elder sister in Christianity, as Jesus was the elder brother."

Again, Are the Shakers spiritualists? They answer, "We are the most radical spiritualists of the present day. Our spiritualism has permitted us to converse face to face with individuals once mortals, some of whom we well knew, and with others born before the flood. By our spiritualism we are confirmed infidels to the foolish bodily resurrection theory; to the untrue and disappointing atonement doctrine; to the monstrous Trinity scheme," etc.

Contrast this with the Oneida Community. They, holding to all the essentials of an orthodox faith and professing Christian perfection, practice the grossest sensualism and have become a stench in the nostrils of all pure minded people. So too of Mormonism, it embraces all the essential truths of orthodox Christianity, to which it adds the errors of Mormon religion. In like manner our orthodox churches, while insisting on soundness of doctrine allow their ministers and members to practice the abominations of Freemasonry, as hateful in the sight of all right-thinking people as any other form of heathenism, and resist all allusion to the subject as destructive of the public peace.

From these facts we deduce the following conclusions:

1st. External morality does not necessarily proceed from nor imply the existence of true religion, but may be the outgrowth of pure selfishness and be associated with doctrines and principles most dishonoring to God, and most destructive to human well being.

2d. That the most perfect orthodoxy does not necessarily imply purity of morals but may be a convenient cloak for the grossest wickedness or an Antimonian hoodwink to blind the soul against its own deformities.

3d. That the preaching of abstract morality and abstract orthodoxy will never destroy the works of the devil nor save men's souls. Nothing but a full, clear and complete Gospel, faithfully and practically applied to the actual sins of the people will ever make them holy and happy. Soundness in doctrine, though eminently desirable but adds to the guilt of those who live ungodly, and the preaching of a Gospel that ignores prevalent and popular sins is likely to be a savor of death unto death rather than of life unto life.

Danger in Societies.

BY THOS. HODGE.

The character of any association is determined by its cause or origin, and its purpose or object. Thus we have associations for political purposes and others for moral and social purposes. We have also those which have the higher end of religion in view, but when they have religious truth to promulgate they are missionary in character and as a rule emanate from the church, either general or denominational.

The civil government and that of the church are separate and distinct. The words of Christ: "My kingdom is not of this world," "Put up thy sword," are forever a wall of division between the two. There is, however, a strong tendency in men to use Christianity, when it is popular, for the purposes of the civil government. To this end established churches have reigned in Europe, whether Roman Catholic or Episcopal, Lutheran or Presbyterian—and at times the one government was so blended with the other that it was difficult to say which was supreme. In fact it was sometimes the civil and sometimes the ecclesiastical power. The trouble arose from not seeing the line of separation between the civil, temporal government of man, and that of the spiritual kingdom of Christ, the unseen, but actual Ruler of the soul. There are, however, temporalities of the church which come under civil rule, on the same principle that the Apostle appealed to Cæsar.

Now the church of this dispensation has its beginning in the sole authority of Christ, and has rules for its government laid down in his teachings and in the apostolic letlers. No by-laws added by man can supercede or weaken the New Testament law. Yet just here have arisen most of the troubles to the church. Man's wisdom has so often attempted to improve on God's wisdom, that human expedients have been adopted instead of the Divine precepts, and these expedients of men have invoked the sword of the civil authorities to enforce them against the rights of conscience and of private judgment.

Yes, these are facts of history in Europe, and they ought to afford us lessons even for our own time and country. Our prophets of fifty years ago foretold trouble then unseen by the multitude who imagined our civil war to be an utter impossibility. Every generation has its duties and responsibilities. Can we shut our eyes to present evils, or lift the voice of warning, and thus avoid the greater evils impending in the future? Is there no body of cunning men who think they do God service by stretching out the civil arm to support their church? Is there no church which already seizes grants of State lands, rebate of taxes, and grants of money for itself? Undoubtedly there is one and more than one. See what wealth has already been given by New York State and city to the Roman Catholic church! It is de facto a state church there already, and alas, there are Protestant churches which are envious rather than indignant at the outrages again and again committed by the avarice of priestly power.

Not long ago even in this city the Daily News had an article of an approving character on state and church connexion. If a sound public sentiment had existed no such article could have appeared without producing great injury to its circulation.

Again, are we certain that our people who enjoy civil and religious liberty are awake to the distinction between the two? Is there no need for instruction on this subject? Must we wait to contest the point until union between church and state is so generally practiced by all parties through so-called societies that when the strongest churches pounce on the lion's share they shall be doing only what others would if they had the power?

As the Masonic power has nursed the principle of secretism in all manner of societies for plausible purposes, temperance, etc., until it has again appeared without rebuke as the leviathan among them, so it shall be with this principle of church and state connexion. It allies itself to our secular societies and prompts them to assume powers beyond their jurisdiction. It prompts to undertake the too much neglected duties of the church, and like Masonry itself to boast of doing such work better than the churches themselves. The degree of truth in the statement renders such secular instrumentalities but the more plausible and likely to succeed.

Success, however, in a wrong cause, or in the adoption of a wrong principle, is sure in the end to bring injury or disaster to the truth. Only the good seed in good soil will yield a good crop. Let our secular interests be guarded by our secular government and our Christian interests by the law of Christ as found in the New Testament.

Shall any man say that this is not enough for the interests of each? By going beyond this rule would not the papal principle of church supremacy and State subserviency, or the reverse, be admitted? Would not either be alike destructive to our present freedom and prepare us as they grow in power for the establishment here of the tyrannical system which has so long been the scourge of Europe?

Are our voters so universally intelligent and independent that the priests of Rome, the lodges of secretists and the rings of corruptionists which are so easily formed now-a-days, can all be disregarded as tending to the slightest injury of our system of freedom? No. Therefore let every patriot and every Christian be up and do his duty by rendering to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and to God the things that are God's.

Growth and Gains of Freemasonry.

We quote from the dispatches to the daily press of this city, and from a report made by one of the staff of the New York daily Tribune of that city, in regard to certain financial reports made in the late convocation of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York:

At New York the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons opened with a large attendance. The Grand Secretary's report showed the receipts of the year to be $91,000; number initiated, 2,954; dismissions, 983; expulsions, 40; unaffiliated for non-payment of dues, 5,065; deaths, 1,040.—Syracuse Daily Journal, June 3d, 1879.

That is they have in all ways lost during the past year 6,088, and gained 2,954, making a balance of 3,128 more lost than gained. Of course "Masonry is growing all the time," but it is growing small more rapidly than it is growing large.

Cost of Masonic Temple in New York, to May, 1876, $1,590,000. Decrease of debt to May, 1878, $55,000 The report shows a steady decrease in membership since 1876, and a corresponding decreasc in receipts.—Syracuse Daily Journal, June 5th, 1879.

This seems like a white elephant on their hands. Six per cent. interest upon the investment is $95,400 per annum. The debt has been decreased but $55,000 in two years or $28,000 in one year while the interest is $95,400 in one year. The necessity for lessening expenses is very apparent, and retrenchment in every possible manner. Hence—

The Grand Lodge recommends the abolition of the salary of Grand Lecturer, and a reduction in the allowance of clerk hire and other reductions. Also the abolition of the tax of three dollars for every member initiated, and the per capita tax of fifty cents when the debt has been reduced to $500,000. It also recommended a reduction of the membership of the Grand Lodge. The reports were referred and the committee reported against the proposed reduction of salaries.—The Syracuse Daily Journal, June 5th, 1879.

The reason why a reduction seems necessary is very discernable. First because the three dollar tax on the local lodges for every member initiated makes these lodges more indifferent in regard to the securement of members. And every inducement should be held out to increase the members of the local lodges. So the retrenchment party think. But the other party—the party to whom come the spoils of office including $5 per day, and expenses paid, will not consent that their salaries shall be reduced. The upper degrees in Masonry can not, and do not report back to the lower degrees what they do with the money, or what salaries they receive. While the members below who earn the money and are tickled with the gewgaws of the lodge are lead on to pay the bill which their despotic brethren incur. The reason we say despotic is because Albert G. Mackey, the renowned Masonic editor, author and lexicographer, says:

A Grand Lodge is invested with power and authority over all the craft within its jurisdiction. It is the supreme court of appeal in all Masonic cases, and to its decrees unlimited obedience must be paid by every lodge and every Mason situated within its control. The government of Grand Lodges is, therefore, completely despotic.—Makey's Lexicon of Freemasonry, page 185.

The report of the Grand Lodge meeting the secular press continues thus:

The amendments to the statutes that had been laid over since the last communication, were called up for final passage. Among them was an amendment for reducing the pay of representatives from five dollars to three dollars per day. The amendments and recommendations were voted down by a large majority.—Daily Tribune, June 5th, 1879, page 8.

So it transpires that the lower degrees are compelled to furnish those of the upper degrees with spending money, as well as expenses at the usual meetings of the Grand Lodge, at five dollars per day. This may all be very well, but it is something of a question how long the lower orders can be persuaded to hold out.

The Curse of Concealment.

A man has a right to transact his own business as secretly as he pleases, provided the business is honest, and concerns and interferes with no one else. But even then secrecy causes suspicion. A man whose shop is locked and whose windows are blinded, and who allows no one to see what he is doing, may be completing some rare invention, or may be making counterfeit money. People will suspect one thing or the other according to their estimate of the character of the man.

But while one may have legitimate secrets in his family, his business, or his trade, yet this is no justification for great secret combinations of men. What kind of a secret is that which a hundred thousand men know all about? It is not a family secret, nor a business secret, nor a secret of trade; then what is it? It might be something villainous kept secret for the good of the public which would be contaminated by its disclosure; or something profitable which is kept secret for the good of its possessors, lest others should partake of its benefits. In either case it is opposed to the purity, uprightness and frankness which becomes the true Christian. If secrets are good he wants to tell them to every one; if they are bad he does not want to know them at all.

There are some persons that are never content with equal rights and privileges. They are not great men. for a great man knows his power, and can take care of himself. But they are usually small men who wish to fill the places of great men; men of meagre talent who desire to attain positions to which their abilities do not entitle them. These men attain their ends by concealment, by secret plottings and workings, by a series of contrivings and wire-pullings which lift themselves up, pull others down, and enable them to help themselves and each other to about everything they wish for, whether in church or State, leaving to the honest and unsuspecting portion of the community who pay the expenses, only the scraps and fragments which remain, after the favored few have devoured the feast.

Against such machinations innocence, merit, or talent are no defence. At one time it was found that in a certain region one-tenth of the voting population eligible to office belonged to a certain secret fraternity; but it was found that this one-tenth held nine-tenths of the offices. Inside that circle were green pastures—outside, desert sands!

As such combinations can protect rascals, aud elevate incompetents to positions of trust and profit, so they can also displace, disgrace and almost ruin honest men and women. Their managers meet you with the blandness of friendship; but while you are opening your heart to them, they can talk with the wink of an eye, the twist of a finger, the swing of a hand, or the crook of an elbow; until you find yourself beset by rumors which no one starts, by lies which nobody tells: serpents hiss at you out of the darkness, and you find yourself hampered, hindered, cut off and crushed, and yet no one has done it, and no one knows how it was done!

There are corporations, and even religious societies, so managed that not a man outside of the little clique which controls them can tell what is done about the business, or what is done with the money which has been contributed. The business of such institutions is transacted in secret, and all the managers are under an obligation expressed or implied, to say nothing that can give outsiders an idea of what they are doing. Any one of them who will not be gagged soon finds that he is in an uncomfortable place, and is not likely to stay there a great while. The managers want to get rid of him, and he is about as anxious to get away from them.

This curse of concealment blasts and blights everything it influences. It keeps supple tricksters, and even thorough-paced rogues, in important positions, and keeps honest men out of them; and while a man supposes he is walking about as an equal among equals, all the while these combinations, by whisperings, misrepresentations and insinuations which cannot be met because no one will father them and state them openly, work to impair his influence, to fetter and hinder him, and to deprive him of the equal rights to which he is clearly entitled, and which he perhaps supposes he enjoys.

Private business may be kept private, but business done for God and humanity, sustained by Christian people, and managed by their servants, should be done so openly that it can bear the inspection of friend or foe. And any work that is carried on amid concealment, by men who destroy or mislay its records; lose its important papers, and cannot tell what they have done with its funds, ought to have its doors kicked in and its managers turned out by the honest men who sustain it, and then be put in charge of "men of honest report, full of faith and the Holy Ghost," who will so administer affairs that there will be no need of periodical endorsings, puffings and whitewashings to keep things presentable; and so that men contributing their hard earnings to the most sacred of causes, will not find afterwards their money has been misapplied by willful officials in defiance of the wishes of their masters or squandered by some general manager right under the very noses of eminent and pious overseers who were appointed to watch him and who slept in peace until the mischief was done.

The world reeks with rascality, which only lives and thrives under the cursed shadow of concealment. Perhaps we cannot cure this; but let the church purge herself from the stains that are on her raiment, and let there be such vigilance by men appointed to attend to her affairs, and such disgrace attached to those who abuse their trusts, that pious villainy will prove both unprofitable and disreputable, and then honesty and ability will take their proper place and incompetence and trickery will hide their diminished heads.—The Armory.

[From the North American Review.]

Garrison.

[Concluded.]

It was no flippant bigot, but Harriet Beecher Stowe, who, in 1852, asked Mr. Garrison, "Are you a Christian?" What more is needed to demonstrate how stone-blind were then the best American thought and religion; how absolutely they were shut up to insist on always calling "evil good and good evil," "putting darkness for light and light for darkness," and insolently refusing to test things by the Master's touchstone, "their fruits?"

If to-day our atmosphere is largely free from this cant and superstition, if at least ten thousand pulpits would now blush to ask such a question, how much of this breadth, clear sight, and toleration is due to antislavery tornadoes "scourging before them the lazy elements which but for them would have stagnated into pestilence?" Adams thanked God in Congress that, at last, "the yoke [on free speech] was broken." Garrison broke a heavier and more cruel yoke. Free speech and broad culture know not to-day the debt they owe him. Dr. Channing thanked the Garrisonians, "in the name of freedom and humanity," affirming that their intrepidity had saved free speech. "They have rendered to freedom a more essential service than any body of men among us.... The first systematic effort to strip the citizen of freedom of speech they have met with invincible resolution. From my heart I thank them. I am myself their debtor." It is hardly time yet to measure the depth, or estimate the importance to church and college, of that forty years' agitation. As an intellectual awakening and moral discipline it has only three parallels in history—the age of Vane and Cromwell, Luther's Reformation, and the establishment of Christianity.

Its milestone among the centuries is simply that it killed chattel slavery. The grave just closed covers him whose hand lifted us to that spasm of half-way justice and insufficient shelter. The black race blesses him that, at any rate, their limbs wear no chain. But he freed master as well as slave. He broke more yokes than those of the blacks—how many more, the next generation will judge better than we can. After forty years of empty decorum, his movement has made American life earnest. Religion ceases to be mere text and dogma, and red blood runs in our veins. He set in motion forces which will not cease to act until far greater reforms than those he lived to see are accomplished. And, without specially intending it, he was such an iconoclast that only those names of our generation will live which served the slave, or led in the conspiracy against him.

It may sound strange to some, this claim for Mr. Garrison of a profound statesmanship. Men have heard him styled a mere fanatic so long that they are incompetent to judge him fairly. "The phrases men are accustomed," says Goethe, "to repeat incessantly, end by becoming convictions, and ossify the organs of intelligence."

The secret of this rare sagacity was that he put himself exactly in the negro's place. He did literally "remember them that are in bonds as bound with them." This oneness with the negro unlocked for him all the secrets of the slavery problem. The motive of most other antislavery leaders was an intellectual conviction. The root of Garrison's principle was in the heart; and as Madison says, "The heart, after all, is the best logician."

No sophism ever cheated the negro. He felt, and needed no argument. Garrison needed none. No ingenious theory, no plausible excuse, no subtile argument from necessity or convenience, ever perplexed him a moment. His heart detected the hollowness at once. The finest compliment ever paid him—because of its unconscious and delicate appreciation of this quality—was the first words Sir Fowell Buxton said to him. On his arrival in London, during his first visit to England, Garrison called and sent up his letters of introduction. Buxton came down to greet him. Stopping suddenly in his approach, he exclaimed, "Why! Mr. Garrison, I had supposed you were a negro!"

He had known Garrison only through the columns of the Liberator;" and all his experience with antislavery laborers had never shown him a white man able to identity himself so exactly and completely with the negro.

The lasting freshness and youth of his intellect were as marked as its early maturity. At twenty-three he startled statesmen and made the great classes and interests of society "crash and jostle against each other like mighty vessels in a storm." Afterward, in those long, weary years, when the most zealous were tired, and some lost hope—in cold district schoolhouses, thinly filled, and those few present persons of little account—all his fellow workers will remember the fresh, genuine, buoyant spirit in which he would come to the platform, kindling a whole audience as if that were his first appeal, the very baptism of his conscience in a new cause. That one heart held hope and youth enough for thousands.

That boy's moral courage, which, poised on his own single conviction of right, was all-sufficient against thirty millions of doubters, was of the same tough fibre with the serene resolve of threescore years and ten, which flung its rebuke on fifty millions of deluded men. This makes the greatness of our loss. No one can supply his place. In these hesitating and timid days the loss one man of decided opinions, and willing to express them, is very serious. And Mr. Garrison, though old in years, had lost no whit of his strength, while every hour added to his influence. With such clouds over us, what aid, what a shield that brave, clear, wise, and now trusted counsel would be to us! That "finished man" whose death Burke, in his parental agony, so vividly painted, is to us an infinitely greater loss, just recognized and valued as he had come to be.

Patient of labor, his was a life of constant hard work, misunderstood and misrepresented, at his own cost; for he never accepted pay for any service in the reform-field. And so much did this become habitual that, in after-years, when he was called to other platforms, he hesitated long before accepting, and often finally refused the usual fee.

As for fame, in those dreary years there was little probability that the clouds would break away while he lived, or of any fame that his ear would ever drink in. A lofty ambition of course he had: that which seeks to leave the world better than one finds it—a serene faith that no good effort is ever lost, and no great service ever fails finally to be acknowledged. But that which we usually call ambition—the desire for recognition, the claim for acknowledgment or reward — of that he had as little as any man I ever knew. He was unaffectedly indifferent to money and fame. Borne down by calumny, but conscious that he was rendering most important service to his time, and intent on his one object, there was none of Bacon's wistful and tender appeal to "the next age." Indeed, there was rather a grand carelessness whether "the next age" knew anything, or what it thought, of him or his work. Most of our public men take the precaution to strengthen and vindicate themselves with posterity by studied explanations of what they did, and careful collection of all they said. Garrison—"the best abused man of his day"—stooped to no vindication of his life, and left his words to be gathered up, or not, as neglect or loving reverence should choose.

Modest, and without a trace of self-assertion, he was still aware of his strength, as able men usually are. His boyish essays in journalism were so ripe and masterly that shrewd men supposed them written by Timothy Pickering and some of the oldest and keenest men in New England. He must have known that, if he would lay aside every weight and the solemn sense of duty that so heavily burdened him, few competitors could distance him in the race for worldly success. If he could have stooped to the easy conscience, ready time-serving, and lax honor and honesty of our great journalist, Mr. Garrison would readily have won as large success and commanding place as he did; for in personal magnetism, moral courage, eloquent speech, political shrewdness, common sense and ability to hold a great party together, Mr. Garrison far exceeded him, while in the ability for hard work they were equals. He must have seen the public recognition and wealth that awaited him if he would only quit his great work and come down to meet them.

The character of his eloquence was peculiar. Some have denied that he ever was eloquent. So Hallam doubted whether Luther was eloquent. But, as his own times felt the great German's eloquence in speech and print, Hallam's doubt three hundred years after, in another tongue, may safely be put one side. Multiply the amount of your influence into the character and mood of your hearers, and the result is the measure of your eloquence. Mr. Garrison spoke in every Northern State, and on the other side of the ocean. His audiences held every class, sometimes bare human nature in its rudest form, sometimes the highest culture and coldest conventionalism of the age. Their mood was quiet and deference, or uproar and mob. The subject was odious to most of them. Some hated him beyond expression, others feared him and shrunk from him as the worst of infidels, and others, still, hung on his lightest word. Yet each and all welcomed him always to the platform, and he held them with sovereign mastery. The hearer whose ear was once caught seldom escaped or wished to escape his hold.

He never trifled, made no account of sharp points or minute particulars, was seldom humorous, not often sarcastic, and cared little for studied phrases. Although to the surprise of most men, probably, there are more epigrammatic and pithy sayings in his speeches, "hits," as Brougham somewhat irreverently calls such bursts—mots which will pass into literature—than can be culled from the orations of Webster.

His tone was that of a grave and serious indictment; his whole soul freighted his words. Entirely forgetting himself, an intense earnestness melted every one into the hot current of his argument or appeal, and the influence, strong at the moment, haunted the hearer afterward, and was doubled the next day. He was master of a style of singular elevation and dignity. Windham said the younger Pitt "could speak a king's speech off-hand." So far as dignity of tone was concerned, Garrison could have done it. No American of our day could state a case, or indite a public document, with more wary circumspection, impressive seriousness, or grave dignity than he could. The "Declaration of Sentiments" by the convention which formed the American Antislavery Society, and that Society's statement of its reasons for repudiating the United States Constitution, have a breadth, dignity, and impressive tone such as are found in few, if any, of our state papers since the Revolution, when Dickinson, Jay, Hamilton and Adams won such emphatic praise from Lord Chatham.

In regard to classes of men his judgment was unerring, "as if a man had inquired at the oracle of God." Individuals, in general, he read with the sure instinct of a woman. When mistaken, it was often in thinking too well of them. But, like the sturdy old English moralist, indeed, like all men of a hearty and generous nature, there were some friends in whom he would acknowledge no fault, and some opponents in whom he could see no virtues.

He was no ascetic, but enjoyed life in all its forms and relations. He possessed his own soul. It was not possessed by antislavery, or any other reform idea. You could not be in his company an hour without feeling his ability, his original and decided character. But you might see him many times without having slavery, or any other wrong, thrust on your attention.

Like almost all men of large powers and conversant with great interests, his mood was genial and tender. A fearfully hard life had not embittered him in the least. Laughed at and lied about, hated, dragged through the streets with a halter, mobbed and imprisoned, he was neither soured nor vindictive. Serenely he put these things under his feet wifh quiet indifference, neither "bewailing his hardships nor exulting in his triumphs."

Though it was as true of him as it ever was of any one that he feared not the face of man, still he was born a gentleman; his tastes, manners, bearing and mood, were of the highest breeding and courtesy. He was at home in every circle, with a dignity that prevented undue familiarity, and made most men recognize his right to lead.

After Mr. Lewis Tappan and himself had been engaged an hour in earnest debate with a slaveholder who did not know them, the Southerner said to Garrison: "If all Northerners were as fair, courteous, and reasonable as yourself, we should not complain. It is madmen like Garrison that offend us."

Another fierce opponent, accidentally in Garrison's company an hour, after his departure asked a bystander the name of the man he had been disputing with, and, on learning it, sat down in tearful shame that he had so long and bitterly abused such a man.

I once saw him in a mixed company, when a clergyman had made a labored excuse for non-interest in the slave question and dissent from his views, lay his hand respectfully on the critic's arm, and his rebuke, "Sir, it is not light you need, but a heart," though apostolic in frankness, was so courteously spoken that the listeners of both sides assented, and the critic himself took no offense.

The time will come when men will name strength, courage, discretion, marvelous sagacity, inexhaustible patience, and a whole-souled devotion to justice and humanity, which never counted the cost, as his foremost qualities. Then the church, instead of jealously gathering her skirts about her when he is mentioned, will bind his name proudly on her brow, claiming him not only as hers, but as her ripest fruit in this generation—the best, almost the only evidence of her essential Christianity and value.

If a grand purpose—one of incalculable worth and so difficult as to be almost impossible; unselfish and tireless devotion to it; rare sagacity in discovering the means to effect it; commanding influence in compelling aid from reluctant sources; and complete success, wrung from universal and bitter opposition, without compromising principle, or stooping to accept dishonorable aid—if all this be any evidence of greatness, then surely Mr. Garrison was one of our greatest men. "He will ever be recognized," says one well versed in our times, "as the central and supreme figure in that group of giants which the civil war produced."

Of course he had faults. But I was honored to stand so near him for forty years that some I could not see, and others I have forgotten. As Bolingbroke said of one of Marlborough's defects, "He was so great a man that I forgot he had that weakness."

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

—A warm discussion has been for months carried on in the Christian Instructor, between two or three of the younger preachers of the United Presbyterian church with their elders, on the morality of young Irish Catholic females, the young men asserting that they excel their Protestant sisters in chastity. Their point they are not able to clearly establish, having much the same trouble with their data as the geological theories of twenty years ago. A similar discussion was carried on some time ago in the London Echo, and drew out the following testimony from a physician: "During a winter's residence in French private families my professional position gave me greater facilities for noting the moral status of society than those possessed by any ordinary visitor; and the consequence has been a confirmation of my Spanish experience, namely, that priestly influence and immorality, preserved and fostered through confession, has so thoroughly undermined social morality that only a sweeping change in religion can save either of the nations mentioned from utter decay."

The Nebraska State Meeting.

I am informed by Rev. W. P. Caldwell that the next meeting of the Nebraska anti-secrecy association is to be held at Palo, York county. This is quite central to the population of this new State, and although a little off the railroad running from Lincoln to York, I have no doubt but conveyances will be furnished from the depot and free entertainment provived for all who attend. A hasty organization was effected at Pursel chapel, May 7, 1879, and the preliminary steps taken to set the work in motion. The following is a synopsis of the constitution adopted: Art. 1st. Gives the name, Anti-secret Christian Association of Nebraska; Art. 2d. The object of this Association shall be to enlighten the public mind respecting the evils set forth in the preamble of this constitution and to seek by all lawful means to remove secret orders from both church and state; Art. 3d. Names the officers; Art. 4th. Defines their duties; Art. 5th. Provides for an annual meeting; Art. 6th. Any person in sympathy with the objects of this Association may become a member by signing this constitution; Art. 7th. Provides for amendments when necessary. The officers elected were Rev. Simeon Austin of Fairmont, President; Rev. W. S. Spooner, Kearney, Corresponding Secretary; Rev. C. C. Kellogg, Junietta, Recording Secretary; and D. B. Hotchkiss, Syracuse, Treasurer.

This was a small but brave beginning, which if followed up will not be wanting in grand results. The time of holding the meeting was not the most favorable, the sickness of Bro. Spooner was a serious drawback, these, together with other unfortunate incidents, made an extra demand on our faith. The time named is more favorable (Sept. 30 to Oct. 2) and will, I trust, accommodate a larger number of friends and tend to make this fall gathering an eminent success. I have already sent a few tracts to each of the friends whose names I have been able to obtain, and shall come prepared to furnish anti-secret literature on special terms, particularly the Christian Cynosure to ministers who are living on small salaries and working for God.

There will never be a more favorable opportunity to strike a telling blow than the present. The cities of New England and the old world are sending of their multitudes to occupy your broad and fertile fields, and now while the foundations are being laid and the habits of society are forming, is the time for vigorous and united efforts. I trust, dear friends and fellow-workers, you will feel its importance and heartily respond by your prayers and your presence.

Summary of Bro. Hinman's Work in New England.

Wheaton, Ill., July 5, 1879.

Dear Bro. K.—Having returned from New England I desire to give a brief review of my work there. I have lectured in all the New England States.

Whole number of days' service on the field,	209
Whole number of lectures and sermons...	107
Total receipts	$481 85
Total expenses, including railroad fare, meals, postage, etc	$162 48
Receipts less expenses	$269 37

I have not included in the expenses the cost of my first journey to New England last fall, nor of my return home last spring. The whole amount due me for services is $176.00, including $40 unpaid subscriptions and $136 for which no provision has been made.

I wish to make especial acknowledgments of help and contributions from J. A. Conant, Philip Bacon, D. J. Elsworth and others in Connecticut, and Elders Kimball and Jackson in New Hampshire and Maine.

There are many obstacles to our work in New England. There is gross ignorance, bitter prejudice, intense conservatism and supercilious contempt. But there is also a large proportion of fair-minded people who believe in freedom of speech and who are willing to "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." Could a lecturer be assured of an adequate support it would be quite practicable to make a thorough canvass of New England. The expenses on the field would not be great. Each village has its town hall which generally can be obtained for the cost of lights and fuel, and traveling and other expenses would not be as great as in the West. There are but few places, especially in rural districts, where a respectful hearing could not be obtained. Hoping that some of the seed sown may yet bring forth fruit, I am yours in Christ.

H. H. Hinman.

A Working Visit.

Having resolved, some time in June last, to visit Grafton and Pruntytown, to see if the true standard of reform was still floating at either of those places, I made my wishes known to my friends of the Sugar Grove church and was promptly supplied with means to pay fare.

Accordingly on Monday, June 30th, we started, Mr. J. W. Moss kindly taking us into Cameron. The cars carried us to Fairmont, where we stopped off to visit the family of Hon. F. H. Pierpont, where we found the hospitality which was expected and appreciated on our part. The ex-Governor is an Anti-mason; but his son who has been off at Adrian College, Michigan, has gone into the Delta tau Delta fraternity, to the grief of his excellent parents. Governor P. gave me the history of a murder committed in Palatine, West Virginia, where the murderer resorted to the grand hailing sign of distress with success. The grand jury, most of whom were Freemasons, brought in no bill against the criminal, and so he was not even put on trial for killing in cold blood a fellow creature, merely because the one who was slain did not belong to the lodge. The Governor took great interest in the "Master's Carpet," of which I had a copy with me. He has a copy of "Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry," from which he has obtained some insight into the lodge. I suggested to him the propriety of sending for a copy of "Freemasonry Illustrated," and hope that he may do so. A general circulation of such works will do great good in spreading light.

The next day, Tuesday, July 1st, we went on to Grafton and lodged with friend William Walker, who made us very welcome, although he lacks a great deal of being an Anti-mason. The young pastor of the M. P. Church, Rev. J. F. Cowan, called to see me and I gave him what light I could on the lodge question, and let him have the "Master's Carpet" to read. He is not a member of any lodge, but as silent as the grave concerning the sinfulness of lodgery. May God open the eyes of this dear brother to the great evil which curses so many communities and churches! He did not ask me to preach, knowing perhaps that some of the leading members were unwilling to hear me. He did, however, ask me, on Wednesday evening July 2d, to lead the prayer-meeting, which I did. As soon as I opened the Bible Mr. F. M. Durbin, the W. M. of one of the Masonic lodges, rose from his seat and left the prayer-meeting with an air of indignation, somewhat to my surprise. As he was going out, I could not help feeling great love and pity for him, as I recollected the language of the inspired penman in 1 John 3:15. His conduct was eminently Masonic; but I do not believe that our Saviour would have anybody act so. I made no remark on the transaction, but went on with the meeting as if nothing had happened. The next day I visited the printing offices and tried to get in a few Anti-masonic items, in which I succeeded, although both editors are secret society men.

On the evening of the 4th we paid a visit to our good friends brother and sister Bosley and were made to feel at home. Bro. John Bosley, as you know, reads the Cynosure, and both he and his wife are on the right side. They know some facts as to the shielding of criminals through the secret orders which might be profitably published to the world.

The next day, Saturday, July 5th, leaving my wife and baby in Grafton, I walked over to Pruntytown and stayed all night at the house of Rev. W. M. Betts, who next morning brought over my wife and child for me in his buggy. It being the regular day for preaching, Rev. J. J. Mason, D.D., the pastor, asked me to preach, as my old friends would no doubt be glad to hear me. So I went into the pulpit, and having paved the way for my sermon, by stating that Jesus on one occasion began a sermon which greatly pleased his hearers at the start but which made them mad enough to kill him at the close (Luke 4:22-29) I prayed and read the Ten Commandments for my text. I proceeded to hold up before the people present in the audience the fact that Freemasonry dishoners God, degrades man, tramples upon law, and revives the worst features of Baal worship in a modernized form. The influences of Freemasonry in getting John F. Clayton, the Grafton murderer, indicted for murder in the second degree, when everybody knows that he committed murder in the first degree, was also brought plainly before my hearers; as also the case of Benjamin Orton, who was said to have cut his own throat in the lodge to which he had been summoned for trial. I also made use of the facts concerning the Palatine murder case; and in addition, specified wherein the apron-wearing fraternity violates every one of the ten commandments, as well as sets aside the atonement of Christ. Some persons became angry at the truth; among others two ministers of my own conference, one of whom tried to stop me in the middle of the sermon, saying that such preaching was a desecration of the Sabbath; but I preached on, although some left the house too much excited to listen longer. I went on to identify Freemasonry "as the image of the beast," which the dragon-tongued beast persuaded "them that dwell on the earth" to make, showing that even the highest Freemasons confirm the charge that the order does shield criminals from punishment. Thus, Albert Pike, in a report to the Grand Lodge of Arkansas, 1854, p. 116, says:

"If a person appeals to us as a Mason in imminent peril, in such pressing need that we have no time to inquire into his worthiness, then, lest we might refuse to relieve and aid a worthy brother, we must not stop to inquire into anything."

A. G. Mackey in his Text Book of Masonic Jurisprudence, page 270, says:

"We are to give aid in imminent peril when Masonically called upon, not lest injustice may be done if we pause to inquire into the question of affiliation, but because the obligation to give this aid, which is reciprocal among all Masons, never has been and never can be cancelled."

If these testimonies do not prove that Freemasonry is an obstacle in the way of justice, through its admitted obligation to give aid to those who make its grand hailing sign of distress, listen to the words of Charles Ludlow of South Carolina, written a short time before he was visited by political enemies and assassinated in his own house:

"Our enemies are after our lives and we cannot help ourselves. I do not know who the next victim will be; but the laws afford us no redress, as our persecutors are nearly all Freemasons, and no member of that fraternity can be punished."

Then, in contrast with the abominable system of lodgery, I took up the pure religion of our Lord Jesus Christ and held him forth as our only Savior from sin. I urged my hearers to repent of their sins and accept the salvation which Christ gives, holding him up as the only great light. The pastor evidently felt the force of my remarks, as he was too much enraged to make the closing prayer of the occasion, although I gave him an opportunity. Of course, I appointed meeting for the evening. Bro. Mason, I have been told, says that he only invited me for form's sake, not supposing that I would accept the invitation to preach. The same man at a public speaking not long before had eulogized the Odd-fellows as having "an order which is more benevolent than the Christian religion."

My next congregation was larger than that of the morning, though my two ministerial brethren did not put in an appearance. Of course I contrasted the ceremonial salvation of the lodge with the gracious salvation which Christ bestows, showing that the limit of duty is to be found in the extent of God's requirement; that God alone can create a moral obligation, and that Masonic oaths are neither morally nor legally binding. The sermon was a long one, yet good attention was paid to all I had to say, and I trust that some soul went from the meeting to earnestly ask of Jesus, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

On the following Thursday evening after leading the prayer-meeting I gave a brief address on the threefold relation of the love of Christ, which closed my labors at Pruntytown, giving time for our return to fill my regular Sugar Grove appointments on the succeeding Sabbath, which was done. Arriving at Cameron we were met by our friend Samuel Houston, who furnished us with horses on which to ride out into the neighborhood where our preaching place is located. Yours in Christ, D. B. TURNEY.

WALKS AND TALKS.

About a 100 colored Odd-fellows displayed themselves in Chicago last Monday accompanied by a white band of music, and half a dozen white policemen heading them. There were also two open carriages containing, we suppose, the chief officers of the company. Altogether it was what would be called a very creditable display which would compare favorably with those of their white brethren. They seemed as proud as they could be of their baubles, they were well dressed, and they strutted quite suggestively of the peacock and its tail. But the benevolence of the performances was so evident in the happy faces, that even those infected by the Cynosure must have been convinced if their eyes had not been darkened by the sight.

Walking along afterwards I asked a colored gentleman if he had been in the procession.

"No, sah, I am a Freemason."

"Then you are not a free man," said I, and asked, "What made you join them?"

"O, because they are a good society; don't you think so?"

"No; for they teach a religion without Christ."

"O, no sah!" emphatically, "no sah; they do teach Christ. Yes sah."

"Are you a member of a church?"

"Yes; a Baptist."

"Well, I would judge you to be a devout, praying man. You know that in the lodge the prayers are not offered in the name of Christ."

"Yes, indeed; O yes, indeed they are."

"Well, some Jews are Masons, ain't they?"

"Yes, and they believe in Christ, only they don't think he's come yet, and we do."

"Then they are not believers in him."

"Yes; O yes they are."

"And Mohammedans are also Christians, by your way of talking."

"See here, sah, all good Masons must believe in the true God. And so a good Mason is always a good Christian. Yes, sah, a good Mason is always a good Christian!"

"He is not necessarily a Christian at all, my friend, any more than a good counterfeit of a greenback is a good greenback, for the better the counterfeit the worse it is. And you know the Testament tells us that Satan can appear as an angel of light, and his ministers appear like ministers of Christ. And it warns us against such dangerous teaching as you seem to have had."

"Where does the New Testament say any thing against Masonry? Where? No, sah."

"It tells us to 'have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness,' and to tell every body the good news about Christ, but Masonry teaches concealment."

"No, no, sah; O no!"

"Have you ever read any of Webb's Monitor or Mackey's Ritualist?"

"No, sah."

"These books explain Masonry and you will see in them that it is not Christianity but anti-Christ."

"Well, here is a pamphlet you can read and I may see you some other time."

"I'll be glad to see you. I like to meet a man like you. I'll read this; but Masonry is better than churches, not half so bad as churches. Yah, yah."

"You are wrong there, friend."

"O no, sah; I know them both."

Our friend was evidently very proud of his Masonry and of having advanced to the Christian degrees where he supposed the Jews etc., might arrive. He will doubtless soon receive some needed lessons on the silent tongue and the listening ear, for a sincere, talking, Christian Mason is in great danger of rebuke from his Masonry. H.

THE SERMON DEFENDED.

THOMPSON, Conn., July 26, 1879.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The more I read the better I like the Cynosure. In the issue of July 17, page 7, I find the statement, "I will not conceal my mortification at finding this wretched paragraph of a sermon in the much prized Cynosure." Please allow me a few words in reply. A true statement is made in a sermon by the pastor of Wheaton church: "This change is once for all." This is true, and the hope of every Christian, for if we are born of the Spirit we cannot be unborn. The writer refers to Isa. 59:2, which refers to man before he is born of the Spirit, or else the other reference is out of place, Rom. 8:38, 39.

Just here I would call Father Sovereign's attention to the reason that nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord; it is found in Rom. 8: 29, 30: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified." Hence the 38th and 39th verses are true. "For the gifts and callings of God are without repentance," Rom. 11: 29. If he has given us to Christ he will not repent of it, and if he has called us by his Spirit to believe in Jesus he will not repent of it.

Only a few words on Heb. 6: 4-6 and I am done. To my mind it is clear that no one who is truly converted to Christ can fall away, is what the Apostle Paul means in this passage. If one should be lost after he has been once saved then Christ must be crucified again in order to save him again, and if Christ cannot keep all that he has saved, it puts him to an open shame, for he says, "I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand," John 10: 28.

I thank God for this, here I find encouragement to work, and if there are no more sermons in the Cynosure, still let the Wheaton pastor send forth more and more of such truth and he shall see of the fruit of his labors.

OUR MAIL.

John Ziegler, Dickerson county, Kan., writes:

"I have one objection to Bro. Blanchard's sermons and that is, They do not come often enough. I would like to have one a week to read to my family every Sabbath morning. We do not have much preaching in this neighborhood, it is too new. I prize the Cynosure higher than any other paper published. May God bless it and send it to every house in the land."

We are just now publishing a paper from the North American Review of Wendell Phillips on William Lloyd Garrison, which will take up the sermon space through August 7th. We intend, however, to publish a sermon every week if possible. Occasionally an address or unusually interesting report of conventions may crowd it out.

J. C. McFeeters, Parnassus, Pa., sends us a copy of the action of the Reformed Presbyterian church Synod on secret societies at their meeting of June 4, 1879. This was published in the Cynosure of July 17th. Those who have not seen it will be benefited by reading it.

John Fohl, Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I am a patron and attentive reader of your paper, which is constantly gaining influence and by the blessing of God is destined to bring down the demon of secrecy as Dagon fell before the ark. Only have faith in God and push the battle to the gate. I have been in the ministry (U. B. church) for near forty four years."

R. A. Stewart, Molino, Lincoln county, Tenn., writes:

"I am glad to know the light of truth is sweeping to destruction the works of darkness. We feel assured that God is on our side to help us to battle down Satan's stronghold, and 'that Light which is the light of men' will soon burst forth like noon-tide of the day, bringing to naught all opposition to the Redeemer's kingdom. Then, brethren, actuated by the fear of the Lord, (which is the beginning of wisdom), we soon shall have accomplished God's will concerning us in every department of life, and enter at last into that rest which remains for the children of God. As thousands are bound with Satanic chains, le us all arise as one man in behalf of our fellow men, who all their lifetime have been subject to bondage. Rejoice, ye prisoners, for 'The day of your redemption draweth nigh.'"

Josiah Shaw, Eau Claire, Wis., writes:

"All I need say in commendation of your paper is I have read it from its first number and expect to as long as I live. I have recently interviewed a Masonic friend and he readily admits that Masonry may tend more to evil than good and with pleasure receives the Cynosure, Morgan's abduction and Valance's confession. The Cynosure in the free library I think is doing a good work. It should be in every reading room."

C. W. Loney, Fennimore, Grant county, Wis., writes:

"I am still reading your paper; prize it very highly, and am in full sympathy with the cause that it advocates. I am here alone, as it were, surrounded on all sides by the different named secret societies from the 'old harlot Masonry,' down to the last of her offspring, the Mendotas. They all belong to the same family; grafted into the old crab apple stump, the tap-root or main root being Satan himself. When I reflect on it and think of some of the ministers of Christ, deacons, elders and even bishops, laying away among the rubbish in a Mason lodge for fourteen days until the flesh cleaves from the bone when the lion's paw grip must be used to raise them up, that if the Lord from heaven should say to them while bundled up in the rubbish as he did to that old covetous farmer in days of yore, 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee,' in what state would he be to appear before his God. I expect to do what little I can to prevent the spread of these secret abominations."

B. T. Johnson, Waupun, Wis., writes:

"I have just finished reading the new book 'Freemasonry Illustrated.' Can it be that in Freemasonry professedly Christian men, ministers and all, go through with all I read there. Of course I believe it. I cannot find words to express my surprise and wonder. * * Go ahead. There is a better time coming. It will all be right by and by."

S. G. Barton, Laban, Mitchell county, Kan., writes:

"I am lecturing occasionally now on the subject of Freemasonry. Bro. Kiggins will lecture here soon. So the work goes on. Hope to send a club of subscribers to the Cynosure next week. One great need of this country, is active work on the part of the Anti-masons now in Kansas. One year's faithful effort would make things look different. For myself I go to Southwest Missouri in October next to labor and probably suffer, where I hope, God helping me, to aid in the Wesleyan mission work, (I belong to that church) and also to labor in the Anti-masonic agitation."

John Shuh, Columbia City, Ind., writes:

"I would pray that every heart of professed Christians was occupied by Jesus only. Then our churches would not be defiled by lodge secrecy, or drunkenness, or the use of tobacco; and I believe the unregenerate would be much easier converted to Christianity. The entanglement of the churches with the idolatrous ways of the world prevent many souls from being brought into the church and to their Saviour."

Mrs. Sarah A. Proctor, Rutland, LaSalle county, Ill., writes:

"I like your paper so well I cannot do without it."

S. W. Patterson, North Cedar, Kansas, writes:

"You have my hearty sympathy in the great and noble work in which you are engaged. Be not discouraged, you are on the Lord's side. Be faithful and the crown will be given you as yours for a reward. I feel thankful that our church has no members that belong to secret organizations. Yours in the faith that the day is near at hand when the armor of light will take the place of the deeds of darkness."

Isaac Preston, Lockport, Ill., writes:

"I have had a talk with two of my neighbors about putting the tract 'Freemasonry in the Family' in all the families in this town where either husband or wife are professors of religion; and in some others. They both will help. My view of the case is that if people can get a perfect knowledge of the true character and conduct of the lodge and of the system of Freemasonry, none will join the lodge but such as join from purely selfish and unworthy motives."

We hope many who have not already done so will distribute tracts.

R. S. Ball, Huron, O., writes:

"I am quite confident my interest in the cause is deepened and strengthened by reading the Cynosure. I am sure the anti-secret work is progressing. To us it may seem but slowly but its onward progress is firm and steady. I believe it to be God's work and it must therefore ultimately prevail. Indeed I do not know that I entertain a single doubt of the ultimate success of our cause. I believe the time will come (and I trust it is not far in the future) when it will be looked upon as unbecoming for any Christian gentleman or lady to be affiliated with any secret organization and as a positive sin to be connected with the order of Freemasonry. I believe to-day Freemasonry is the great hindrance to the progress of God's work in his church. Unconsciously so many worthy persons who have had but little or no opportunity to become informed of its pernicious effects, even some who are affiliated with the order, really know nothing of its true character. * * To strip the monster of its disguise and reveal its hideous deformity is the work of this reform,—a work second to none of the reforms of the present time. It centers in the Cynosure and its able and worthy coadjutors. Be faithful my brethren, and victory will surely crown the effort."

LESSON XXXIII.—August 17, 1879.—THE CHRISTIAN ARMOR.

SCRIPTURE.—Eph. 6: 10-20.

10 Finally my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his
11 might. | Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand
12 against the wiles of the devil. | For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual
13 wickedness in high places. | Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done
14 all, to stand. | Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteous-
15 ness; | And your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace; |
16 Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench
17 all the fiery darts of the wicked. | And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word
18 of God: | Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all
19 saints; | And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the
20 mystery of the Gospel, | For which I am an ambassador in bonds; that therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul's description of the Christian's armor, which has been said to be "one of the most striking passages in the Sacred Volume," was probably written when he was a prisoner, chained to a soldier, and night and day in the midst of military scenes. The Roman soldier, with his armor, his weapons, his discipline, his service in maintaining the great Roman Empire, suggests the Christian soldier's equipment, and his duty in fighting against the foes of a kingdom grander than that of Rome—the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

TO THE SCHOLAR.

First get a clear idea of the ancient soldier, and the various parts of his armor. Mark how he was protected, and how he fought. Then follow out the analogy as applied to the good soldier of Jesus Christ. Remember that you are called to enlist and to fight on Christ's side. If you do so faithfully, you may hope for the final victory, and the everlasting crown.

What does this lesson teach concerning—

1. The nature, power and malignity of evil spirits?

2. The weapons of the Christian warfare?

3. Bible truth as a defense against temptation?

4. The need of earnest prayer for all classes, at all times?

THE SOLDIER'S ARMOR.

The imagery of these verses becomes doubly forcible if we remember that when Paul wrote the words he was chained to a soldier, and in the neighborhood of military sights and sounds.

1. The first piece of armor is the girdle (v. 14). This was an important part of the dress of the ancients, both in peace and in war. In peace it girded up their flowing robes, which would otherwise have impeded them in their motions; in war, it kept the rest of the armor in place, supported the sword, and covered some of the most vulnerable parts of the body. The girdle of the Christian soldier is truth; that is, a conviction of God's faithfulness or fidelity to his promises (Ps. 85: 10). It may also mean a conviction of the truth of the cause in which we are engaged, and of our sincerity in that cause. He who has an assured conviction that his cause is right, that he is sincere in that cause, and that God will fulfill his promises in his experience, is girded for the conflict.

2. The breastplate, or cuirass, or coat of mail (v. 14), was the piece of armor which covered the body, before and behind, from the neck to the thighs. It was generally made of metal rings or plates. The breastplate of the Christian is righteousness. Righteousness is both imputed and inwrought. In justification, God declares his people holy; in sanctification, he makes them holy: these two things are inseparable parts of "the righteousness of God." Probably, the latter is mainly referred to here. Holiness of life is as necessary to protect us from the assaults of Satan, as the coat of mail was to preserve the heart from the arrows of an enemy.

3. The sandals, or shoes (v. 15) of the Roman soldiers had soles thickly studded with nails or spikes, so as to give them a firm footing. The Christian soldier is to have his feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace. The Gospel is the Gospel of peace, because its message, spirit, and result, are peace with God and with men. The preparation of the Gospel is that preparation and readiness for conflict which the Gospel gives. The principles of the Gospel will do for the Christian soldier what the iron-spiked sandals did for the Roman soldier—make him ready for the march and firm in step.

4. The shield (v. 16) of the ancient soldier was about four feet long, and two and a half feet broad. It was generally made of wood, leather or brass. It was held by the left arm and secured by straps, through which the arm passed. This piece of armor is said to be above all; that is, over all; for it was a protection of every part of the body. The shield of the Christian soldier is faith. Unwavering faith in God is a guard in temptation, unites with Christ, makes the possessor a partaker of divine power, and insures safety. Satan, the wicked one, may shoot his fiery darts, blasphemous thoughts, suggestions of evil, and temptations to do wrong. These are like the fire-bearing arrows, which were sometimes used in ancient warfare, because they come suddenly and kindle fierce passions in the soul. As long as the Christian has unshaken faith, he is shielded from attack, no matter what it may be, or from what quarter it may come.

5. The helmet (v. 17) was a cap of thick leather or brass, which was worn on the head to protect it from blows. The helmet of the Christian soldier is salvation—not merely the hope of salvation, but the present enjoyment of salvation. Let a man be convinced that he is saved, and the blows of the adversary will be harmless.

6. The Roman soldier had a short sword (v. 17) for close combat. He had other weapons, but this was an essential part of his armor. The sword of the Christian soldier is the Word of God. Compare Heb. 4: 12. This Word is the sword of the Spirit, because the Holy Spirit furnishes it. This is the only weapon with which Satan can be met. The Saviour used it in the wilderness, and the tempter was foiled. If in the hour of temptation we attempt to reason, as Eve did, we will be defeated, for Satan can reason better than we. A pertinent text of Scripture will put him to flight.

7. Another piece of armor of the Christian soldier, of which the apostle found no emblem in the panoply of the ancient warrior, is prayer (vs. 18-20). This is necessary to success. It matters not how complete the best of armor may be, how successful or courageous we may be, without prayer, we are certain to be defeated. We are to pray always; not only when we are specially tempted, but at all times. We are to pray with all prayer and supplication, with all kinds of prayer, in the closet, the family, the social meeting, and the great congregation. We are to pray in the Spirit, trusting in his promised help. While we pray, we are to watch ourselves, our dangers and our enemies. We are to pray for all saints, because they are our brethren; because their danger is great; and because their safety and ours is intimately connected. Paul asked the Ephesian Christians to pray specially for him, that he might have opportunity and ability to preach; that he might be bold in speaking for Christ; and that he might be successful in making known the mystery of the Gospel, that is, the doctrines of the Gospel which are undiscoverable by human reason. He stood in great need of their prayers, for he was an ambassador in bonds; he was a prisoner in chains; he had few opportunities to preach; he was surrounded by enemies; he was in danger of becoming discouraged; he needed the prayers of the brethren, that he might speak boldly, as he ought to speak. If Paul needed the prayers of his brethren, how much more do the preachers and teachers of to-day.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUG. 7, 1879.

TO OUR METHODIST EPISCOPAL BRETHREN.—Next week, God willing, we shall occupy a large space with matter of the deepest interest respecting the working of the reform leaven among the M. E. churches. 1st, An account of a grand victory in Minnesota between an M. E. church and the lodge, in which the lodge is beaten and the church greatly revived and increased in numbers. 2d, A full account of the trial of Rev. A. G. Miller of New Jersey for his efforts in connection with Bro. J. T. Michael in promoting Gospel reform among the churches of that State. This will be a grand number to circulate among the M. E. churches, and to send especially to scattered brethren who are sighing for the desolations of their Zion. A large edition will be printed to supply a demand for extra copies which will be mailed singly to any address for 3c per copy. Orders by express 2c per copy. Send your order as soon as you read this, so that our publishers may get it if possible before Saturday.

—President Blanchard has been suffering for over a week from an attack of fever, which has confined him to his room. On Sabbath last his condition was improving; and we hope that he may be able to resume his usual duties in a few days.

ANOTHER WORK TO BE TAKEN UP

Last week a plan was suggested to remedy the neglected instruction of the children in the principles of Christian reform. This plan, or some better one, we mean to keep before the parents and Sabbath school teachers. Will pastors, Sabbath-school superintendents or teachers bring this matter before their schools immediately, and let us know how many will use a lesson on the false religion of the lodge once, twice or four times per year? How many will report during August?

Another important work we are now ready to take up is the circulation of tracts at large public meetings. This work has been done by individuals to some extent. In Chicago, at such meetings as the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, the meeting of the American Board, the lectures of Wendell Phillips, the monster meetings of the Christian Convention held by Moody in the fall of 1876, tracts by the hundred thousand have been put into the hands of thinking men. This work should now be extended, and every gathering of intelligent people who are not known to be interested in our reform should be liberally supplied with tracts. The tract fund of the Cynosure publishers, and the few but excellent tracts already issued by the National Christian Association, can supply the demand. Let us have volunteers in this work all through the country; else, if none say "Here am I; send me," Bro. Stoddard will be constrained to search out men for the work with labor and difficulty. To do this work let two or more reliable persons be associated if possible. If the work is to be done inside any building or enclosure have permission from the owner. Be on hand promptly at the opening or close of the meeting with tracts in convenient shape to hand out singly and with rapidity, and do your work with an occasional pleasant word. As meetings disperse the best opportunity is generally presented for this work, which can then be done rapidly and without annoyance or objection. We may be allowed to suggest that the meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Syracuse, October 7th to 10th, will be an opportunity the friends in that city cannot afford to neglect; and other meetings of similar character, — conferences, associations, missionary gatherings, lectures, etc., will soon be assembling by scores. These opportunities of scattering the good seed of a reform Gospel we must not neglect; and an earnest, united effort in all our cities and larger towns will carry the truths we love to thousands of homes, and the harvest will be glorious.

THE LODGE IN ARMS!

Attention has occasionally been called to the fact that American lodgery is transferring its seat of power from the Blue Lodge to the Templar degrees. The evidences of this fact are seen in every lodge organ, but more especially in the general activity of the Knights in marked contrast with their brethren of the humbler degrees. To reach the Templar degree and maintain membership in it requires a greater expense than the great body of Masons can afford; and men whose consciences are not well hardened find insuperable moral objections before reaching that degree. The Templar is the military degree of Freemasonry, and its bold but blasphemous assumption of Christianity is used to augment its popularity among a Christian people.

A St. Paul commandery of these self-styled knights last month formed a regular military camp at a pleasure resort near that city, with its own banners, tents, cannon, guards by day and night, and regular weekly drill. But more, every Sabbath, the St. Paul Dispatch says, the "Knight Templars religious service" was held. What may be the nature of this service, or to what deity paid, is not said, but may be understood from the character of the worshipers, who may be of any religion, or none at all, and yet be acceptable members of the order.

But the triennial meeting of the order to be held in Chicago in August of next year is developing the real temper and purpose of Freemasonry in a startling way. It is the intention of the managers of the order to make it as they report, "one of the grandest affairs in the history of the United States, as it certainly will be an epoch in the history of Freemasonry." With this end in view they have obtained from the city the permission to put up a building on the public property on the lake front for the use of the Knights, cards of invitation are to be issued to 100,000 persons and preparations to seat from ten to fifteen thousand men at a Templar banquet. This body of armed Masons, sworn by a hundred oaths to each other and against the general public, will thus take possession of Chicago for several days, filling the streets with their clamor and tinselry, flaunting their false banners of the cross before our hundred churches, and parading in arms in defiance of laws just passed and which are strictly enforced against the communist, who has not the wealth and the political supremacy of the Masonic lodge.

This order is a standing threat and mockery of all our institutions, civil and religious. It is increasing while the Blue lodge is going down, and 50,000 members are claimed in this country. It is a menace to our liberties which cannot—which must not remain.

— The Wesleyan Publishing House at Syracuse, have issued in handsome tract form, the able paper of Elder Isaac Hyatt on Masonic oaths, which was first published in the Cynosure early in June and in the Wesleyan soon after. Copies can be had by writing to the publishing agent, Rev. D. S. Kinney, at one cent each.

—The eight-hour strike inaugurated in Chicago by the cabinet makers a short time since, has entirely failed. Last Sunday a pic-nic was held by the eight-hour men and secret unions, which was very thinly attended. The laboring man who does not see fraud written all over a movement, which, pretending to find him time for rest and culture, yet robs him of his Sabbath, has not learned the first principles of an honest livelihood.

—The last Weslegan contains an account by Rev. George Richey, the lately appointed lecturer for Ohio, of an attempt to draw a neighbor Masonic minister into a defense of the lodge, but without success. The cause of reform would be safe in Bro. Richey's hands. He deserves well of the Ohio brethren; let them see to it that they deserve well of him.

—Another tract of great value has been prepared by Rev. B. T. Roberts, and is issued by him at the office of the Earnest Christian, Rochester, N. Y., entitled "A False Religion." Bro. Roberts has been able to present briefly, but with singular clearness, the striking proofs by which we know that the lodge is a "strange" and idolatrous worship. It should be circulated by the ten million.

—Among the hearty and valuable commendations of the new book, "Freemasonry Illustrated," issued by the Cynosure publishers, is the following from the veteran seceder, Wm. A. Bartlett of El Paso, Ill. He says:

"Masonry Illustrated" I think is the best book I have yet seen of the many that are in circulation on that subject, to open the eyes of the uninitiated. It is also the most difficult to be set at naught by the well informed of the order. It hits them where they live and breathe and the club used is their own standard Masonic authors."

—The Free Methodist is authority for the statement that the Banner of Holiness of Bloomington, Ill., has been rejected from the reading-room of the Y. M. C. A. in this city because of its advocacy of the doctrine of holy living, on the ground that this is a controverted topic. This is but another example of the worldly-wise spirit that governs some departments of this in many respects excellent and useful organization. Years ago Captain Bundy was not allowed to mention the subject of lodge idolatry with rebuke; and since the present secretary, Mr. Hemingway, came into office he has privately requested at least one gentleman to refrain from any remarks on the same topic lest somebody's feelings should be lacerated by a little truth spoken against the lodge. Personally, Mr. Hemingway is an agreeable Christian man, but these features of his management savor more of "the world, the flesh and the devil" than of the Holy Spirit who gives liberty in Christ. Great care is taken to count the number attending the prayer-meetings of the Association, and whatever other features as conduce to make a "fair show in the flesh" are carefully looked after, but "controverted points" must not be introduced. Is Christ then excluded? He has been the center of the controversies of the past eighteen centuries. Is prayer made for the presence of the Holy Ghost in the Y. M. C. A. meetings? Yet his abiding presence is all there is to the disputed doctrine of holiness which the Banner honestly maintains. Unless some ulterior reason exists for its rejection the action appears to us unwarrantable and un-Christian, for by the same rule some of Moody's best sermons, even the Bible itself might be excluded.

—Colenso, Bishop of South Africa, says that the Zulu war was a folly; that occasions for offence were sought by the British officials, or eagerly grasped when presented, and that the English possessions in South Africa were safe even with Cetywayo and his army on their borders. Many people in Great Britain hold the same opinion, and the waste of blood and treasure in a needless war is bitterly commented upon.

An Appeal from Father Preston.

Lockport, Ill., July 31, 1879.

Editor Cynosure:—In your issue of to-day I see a notice headed, "A New and Interesting Book;" and an item: "Another good work just begun for the Freedmen." Will you in your next issue advise your readers where Rufus Blanchard's book may be found, and also where contributions may be sent for "the gratuitous circulation of the Cynosure" among the Freedmen? I know a man who would like to buy the book and would give a little to help the last object.

One thing more. Is it not possible to induce our friends, the friends of our reform, to contribute more liberally for the support and furtherance of the cause? We really need to-day from one to four competent, able and earnest men in each of the Northern and Western States as lecturers. The very few we have in the field are working at low salaries and not very promptly paid at that.

How many Anti-masonic voters have we in the State; what proportion of them are financially in good circumstances, or such as we would call well-to-do, and how many of them have subscribed and paid from one to five shares of two dollars for the support of our State agent?

Our cause is suffering for want of funds, and the friends of truth and righteousness must "come up to the help of the Lord" in maintaining this cause. We want more tracts. Tracts are wanted on several very important subjects and no money to pay for compiling or printing. Will not our friends come up to the help? It does seem to me that it is honest to estimate the attachment men have for a good cause by the amount of sacrifice they are willing to make for its advancement. This work must go on. I verily believe it is the Lord's work, but God works by means and in the affairs of this world, by human instrumentalities, and these instrumentalities must be brought into requisition or the work must cease. May the Lord inspire the hearts of us all to do our duty and to fully improve our privileges. Fraternally yours,

Isaac Preston.

[The book may be had of the publisher, Rufus Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.; money for the "Freedmen's Cynosure fund" may be sent to our publishers, E. A. Cook & Co., by whom it will be thankfully acknowledged and immediately applied. The total number of shares taken in Illinois was 89½, of which 29 are yet unpaid or $58. Other contributions have been paid in also making a total to August 1st of $186.90 paid into the State treasury.—Ed.]

Our Neighbor's Best.

—Some holiness leaders snuff up fanaticism with every breeze. Brother, are you of this number? Then you are in danger, and a danger to others. There is a little fanaticism; but wait for it, rather than hunt for it. A little false fire mixed with the true is far preferable to a clean fire-place. If somebody mentions a particular sin, do not raise the cry "Side-issue!" No sin makes a side issue, but every conceivable sin raises a fundamental issue with holiness. Be careful that you do not cry down particular preaching because you have a particular sin that the Holy Ghost will unearth. If preaching a little on tobacco, or costly dress, or Masonry, hurts you, thank God for the hurt, and sanctify yourself from your sin. On the other hand, there are many sins. Therefore, do not let a camp-meeting run on any one alone. Albeit, if a community has one glaring sin, then let the Word of God shine on it till it glares it out of countenance. But we mean, avoid the work that forever drags out its pet ism. This kind destroys the good that all hands desire. Get light from the Holy Ghost about the presentation of particular evils.—Christian Harvester.

—When an organization which has always claimed to be charitable, as an organization, begins to have within itself guilds and mutual benefit associations among its members it must, in consistency, yield its claims to charity. It has proved a failure as a mutual benefit organization, and must consent to be regarded as something else than a charitable organization. There is no good reason why it should not disband and surrender its charter as a society formed for mutual benefit. The Masonic organization has of late years allowed its members to form among themselves mutual benefit societies, with separate charters from the State. Why is this, if Masonry is itself a mutual benefit organization? Is it not open to the charge of having lost or given up all its claims to being a charitable society? The defenders of this system have always argued that it is a charitable institution, providing for the support of the widows and orphans of its members, and for other forms of charitable work. If it has failed in this respect, what is left of it as a system? What are its objects, its advantages, or its purposes in remaining an organization? Why not drop everything but the new mutual benefit features if it is or ever was purely a beneficial organization? A church which allows mutual benefit societies to form themselves within itself must likewise admit that its claims to being beneficial are much invalidated. —Religious Telescope.

—We have men and women enough whose consciences are with us to carry everything before them in the temperance reform, but the greater part lack courage to carry out their moral convictions. Reform work is stubborn work, and it costs something. Selfish interests make men moral cowards. How few in the church can conscientiously approve the conformity of the church to the world in dress and fashionable amusements. Who does or can defend the belittleing, corrupting and abominable alliance of the church with the play-house and club-room, in its ecclesiastical entertainments, juvenile dramas, inglorious feasting, and innumerable catch-penny tricks to raise money for the Lord? Yet how few have the moral courage to lift up the voice of testimony against these abominations of the latter times! Oh for the strength of a single section of the spine of John Knox for some of our namby-pamby pulpiteers! We all need this moral courage in our several spheres of life. We need it for home religious duties. We need courage to resist the multiform temptations on every hand, and to discharge our duties as witnesses for Christ and winners of souls. We need positive courage in our personal efforts for souls.—Rochester Exponent.

—It seems clear that we are living under the sixth vial which comprehends the mission of the three unclean spirits, like frogs, working among the nations — moulding events, and directing their course toward the reign of anti-christ. The frog is an emblem of loquacity, and we are guided by this hint to fix upon the spirits of communism, ultramontanism, and scientific infidelity, so active and untiring in their respective spheres—croaking in every corner, introducing their doctrine into every country, talking with ceaseless industry from the platform and the press, openly and secretly, by every means and among all classes, pouring floods of insidious poison, and sapping at their foundations the safeguards of liberty and peace. All the fairest portions of the world are honey-combed by their secret orders and poisoned by their influence, until the institutions of our security totter to their fall. A day, a month, a year, may suffice to plunge us into the fiery chaldron of fierce revolution. Let us not be absorbed in the pursuit of worldly objects and fail to meet the tremendous issues which are almost upon us. Against the walls of Zion is all this rage directed. Upon her devoted head must fall the fury of this storm. Many will fall away from the faith, and many shall put on the crown of martyrdom, but in the darkest hour we are admonished to look up, for the bright and morning star shall lead the dawn, and usher in the glories of everlasting day.—Primitive Christian.

Thanks.

I respectfully thank some unknown friend for a pamphlet entitled, "The Oaths or Obligations of Freemasonry, with Notes, together with Authenticated Documents and Facts, illustrative of the Character and Practical Tendeney of the Masonic System upon the Mind of Community. OBITUARY.

From a notice in the Inter-ocean of Thursday last we learn of the death, at Wyanet, Ill., of Mrs. Rowena Hudson Stratton, wife of J. L. Stratton (brother of Rev. L. N. Stratton of the Wesleyan), and daughter of Timothy Hudson, Esq., of Ligonier, a staunch friend of Christian reform. Mrs. Stratton was for several years a student at Wheaton, where her husband graduated in 1876. Her amiability and the varied graces of her character endeared her to a large circle of friends, who will learn with keen regret of her untimely death. The above notice thus speaks of her:

"A lady of rare beauty of character, she had gained the respect of all, and from the place where she had come as a bride a little more than a year and a half before, she was called to the rest of the immortals.

"She was the only near relative of John Brown, the hero of Harper's Ferry, living in the State of Illinois, and also a direct descendant of Sir Henry Hudson, the discoverer. So from one she seemed to inherit a disposition to investigate whatever was interesting in nature, and from the other a love for humanity and the forms of work by which the world is made better. As beside the rugged cliff and granite wall, will sometimes grow the frailest flowers, so from such ancestery—stout heroes of days long and lately gone—she became delicate and possessed of the rarest traits of womanhood. For several years she had enjoyed the advantages of the best modern schools. She was a lover of art and things beautiful and good. The earnest words of Mr. Moody led her to Christ. With her religion was more than a profession, and meant whatever would make home and the world better, whether it be in song or art, culture or prayer. Her father, a well-known wholesale lumber dealer of Northern Indiana, and her husband, a capable young business man, and their families, have the sympathy of a wide circle of sorrowing friends."

Died, Stephen W. Hackley, in his 84th year, at his residence near Butler, Ind. He was a fearless promulgator of the principles which we advocate; heart and hand have ever been held out to us, and we trust he has sown seed which shall return many fold. The U. B. in Christ lose a faithful member of thirty-five years standing. His funeral was largely attended. All respected him.

THE STING OF DEATH LOST.

BY S. A. SMITH.

Kiss me, darlings, I am going
To the land beyond the river,
Where the golden crown is gleaming,
And immortal love is beaming
From the glorious Giver.

Long by faith I've viewed the city
Whose foundation is secure;
Long I've yearned to cross the portal,
Leaving sin and all that's mortal,
Gaining life sublimely pure.

I am going, O! the rapture
Filling all my soul with bliss;
See, the pearly gates stand open;
And my Saviour's smile, a token
Of undying happiness.

O! how trifling seem life's burdens
Now I've laid them all aside!
Strange that anything could vex me,
Strange that ought could ere perplex me,
With my Saviour by my side.

Just one more kiss, my darlings,
Angels now are waiting near.
Waiting now to bear me over
To the arms of Christ my Lover.
O! the music that I hear

Ravishes my soul with glory,
Farewell, loved ones, shed no tear,
As you come with joy and singing,
In your hands fresh flowerets bringing
To bedeck my quiet bier.

Let me whisper ere I leave you
With my very last good bye;
Death has lost its sting forever
For the humble, true believer,
'Tis not hard for me to die.

Follow Jesus close and ever,
Live on earth with heart above.
Hark! they call me, O! the sweetness,
Soon I'll know the full completeness
Of my Saviour's dying love.

Nearer, nearer, white-winged seraph,
Bear my spirit quick away
To the realms of joy eternal,
There to praise with bliss supernal
Through the never-ending day,

That Redeemer who has saved me,
Washed me in his precious blood.
Farewell! earthly hopes and pleasures,
Farewell! all its sordid treasures,
I am almost o'er the flood.

O the beauty of that city,
Human language fails to tell;
All the words that tell earth's treasure
Fail its glory full to measure,
Earthly home and friends, farewell!

MARKESAN, Wis.

POWER FROM ON HIGH.

BY PRES. C. G. FINNEY.

We need the enduement of power from on high. Christ had previously informed the disciples that without him they could no nothing. When he gave them the commission to convert the world, he added, "But tarry ye in Jerusalem till ye be endued with power from on high. Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. Lo, I send upon you the promise of my Father. This baptism of the Holy Ghost, this thing promised by the Father, this enduement of power from on high, Christ has expressly informed us is the indispensable condition of performing the work which he has set before us.

How shall we get it? Christ expressly promised it to the whole church, and to every individual whose duty it is to labor for the conversion of the world. He admonished the first disciples not to undertake the work until they had received this enduement of power from on high. Both the promise and the admonition apply equally to all Christians of every age and nation. No one has, at any time, any right to expect success, unless he first secures this enduement of power from on high. The example of the first disciples teaches us how to secure this enduement. They first consecrated themselves to this work, and continued in prayer and supplication until the Holy Ghost fell upon them, on the day of Pentecost, and they received the promised enduement of power from on high. This, then, is the way to get it.

HINDRANCES.

Everybody prays for this, at all times, and yet, with all this intercession, how few, comparatively, are really endued with this spirit of power from on high! This want is not met. The want of power is a subject of constant complaint. Christ says, "Every one that asketh receiveth," but there certainly is a "great gulf" between the asking and receiving; that is, a great stumbling-block to many. How, then, is this discrepancy to be explained? I then proceeded to show why this enduement is not received. I said, (1.) We are not willing, upon the whole, to have what we desire and ask. (2.) God has expressly informed us, that if we regard iniquity in our hearts he will not hear us. But the petitioner is often self-indulgent. This is iniquity, and God will not hear him. (3.) He is uncharitable. (4.) Censorious. (5.) Self-dependent. (6.) Resists conviction of sin. (7.) Refuses to confess to all the parties concerned. (8.) Refuses to make restitution to injured parties. (9.) He is prejudiced and uncandid. (10.) He is resentful. (11.) Has a revengeful spirit. (12.) Has a worldly ambition. (13.) He has committed himself on some point, and beeome dishonest, and neglects and rejects further light. (14.) He is denominationally selfish. (15.) Selfish for his own congregation. (16.) He resists the teachings of the Holy Spirit. (17.) He grieves the Holy Spirit by Dissension. (18.) He quenches the Spirit by persistence in justifying wrong. (19.) He grieves him by a want of watchfulness. (20.) He resists him by indulging evil tempers. (21.) Also by dishonesty in business. (22.) Also by indolence and impatience in waiting upon the Lord. (23.) By many forms of selfishness. (24.) By negligence in business, in study, in prayer. (25.) By undertaking too much business, too much study, and too little prayer. (26.) By want of entire consecration. (27.) Last and greatest, by unbelief. He prays for this enduement without expecting to receive it. "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar." This, then, is the greatest sin of all. What an insult, what a blasphemy, to accuse God of lying!

There is a great difference between the peace and the power of the Holy Spirit in the soul. The disciples were Christians before the day of Pentecost, and as such, had a measure of the Holy Spirit. They must have had the peace of sins forgiven, and of a justified state, but yet they had not the enduement of power necessary to the accomplishment of the work assigned them. They had the peace which Christ had given them, but not the power which he had promised. This may be true of all Christians; and right here is, I think, the great mistake of the church and of the ministry. They rest in conversion, and do not seek until they obtain this enduement of power from on high. Hence so many professors have no power with either God or man. They prevail with neither. They cling to a hope in Christ, and even enter the ministry, overlooking the admonition to wait until they are endued with power from on high. But let any one bring all the tithes and offerings into God's treasury, let him lay all upon the altar and prove God herewith, and he shall find that God "will open the windows of heaven, and pour him out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

ANECDOTES OF SUMNER.

Of Charles Sumner the Boston correspondent of the Hartford Courant says that there was something very sweet about the latest months of the Senator's life which will always be agreeable for his friends to remember. He was on good terms, apparently, with himself and all the world. He would go when in Boston from one club to another, and chat with his friends with much unreserve. On one of these visits the conversation turned on the profanity of a distinguished American statesman not now living. Mr. Sumner, who never swore himself, said: "Well, I have heard him swear severely; but as a rule nobody swears in my presence. The greatest mortification I ever received in my life in this way was when I was at a breakfast board with Lord Brougham. We had sat down at the breakfast table, when somebody brought a newspaper to Lord Brougham. It contained a personal attack upon him. The article was marked, and he read it through. When he had completed it he began a volley of the most scathing oaths that I ever heard fall from the lips of man. There was no limit to the curses he rained upon the head of the author of this piece. I was shocked and stricken dumb," said Mr. Sumner. "The only other occupant of the table except Lord Brougham and myself was Brougham's mother. She sat at the head opposite her son, a venerable and courtly lady, with an elegance and grace of manner that I never saw excelled. I dared not look at her for some moments, but when I ventured to turn my eyes in that direction, I found not a muscle of her face was moved. She was as calmly unconscious of what her son was saying as if he was talking in Arabic. The breeze soon blew over and we had a very enjoyable breakfast."

THE NEWS ROOM AT NORTHFORD.

BY MRS. ANNIE A. PRESTON.

[Concluded.]

He returned by the time the light, tempting collation was ready, and as he stood by the fire warming his hands, he pulled out that sheet of paper from his pocket, unfolded it and handed it to his wife, the boys noticing as he did so that it was filled with a long row of names.

"A good hour's work, my lads; a good hour's work," he said, rubbing his hands. But the boys could not tell whether he referred to them, to himself, or to Mrs. Bennet, who had emptied the mending basket in his absence, or to Mary, who was now setting the stitches for a second mitten.

There was but one periodical depot in the pretty, thriving village of Northford, where these people lived, and the next day it was noised about that Mr. Hyde, the agent, had sold sold out his stock in trade to the "Northford News Company," which consisted of a dozen or more of the leading men and women of the village, with Mr. Bennet as agent pro tem., Mr. Hyde having pledged himself not to resume his business within a radius of fifteen miles of Northford. He had received the purchase money of the stock and good will of his stand, and left town that same day.

When the company, every one of whom was present, were taking the account of the stock they had bought, they looked at one another in amazement.

"We ought to go after the man and lynch him at once," said Dr. Marsh.

"He should have been tarred and feathered," said Domine Van Cleef.

"He is amenable to the law," said Councilor Wade.

"Let him go, and with a good riddance, although he owes me for three months' board," said landlord Jones.

"He was an evil eyed, oily tongued, old spider, enticing our innocent children into his net. I will advertise him and warn other communities against him," said Editor McLaughlin.

"We will make a bonfire of the whole stock in the middle of Bramble Swamp, and call the place ever after Aceldama, or some such name," said Deacon Ferris, gravely.

"What is better than that," said Colonel Greenleaf, the paper manufacturer, who never liked to see anything wasted, "I will send up a man with some sacks, and at noon we will have all the school children in here to see this precious literary pabulum that rascal has been selling them crammed into the bags and carried off as so much waste paper, hardly fit for my pulp vats. It will impress them with the worthlessness at least of the miserable stuff, and the colonel shook hands anew with Mr. Bennet in thankfulness for his instrumentality in unearthing this pit of evil.

Colonel Greenleaf paid for the stock the price of waste paper, the few good books and magazines that had been kept on sale as a foil being saved, of course. The pleasant, sunny little room was swept and garnished. A cheerful, intelligent, Christian young woman with a living to earn, who was tired of sewing and needed a change, was secured as manager, and in a week's time the news-room was opened again.

All its former patrons, both young and old, were obliged to admit that it was far more attractive than ever before. In place of the trashy books and periodicals and viler stuff that the company found secreted in the drawers and under the counters of the former news-vender were now to be found the leading magazines, first-class secular and religious weeklies—as many of them illustrated as possible—and books, some of them amusing enough but at the same time wholesome, instructive, and with a purpose in their writing.

The fact that this revolution in literature spread before the people of Northford was effected by the Christian community prejudiced for a time a certain class whose reading tastes had been vitiated by the miserable periodicals and books—some of them under very innocent titles and other guises—but it gradually wore away, and larger sales are made at this news-room than ever. The consequences in this one village, which is a veritable locality, are—larger Sabbath-schools, increased attendance in the churches, fewer commitments of juvenile offenders, and a far healthier and moral tone generally.

Does it occur to any of my Christian readers that they have a manifest duty to do in this line in their own communities?—Christian Weekly.

NOTE: Almost without exception, every news-stand has either positively vile literature, or that which is the "A B C" leading to it. We can remedy the evil, 1. By sturdily and persistently, and conscientiously refusing to buy of a news dealer who keeps even doubtful literature. 2. We can ask publishers of newspapers, especially secular ones to please reprint the above story.—Evangelical Press Association.

THE PEACH TREE.

"Do you suppose, grandpa," said a little girl, "if I should plant this peach-stone a peach tree would really grow here in the garden?"

"It would be pretty likely to grow, I imagine," said the grandfather.

The child mused a moment, and then said, "Well, I think I won't trouble to do it, for I might be dead before the tree was big enough to bear peaches;" and she raised her little hand to throw the stone away.

"Stop!" said her grandfather; "was that a good peach?"

"Splendid one, grandpa."

"A good many years ago, little girl, my father was a boy, and standing right here on this very farm, ate a fine peach. 'I will plant this stone,' he said, 'instead of throwing it away.' So he planted it, and to-day the little girl he never saw eats of its fruit. Those tall elm trees by the gate, which make such a pleasant shade for us, he planted and watched for years. I don't believe he ever said, 'I won't water these little slender trees any more, for I shall be dead before they are big enough to keep off the sun.'"

The sticky little hand opened, and two great blue eyes gazed curiously at the stone; then, suddenly, without a word, she darted away into the garden, and soon a hole was made in the black earth, and the stone dropped reverently in and covered; but as she walked away, her faith must have wavered a bit, for a mischievous smile came to her lips, and she said, "I don't believe I shall ever have any great grandchildren, if it does make a tree; but I suppose there will be somebody always to eat peaches."—Sarah Tucker, in Christian Register.

MEN'S NAMES.

Many English surnames express the county, estate or residence of their original bearers; as Burgoyne, from Burgundy; Cornell or Cornwallis, from Cornwall; Fleming, from Flanders; Gaskin and Gascoyne, from Gascony; Hanway, Hainhault; Polack, from Poland; Welsh, Walsh and Wallis, from Wales; Coombs, Compton, Clayton, Sutton, Preston, Washington, from towns in the county of Sussex, England.

The prefix atte or at, softened to a or an, has helped to form a number of names. Thus, if a man lived on a moor, he would call himself Attemoor, or Atmoor; if near a gate, Attegate, Agate. John atte the Oaks was in due time shortened into John Noaks; Peter at the Seven Oaks into Peter Snooks.

In old English, applegarth meant orchard; whence Applegate and Appleton; chase, a forest; clive a cliff; clough, a ravine; cobb, a harbor; whence these names.

The root of the ubiquitous Smith is the Anglo-Saxon smitan, to smite. It was applied primarily to blacksmiths, wheelwrights, carpenters, masons, and smiters or strikers in general.

Baker, Taylor, Butler, Coleman (coalman), Draper, Cowper (cooper), Cutler, Miller, and the rest plainly denote occupations.

Lorimer is a maker of spurs and bridle-bits; Arkwright, a maker of chests; Lander, contracted from lavandier, a washerman; Banister, the keeper of a bath; Kidder, a huckster; Wait, a minstrel; Crocker, a potter.

Such names as Baxter and Bagster are the feminine of baker; Webster of webber or weaver; which show that these trades were first followed by women, and that when men began to take them up they for some time kept the feminine names.

Steward, Stewart, or Stuart. Abbot, Knight, Lord, Bishop, Prior, Chamberlain, Falconer, Leggett, (legate) either signified what the persons so styled were, or they were given them in a jest or derision, like the names King, Prince and Pope.

The termination ward indicates a keeper, as Durward, doorkeeper; Hayward, keeper of the town cattle; Woodward, forest keeper.

Read, Reed, or Reid, is an old form of spelling red, and was bestowed, as White, Brown and Black were, to denote the color worn, or the complexion had.

Hogarth, from the Dutch, means generous, high-natured; Rush is subtle; Bowne, ready; Bonner, kind, gracious; Eldridge, wild, ghastly.

Many Welsh names naturalized in English are from personal traits, as More, great; Duff, black; Vaughan, little; Lane, slender; Mole, bald; Gough, red.

Surnames now apparently meaningless had meaning in old English and provincial dialects. Brock, for instance, signifies badger; Talbot, mastiff; Todd, Fox; Culver, pigeon; Henshaw, young heron; Coke, cook.—N. Y. Times.

HELP MOTHER.

"I wish I was a big woman, to help you, mother," said a little girl.

"Fetch mother's thimble; that will help me," said mother, smiling.

Just as if God meant for little children to wait until they grew up before helping their dear parents! No. God gave them two nimble feet on purpose to take steps for mother, and eight fingers and two thumbs on purpose to fetch and bring and carry for her.

"Children, obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing unto the Lord."—Youth's Companion.

A Sunday-school boy of Maysville, Ky., was asked by the superintendent if his father was a Christian. "Yes, sir," he replied; "but he is not working at it much." That is the trouble with a good many. They go on a vacation and send their religion on a vacation also.

LETTERS AND PUZZLES.

CANAL DOVER, Ohio, July 27, 1879.

MR. EDITOR:—My father takes your paper, the Christian Cynosure, and I like it very much. I have not seen any enigmas or anything pertaining to the Puzzle Department for such a length of time that I concluded there must be something wrong with the writers. Come puzzlers, and let us make this department lively, and all who take an interest in it. As time would not permit me to study up any for the last few weeks, I remained waiting until I had time to study up a puzzle, which I now will send you, and if you think it worthy of insertion, please print it. Yours truly,

EARLY CORN.

A correspondent of Vick's Magazine gives the following directions for bringing corn to maturity early in season, adding that he picked corn inside of sixty days from the time of planting: "Let the condition of the soil and manure be the best you can command, and aside from the frequent weeding and hoeing, stirring the ground thoroughly, thin the stalks to three or four, three is best if you would have the largest ears and most of them. Pluck out every sucker and non-bearing stalk—that process alone will hasten your corn a week or ten days as I have to believe from experiment. I have added this year a top dressing at the hill, when the corn was well up—a compost of part plaster, two parts ashes, and two parts fine manure, which I think has been a great advantage."

Those who wish early corn should not only have for seed what is called an early kind, but they should obtain it from as far North as possible. Seed corn raised in Canada and taken South will come to perfection one, two or three weeks earlier than that ripened on the spot. The reason is that seed raised in the North has adapted itself to a short season, This is true, in a measure, of all seeds.

A BIRD'S FATAL AFFECTION.

The notion that canary birds are unmindful of confinement seems to be confuted by this story in the St. Louis Times:

A lady who lives on Olive street relates the following: A few days ago there fell in front of her window from a tree a "chippy," or ground-bird, such as chatter about the parks and streets. It seemed wearied and crippled. She picked it up, carried it into the house, fed it from her own mouth, and at night placed it in a cage with her canary. The canary at once bestowed upon the newcomer all the attention of a mother, and nestled beside the stranger during the night. In the morning the lady placed the chippy in the window, so that it might have the privilege of regaining its freedom. It plumed its tiny wings and went away. The canary mourned during the day as if he had lost his mate. In the evening chippy came back and perched upon the window. The sash was raised, and it flew in and nestled upon the cage, and seemed gratified. This was repeated two or three days, the chippy going each morning and returning in the evening. One day it went away and did not come back. The canary drooped, and the next day fell dead from his perch in the window. That night the chippy returned, and during the evening it mourned over its dead companion. In the morning it clung to the cage until it was turned out. For a few days the empty cage was hung in the window, and on each succeeding evening the chippy returned and chirped as if it was grief-stricken. One day it brought a worm in its bill, dropped it in the cage, flew away, and came back no more.

A curious case that has just come to light at Northbridge, Mass., of the death of two persons and the expected death of two others, all in one family, from the effects of cider-drinking, will reinforce the arguments of those who condemn the the practice. As nearly as can be made out, the father, aged sixty, mother, fifty-six, and two sons, thirty-five and thirty-one, have drunk since last fall between forty and fifty barrels of cider. The mother was taken with fits six weeks ago yesterday and died the next Thursday. The youngest son was taken with fits three weeks ago and died on Thursday, and last Thursday the oldest was taken with fits like the others, and Friday night his physician gave him up. The father is also in a very bad condition, "sees snakes" nearly every night, and gets up in the night and runs about the house crying "fire" at the top of his voice, doubtless suffering from delirium tremens. All parties suffered greatly. No cause for the cider-drinking can be found.—Springfield Republican, May 27.

Some Suggestions about Children.

The first essential for promoting the health of infants is keeping the extremities warm, especially through teething time.

Woolen stockings, that come well over the knees, warm under-clothing that protect the arms and legs.

More children die annually under three years from mothers neglecting this simple rule than almost any other cause. The reason is this: The extremities are farthest removed from the vital or heat producing parts, and, consequently, the circulation is more liable to be imperfect. By the sudden change of temperature from hot to cold, so frequent in our climate, the unprotected extremities of children become chilled, inducing a surplus of blood to the brain, or some vital part, which often ends in congestion or inflammation, and—death.

The next requisite is plain, wholesome food, at stated times. A child's stomach requires rest as much as a grown person's, and can no more assimilate cake, pies, candies, pickles, etc., than its brain can digest Milton or Shakespeare. A large number of infants who need additional food, and are partially brought up by hand, cannot digest cow's milk in this bilious climate; for such, steam-cooked oat meal, or cracked wheat, mixed with cream, will be found very nutritious and easy of digestion. Do not fancy because a young child cries it needs something to eat; it is often the reverse, which feeding would aggravate. An excellent method of treating irritable, nervous children is rubbing them thoroughly when undressed, night and morning, with the hand, slapping occasionally down the spine to produce redness, which calls the blood to the surface, relieves the brain, and equalizes the circulation. I have known this to relieve obstinate cases when nothing else would.

How to teach children "to obey, behave, and amuse themselves" is an extensive topic, and would require more space than the Home could give. I would, therefore, urge every parent to procure Harriet Martineau's little book on "Household Education." It is the most complete and suggestive work on that subject ever written, so simple, and yet so helpful, that I have never ceased feeling grateful for the accident which threw it in my way.—Interocean.

—Perhaps very few persons know that alcohol is used in making cigars. The cigars that won the prize at the Centennial Exhibition were sprinkled with New England rum. It is well known that rum and tobacco are closely related. Beside the saloon there is sure to be a tobacco store. In every saloon there is tobacco. No saloon can be run without tobacco. Every man who puts a cigar in his mouth, gets the taste and some of the effects of alcohol. This may be the reason why it is so hard for a smoker to give up the bad habit. It is time that the Gospel light was let in on this whole business. Many men smoke on and on, not knowing that they are smoking alcohol as well as tobacco. —Bible Banner.

Lutheran.

—The Evangelical Lutheran Synodical Conference of America closed its session in Columbus, Ohio, on the 22d ult. The next meeting will be held in Chicago, on the first Monday of October, 1881. Among the results of the meeting was the adoption of a paper, which was discussed several days, providing for various changes and advances in the rules of the church. Professor Loy, of Columbus, and Professor Schmidt, of Madison, Wis., were appointed editors of the new quarterly magazine, conducted in the English language, to be published in Columbus. The synod adopted a plan to form State synods, establish a general theological seminary near Chicago or Milwaukee, with three distinct faculties, viz.: German, English and Norwegian. Every State synod, however, is to have its own college. Three general synods will be organized in the synodical conference, called Western, Northwestern and Eastern. This arrangement will not affect the doctrine or standing of the body, but it is thought will better promote peace and harmony in the church. The Synodical Conference is thoroughly opposed to secretism.

Wesleyan.

—Rev. H. T. Besse writes in the Wesleyan, of the Lockport Conference camp-meeting, which was a time of victory for the people of God. There was no hesitation and timidity when particular sins were arraigned. For instance, he writes:

"Sabbath desecration received its merited rebuke. Rev. W. H. Willihan clearly demonstrated that the exceeding low price of cheese was the result of the superabundance of cheese made by running the factories seven day in a week. Should they make cheese but six days in a week, there would be one-seventh less cheese in the market. This would remove the surplus, and materially raise the price; so that they could get more money for six days labor than they now get for seven. Man always cheats himself when he disobeys God. This is true with those who ought to have been at this meeting. The person who seeks first the kingdom of this world is lost. 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'

"The demon intemperance conquered by Jesus, and the appetite for strong drink quenched by the Holy Spirit. Urbane C. Sheats said that he had been a great drunkard; he joined the Good Templars in San Francisco in 1872. The social influence of the lodge could not keep him from drinking, so they turned him out of the lodge. Last January, Jesus picked him up and saved him, he joined the church, and since that time he had been a sober man.

"Another testified that he joined the lodge but it could not save him from drunkenness: but Jesus through the influence of his church saved him. For years he has been a minister of the Gospel which saves men. The twaddle that the lodge is saving more men from drunkenness than the church of Jesus Christ, is a libel against Jesus and the church which he founded.

—Dr. J. E. Roy, agent of the American Missionary Association at the South, writes to the Advance of the work of Rev. Daniel Worth, a native of North Carolina, in Guilford county of that State: "A few years before the war he came back to his native State to labor as a missionary among the white people in Guilford county, in the Wesleyan Methodist connection. He had gathered half a dozen little Wesleyan societies. He did not attempt to meddle with the slaves, but he made himself known as an anti-slavery man; he preached the unprofitableness and the wrong of slavery; he circulated Helper's Impending Crisis—a book written by a Southern man to show that slavery did not pay. For this crime he was arrested and thrown into the county jail at Greenboro, in lack of being able to give bonds to the amount of $3,000. The anti-slavery people of the North raised that sum and released him." Rev. G. W. Walker, a pastor of three German Reformed churches in the same county knew Mr. Worth and commended his good character and Christian spirit. He told Dr. Roy that the little societies had all disappeared. The members being Union men had gone North by the pressure of the war or had been scattered. The letter continues: "But though the reformer died without the sight of a race of redeemed bondmen, his works do follow him. The vote of the freedmen carried that county and county seat for 'no license' under the 'local option' law. How is that for negro suffrage? In that same Greensboro there are now high-class institutions for the education of the freedmen supported by the Baptists, the Friends and the Methodists of the North. The M. E. church, which long ago came up to the standard of their Wesleyan reformers, has also in that town one of its church organizations which is sturdily carrying on the work which Daniel Worth began. So also our A. M. A. has its flourishing church and high school, under the care of Rev. A. Connet and family at McLeansville, only eight miles out from the jail where the slaveocracy had incarcerated free speech."

United Brethren in Christ.

—The Missionary Visitor has a portrait of Rev. Isaac Kretzinger, who made a forcible speech at the last commencement at Westfield.

—The project of a denominational college in the province of Ontario is being discussed.

—The old Academy at Dover, Ill., has come into the hands of Revs. Riebel and Hathaway and has become a U. B. institution and the school of the Rock River conference.

—The last American Freeman says: "The dedication services of the new church in the Needles neighborhood were held on Sabbath last, at 11 o'clock. The house was nearly full an hour before the time set, and at that time was nearly crowded, with many standing outside at windows. Rev. A. W. Geeslin, of Caldwell county, Missouri, preached an able and appropriate sermon from Neh. 9: 6, which was followed by a hymn. Revs. Geeslin and John Wayman then presented the financial condition of the new church in a happy and earnest manner, and the balance of debt yet remaining on the building, amounting to $121, was raised in about half an hour. The church was then solemnly dedicated to God for the purposes of worship, in a prayer offered by Rev. Geeslin. The trustees announced that the church had been named the 'Salem Church.' After another hymn and benediction by Rev. Wayman, the audience dispersed to enjoy the hospitalities of friends in the neighborhood."

Methodist Episcopal.

—Rev. A. G. Miller of Everittstown, N. J., was tried July 22 on charges of bad temper, evil-speaking and dissension before his conference, the real object of the trial being to break down the effort for the purification of the churches of New Jersey by brethren Michael and Miller. In trials of this kind it seldom fails that the accusers get a vote to suspend, no matter what the circumstances; such was the result in this case. A full report will appear in next week's Cynosure. Our readers will do well to keep closely acquainted with this work. Bro. Michael writes, "The oposition here is severe indeed. The M. E. officials seem to be determined to grind us to powder before we can even get a foothold. But they are hurting themselves more than us."

—Rev. W. C. Willing, presiding elder of Chicago district, declines to preside at the Desplaines camp-meeting this fall, because the Association decided to permit the running of trains on Sunday.

Church of God.

—In answer to inquiries respecting the denominational position of the Northern Indiana Eldership which was disfellowshiped by a lodge-loving majority, Elder Lowman answers in his paper:

"Do you hold to the principles of the Church of God?

"Ans. We do. Though expelled from the Indiana Eldership, we are yet members of the Church of God, and ever will be.

"How many preachers and churches went with you out of the Indiana Eldership?

"Ans. With a few exceptions none left the Eldership; they were dismembered. Soon after this a number of churches left and applied to the expelled preachers for pastors which made it necessary to organize a new eldership."

Congregational.

—Rev. George Thompson of Leland, Mich., mourns the death of Alanson Work one of the two, who were imprisoned with Bro. Thompson in Missouri for assisting slaves to escape. The third, James E. Burr, died years ago and was buried by special request in the College grounds at Wheaton.

—The church at Ironton, Wis., to which Bro. Hinman ministered before entering the lecture work has been without preaching for a year. Five have lately joined on profession of faith, and there is hope of having a missionary call there regularly soon.

—Pres. E. M. Cravath of Fisk University, Nashville, is spending vacation at Troy, Minn. He is son of Oran Cravath, who during life was the leader of our reform in Minnesota.

--A young man recently exploded a fire cracker in the church at Somers, during service, and was fined $22 for it.

—Rev. R. T. Cross of Colorado Springs, Col., has with his church just moved into their own building, and received at the same time twenty-three new members.

—The Congregational church at Wheaton is preparing new business for Elgin Association, which takes pride in "regularity." It dismissed from its membership nine members, one of them a deacon and another a clerk of the church, without any charges and refusing them letters or any other certificate of good standing.

MISSIONARY.

—The Church Missionary Society has begun a new work at Gaza, the oldest city in the world.

—The training school in Kiota, Japan, under care of American missionaries, has over 100 students.

—According to Gov. Sir Arthur Gordon, of the Fiji Islands, 102,000 out of a total population of some 120,000 of the islands attend the Wesleyan chapels, and most of the rest attend some other place of worship.

—The whole population of a village in southern Africa have abandoned caste and abjured their idols, which they have removed from the temples. They profess Christianity as they have themselves learned it, without any human instruction, from the study of a single gospel and a few tracts which were left among them by an itinerating merchant.

GENERAL.

—The native churches of South Africa have now a membership of 50,000 men and women; and the missionaries of all nations and churches in that section number 500.

—Prince Bismarck has signified his intention to have the delegates to the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, to be held in Basle, in August, carried over the railways of Alsace-Lorraine, on their return, free of charge.

—Careful inquiry shows that in the late war between Russia and Turkey, 292 churches, ten monasteries and twenty schools were destroyed on the south side of the Balkans. The destruction in other sections was even greater.

—Bishop Steere, of Zanzibar, on the east coast of Africa, has discovered that a translation of the Bible prepared by him in the Swahili language is intelligible to some of the tribes living round the great central lakes, and many copies have been sent into that region.

—Since the disestablishment of the Irish National church, nine years ago, the members of that communion have raised over $10,000,000 for the support of their churches. The poorer clergy are better paid and church enterprises of all kinds are carried on with more vigor than ever before.

—The arrangements for the next annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions have been announced. The time will be October 7th–10th, and the place Syracuse. Provision will be made for 3,000 delegates, and three churches have been engaged for the various exercises. The Rev. Dr. Mark Hopkins, of Williams College, president of the Board, will preside at the main meeting, assisted by the Hon. Wm. E. Dodge in the auxiliary gatherings.

—Dr. Fisch of Paris, writes thus of the progress of Protestantism in France:

"Already more than four million copies of the Scriptures have been sold (exclusive of those given) among the thirty-five millions of French Roman Catholics. Between the years 1832 and 1870, five hundred thousand young Frenchmen, whilst in the army, have been taught in the military reading schools, organized by Rolland, a Protestant elder, and in which the only class-book allowed was the Gospel of St. John. An unprecedented dispensation threw a hundred and three thousand soldiers of the French army upon the hospitable soil of Protestant Switzerland, where they were cared for with indefatigable charity. They brought home the news that the Protestant faith was the true religion. Since the holding of the last Œcumenical Council, the Roman Catholic clergy have made desperate efforts to bring France under the abhorred yoke of the Syllabus. Hence the nation is becoming awake to the fact that they cannot secure their liberties unless they break with Popery altogether. A most interesting movement has arisen among the elite of the seven millions of Roman Catholics who rejected Popery, but who did not know any thing better. M. Reivillaud, who was recently converted in a wonderful manner, and who knows his country well, expresses the opinion that within forty years France will be Protestant. * * * We enjoy now a perfect religious liberty under a government which is in a large part Protestant."

—Mr. Ira D. Sankey, the singing evangelist arrived in New York on Saturday. The Express says: A number of his friends went down the bay to meet and welcome him. D. L. Moody, his fellow-laborer in the Gospel field, arrived last evening from his farm in Northfield, Mass., where he has been resting during the summer months, and was one of the party which welcomed Mr. Sankey. Mr. Sankey has been in Europe since last November, and has been singing in different parts of Great Britain.

—On Monday afternoon a letter was received from Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes now with his wife on his way to his mission work in Turkey. He reached London July 19th, after a pleasant voyage. His present destination is Syra, Greece. Next week we shall give further particulars of his voyage.

—A Christian woman has opened a medical mission in Jaffa, and religious services in Arabic are held three times a week in connection with it. No other agency has ever taken such a hold upon the people of that place.

—The Protestant Alliance have issued a circular, asking that the law against lotteries may be enforced against Roman Catholic enterprises of this character with the same severity as against those conducted by private persons.

News of the Week.

—A committee of expert architects has been examining the construction of the city's half of the new court house and city hall. They report the work poorly done in some parts and recommend a change of stone and the rebuilding of a small portion.

—Advices from along the line of the Northern Pacific railway state that the harvest is progressing rapidly with most favorable weather. Superior crops are assured. The average yield of wheat is 24; oats, 50; barley, 45 bu. to the acre. The Northern Pacific will have 3,500,000 bushels of wheat for shipment.

—The public debt statement for July, issued August 1st, shows an increase in the debt of over $6,000,000, the largest increase of any month for many years. This extraordinarily large excess of expenditures is mainly attributable to the fact that, in accordance with the act passed at the last session of Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury was directed to pay out for pension arrears the fund held for the redemption of fractional currency, which amounted to near $7,500,000.

—The situation in Memphis is little changed. The white population is nearly all out of the city. Three camps are provided for the poor who have no means to travel. The colored people stubbornly resist the efforts of the authorities to remove them, and as they get nothing from the public fund propose sending North to raise funds and supplies. All railroad communication is shut off, and there is no escape for those who remain in the afflicted city.

—During his recent Western trip, General Tyner, First Assistant Postmaster General, passed through Kansas. He reports the tide of emigration into that State as never before equaled in the history of an American State. He thinks Kansas will become one of the great States of the Union, like Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. It is more than twice as large as Ohio, and if as densely populated, could support 7,000,000 of people. As to the negro exodus into Kansas, he says it is but a drop in the bucket, and that an equal number of white men going there would have attracted no attention whatever. He thinks, however, that the westward movement of the blacks has but commenced, and that Kansas will eventually have 500,000 of them, and that they will find plenty to do and make a good living. He reports enormous crops all over the West, and laborers will be in demand, white and black.

—John Kranz, of East Farmington, Polk county, Wisconsin, drove into a lake last week with six children in his wagon, to water his horses. The horses became frightened and ran into deep water, when the wagon was upset and Kranz and five of the children were drowned. One boy escaped by swimming. The eldest child was a girl of seventeen.

—Rumors have reached Washington that there is soon to be a formidable revolt against Diaz in Mexico in which hostility to Americans and American influence will be the ruling spirit. Minister Zamacona pronounced the rumors without foundation, and declares that the anti-American sentiment in Mexico is a myth.

—Eighty Icelanders arrived in New York last week, the first of that people to set foot on American soil since the time of Columbus. They will locate in Minnesota.

—A dispatch from Glasgow, Scotland, dated on Sunday, says the enthusiasm for Rev. Dr. Talmage continues unabated. During the past three weeks he has lectured nightly to thousands, and on Sundays he has preached to tens of thousands in St. Andrew's Hall. To-day he preached to 6,000 worshipers in the city.

—An enormous crowd was present last Sunday at the unveiling of the statue of ex-President Thiers, at Nancy, France.

De Marcere, Minister of the Interior, declared in a speech that the government was resolved to remain true to the noble ideas of Thiers, namely, a conservative republic, guarding the national traditions and the just influence of France in Europe and the whole world.

Jules Simon dwelt upon the firmness of Thiers in resisting even his own party when his liberal conservative convictions were touched. Simon concluded by saying, "France is saved. She possesses forever a republican government and liberty to think, teach and write. She has issued from a combat. It is necessary for her either to vanquish her enemies or to reassure them the definitive form of the revolution of 1870 is a conservative, liberal republic, such as Thiers created."

—The little republic of Costa Rica has more school teachers than she has soldiers. The army consists of 429 officers and soldiers, and the professors and teachers in the 316 schools numbers 482. The revenue or income exceeded the expenses of the government last year by nearly $2,000,000. The amount, it is stated, will be applied to the construction of a railroad from the Carribean Sea to the Pacific.

—A large portion of the wall of the import dock, East India Docks, Blackwell, London, fell last week, carrying with it all the hydraulic cranes and quay sheds. The damage is estimated at £100,000.

—There are 57,000 persons in the Durham collieries, the greater part of whom will be directly affected by Lord Derby's award as umpire, reducing wages 1¼ per cent in addition to the former reduction.

—A Constantinople dispatch of Tuesday says: "A terrific fire has been raging since Monday at Orta Keni, a village on the Bosphorus. The Jews' quarter has been destroyed. Hundreds of families are encamped on the roads."

—A cannon of twenty-four centimeters caliber burst on board the German gunboat Renown last Wednesday. Five men were killed and twenty-five wounded by the explosion.

—A Madrid dispatch says no complete extinction of slavery in Cuba is expected until the coolie immigration under the recent treaty between Spain and China is sufficiently numerous to provide laborers for the plantations. Newspapers which reflect the opinions of Cabinet Ministers confirm the announcement that the government intends to submit a bill to the Cortes in January relative to slavery in Cuba.

—There is a penalty for defacing United States coin, though from the amount of such pieces in circulation many of those who handle it would not seem to be aware of the fact. For the information of such we may say that the legal penalty is two years' imprisonment and two thousand dollars fine. Think of this, ye clippers and borers of dollars, halves and quarters.

—Arrangements for lighting the capitol buildings at Washington are rapidly being completed. The plan decided upon contemplates, for the present, the placing in the hall of the House of Representatives four lights, which, it is expected, will prove to be a great improvement upon the present gas lights. So soon as these shall have been tested satisfactorily in practice, other portions of the building will be similarly provided with electric lamps.

—Captain Eads is reported to have expressed himself fully satisfied with the results of his work. He was required to have 25 feet of water at the jetties proper, at average tide, and above the jetties, 22 feet. Official reports show that on May 13th there was a depth at flood-tide of 26 feet, and a channel 100 feet wide of the depth of 25 feet. In the channel above the pass a depth of 24 2-10 feet was found. By September next, it appears Captain Eads is required to have a 100-foot channel of 24 feet deep above the jetties, and the above report gives a very satisfactory result. He is further credited with stating that but little work remains to be done.

—Railway tunnels are, in the world, about 957 in number; total length, 291 miles. They are divided as follows: Great Britain, 140 tunnels and 87 1-2 miles; France 259 tunnels and 82 6-10 miles; Belgium, 20 tunnels and 4.07 miles; Germany and Austria, 270 tunnels and 51 1-4 miles; Italy, 76 tunnels and 19 3-4 miles; Switzerland 5 tunnels and 4.08 miles; North America 115 tunnels and 33 miles; South America, 72 tunnels and 9 miles. Of English tunnels the most noted for magnitude and difficulty of construction is the Kilsby, on the Northwestern railway, length 1 1-3 miles, cost $1,500,000, chiefly from nearly a fifth of its length being in quicksand saturated with water. The longest tunnel in England is 3 miles. The Nerthe tunnel in France is nearly 3 miles long and cost $2,090,076; the Blaizy tunnel, 2 1-2, miles long. The largest tunnels in Germany are between Offenburg and Constance. There are in 15 1-2 miles 29 tunnels of various lengths, the longest 5,600 feet. The longest and most interesting tunnel in Switzerland is the Hanenstein 1 1-2 miles long. The one of chief interest in Italy is the Mont Cenis, 7 1-4 miles in length The principal tunnel in America is the Hoosac tunnel which is 4 3-4 miles in length. The Mont Cenis tunnel is the longest railway tunnel. Mining tunnels: there are many of this class of tunnels, some of great length and importance, as (in Germany) the Freiburg, 24 miles; the George, at Clausthal, 10 3-4 miles; the Joseph II. at Schemnitz, 9 1-2 miles; Rolhschenberg. Freiburg, 8 miles; Ernst August, 13 1-2 miles; Victoria, England, and the Sutro tunnel in the State of Nevada, one of the greatest achievements in this line of the century.

—Russia is threatened with a new misfortune—to which our cablegrams have referred. The great plague, which was wide-spread in its destruction, has been stayed. Now the southern provinces, containing the choicest wheat lands, are being devoured by locusts. These insects, that find a home and breeding in the Caucasian range of mountains, have more of terror to Russia, where they hide the sun in their flights over the fertile districts, than an invading army. One district has made an appropriation of $40,000 to aid in exterminating them. As in our country all means have, thus far, been fruitless. Life in Russia the past and probably for the coming year can be spoken of only as one of suffering and hardship.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

A DISCUSSION OF THEIR CHARACTER AND CLAIMS.

BY REV. DAVID McDILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

An epoch in the experience of many lovers of good books will be marked by the completion of the new Acme edition of CHAMBERS' CYCLOPEDIA OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. The announcement of a work of such superior excellence, in form and style so convenient and becoming, at prices so nominal was more than a surprise to the reading public, and many questioned the possibility of its publication, except at great loss of money.

It is peculiarly a work worthy of universal circulation. It is not only a collection of rare literary interest, beauty and merit, a concentration of the best productions of English and American intellect, from earliest to recent times, but is also, in a large degree, a key and index to all, other good books in the language, enabling one to see and judge for himself which are best worth his reading.

Now that the work is completed, the publishers limit the number of styles in which it is made to those which have proved most popular, as follows: 4 vols. (over 3,200 pages), cloth, $2.00; 4 vols. half morocco, $3.00; 4 vols. half Russia, gilt top, printed on finer and heavier paper, with wide margins, $4.00. By mail, postage extra, 40 cents. AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE, 55 Beekman St., New York, publishers.

A LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE in 20 vols., nearly 20,000 pages, handsomely bound, and all for $10.00, with special inducements besides to early subscribers, is announced by the same publishers. It will be similar in character to the Cyclopedias of Appleton or Johnson, only more extensive, though but a fraction of their cost.

Other recent publications of this house are, Rollins' Ancient History, $2.25; Josephus' Complete Works, $2.00 and Smith's Bible Dictionary, $1.00. Robinson Crusoe, for 55 cents; Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress, 50 cents, and Stories and Ballads for Young Folks, E. T. Alden, $1.00.

A large number of other standard books will be added to their list during the season. Their complete revised catalogue, with full particulars, will be sent free on request. Address, AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE, 55 Beekman St., New York.

Will you have a State Lecturer? If so, who? and how shall he be supported? Get your church or society to send delegates. If you cannot attend or get your church to send a delegate, direct a letter to the convention. Let the friends know in some way what you want and that you are a live anti-secret church or individual. Topics of the Time.

The authorities of Memphis are at last compelled to own the dreadful fact that the yellow fever has control of their city. The terrible disease is spreading in every direction and daily reports come in of new cases in the country districts. The Howard Association reports that the fever seems to be following out the lines of railroad radiating from Memphis until it threatens every village ravaged last year. Destitution is increasing within the city and the alms of the nation will soon be called for as last year. This is a hopeless prospect for the southern Mississippi valley, but we are no less certain that He who "moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," well understands the ordering of this scourge. The students of history are beginning to trace to the great plague in London several centuries ago some of the most important political and social changes of England. So the next generation in this country may see astonished the hand of a wonder-working God in these present trials.

The Washington dispatches of Monday promise that the foul nest of Mormonism may yet be cleaned out. Ever since the passage of the anti-polygamy laws some fourteen years ago, when this evil was with slavery named the "twin relic of barbarism," the country has looked in vain for the fulfillment of the hopes raised by the Congressional denunciations of Mormonism. Instead of being punished we have seen polygamists sitting in that very Congress; the officers of the Territory compelled to wink at the evil through fear of an ignorant populace fed on brutal lusts by the Mormon priesthood; the army defied; and even the officers of government in apparent coalition with an outlawed system. President Hayes and his cabinet have taken hold of the matter in earnest. As a very important preliminary step, Secretary Evarts has sent a circular to foreign governments warning people against emigrating to this country to join the Mormons. This is a necessary notice to the world that Mormonism is to be hereafter prosecuted as a crime in this country. The Attorney General is also consulting with the expectation that the prosecutions will begin in earnest this fall. Should the President follow up so hopeful a beginning to a successful issue he will do much toward making this administration one of the most popular in our history.

One of those strange and unpleasant combinations in the history of ecclesiasticism took place last week at the meeting of the Marquette Monument Association. The meeting was held on the very spot on Mackinaw Island where years ago a Presbyterian mission outpost was held by the father of Senator Ferry of Michigan. Dr. E. P. Goodwin, pastor of the First Congregational church of this city, made the speech of the day, and Dr. S. J. Humphrey, the western secretary of the American Board took a prominent part in the exercises. That is one side. On the other hand, a fine address was also made by a Romish priest, Father Jacker, and a poem was read by another priest from Buffalo. The Association itself is to secure a monument and perpetuate the memory of a Jesuit, who before all the honors or profits of discovery was seeking a permanent foothold in this great Mississippi valley for French Catholicism. His great purpose was to secure this great country and bind it fast to Rome, thus shutting up the Protestantism that had begun to thrive on the stern New England coast between French and Spanish Jesuitism in front and on either flank and the Atlantic behind. God over-ruled their plans for good and made their discoveries useful for his own church, but that hardly excuses its ministers for commemorating a Jesuit plot for the stamping out of Protestantism in America.

Whether the German government finds its negotiations with the Pope misunderstood and too freely criticised by the press of Christendom or no, is not stated with the news that the business will be hereafter transacted secretly. Sure it is that in his ambition for the military supremacy of his country, Bismarck is incurring risks that may prove ruinous. He should be wise enough to remember the first Napoleon and the history of 1812–13. The last we hear from Rome respecting the resumption of friendly relations is that all the clergy who were exiled several years ago with so much ado, may, if they will humble themselves to ask permission, be allowed to return to Germany. As most of these Jesuit brothers are hard at work in this country they will rather thank Bismarck for the transfer than ask to return. The regulations of Dr. Falk, known as the May laws, will be quietly suspended, provided the Romish clergy obey the common law and that all nominations to new appointments be submitted for the approval of the government. The Pope, it is said, is satisfied with these concessions. He can enforce no terms more severe.

John the Baptist.

Who shall be the last great seer
That the world goes forth to hear?
What shall be his warning cry
When the day of doom draws nigh?
Whence shall come the magic power
That in man's supremest hour
Smooths the rough and rugged road
For the highway of our God!

Few and short the words he speaks;
Plain and straight the goal he seeks;
Round his path shall never shine
Festal pomp nor wondrous sign:
Lonely course and hopeless fight,
Rising doubt and dwindling light—
Such the lot of him whose name
Burns with more than prophet's flame.

"Change the heart and soul and mind,
Dark for bright and hard for kind;
Wash you clean from stains of earth,
Leap into a second birth;
People, soldier, scribe and priest,
Each from thrall of self released,
Live a life sincere and true,
For your King is close in view."

Thus appeared the heaven-sent man;
Foremost in the battle's van,
Herald of an unseen light,
Martyr for the simple right.
May we learn on this his day,
That in Duty's homely way,
Bravely, firmly, humbly trod,
Man can best prepare for God.

A Victory and How it was Won.

I have just received from Bro. John Atkins of Crookton, Minnesota, an interesting account of himself and of his experience with the lodge, which I wish to give for the instruction and encouragement of others.

His parents were English. His father, a zealous Mason, had his infant son baptized according to the formula of Scottish rite Masonry. When near eighteen years of age, the time at which an "adopted" son may be received into full fellowship, John, then unsaved, was about to take the steps necessary to perfect his membership. By a gracious purpose which was guiding his destiny, and which he has come to recognize in each event of his checkered life, he was restrained and brought to know the truth as it is in Jesus. With the new light he received at conversion he saw that the lodge was wrong and relinquished at once all thought of uniting.

In process of time he became a minister of the M. E. church, and about eighteen months ago took charge of his present work. There was an Odd-fellow's lodge and some other secret societies in the town, but the Masons had not organized. Last spring Bro. Atkins' attention was directed to this subject by the occurrence of a Masonic burial in the place, and he took occasion to express his views at a prayer-meeting soon after. This so incensed some of the irritable Masons that they hissed, hooted and threatened the pastor as he passed along the streets. Nothing daunted however he went to his pulpit the next Sabbath morning and faithfully applied the "sword of the Spirit" to this king of the Philistines, as "Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord." The issue between Elijah and the "four hundred prophets of Baal" was fairly joined and each contestant addressed himself to the work.

Bro. Atkins found that the Masons had circulated a paper on which they had obtained the names of several persons who had consented to unite in forming a lodge. He visited and conversed with each one personally, and in this way induced fifteen of the leading men of the place to withdraw their names and the lodge project had for the present to be abandoned. This in no wise placated the animosity of the defeated party, nor did it lead to an armistice in the hope of finding a "golden mean of compromise between the two extremes" of RIGHT and WRONG.

Like a wise general on the eve of a great battle, Bro. Atkins began to examine his military stores, and fearing they might prove inadequate to the demands of a long siege, he visited the Y. M. C. A. at Minneapolis, hoping to obtain supplies. But he was disappointed, Freemasonry being a "controverted question," their rules would not permit them to investigate or discuss it. Having learned to his great grief that his opponents directed the policy of this branch of Christian effort he turned elsewhere for aid. At Minneapolis a brother minister told him of the National Christian Association and of the Christian Cynosure and he came direct to Chicago, coming from the depot to the Association building he introduced himself and made known his business. He was soon supplied with the needed books and tracts and returned "strong in the Lord" and in a consciousness that "others of like precious faith" were "helping together with prayer."

He now felt like one of the ancient "worthies" who "slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day"; calling the people together, he read to them from the books he had obtained, reasoned with them as best he could and gave them tracts to carry to their homes. The stygian pool was stirred and its hell-born minions raged. Personal violence was threatened, anonymous letters poured in by scores from all quarters, brother ministers ("good Anti-masons") chided and warned, and the cauldron boiled and the witch-broth bubbled, and hell from beneath was moved at the coming of one poor but fearless Anti-masonic preacher to the front. Knowing that "they that be with us are more than they that be with them," and that "He hath his way in the whirlwind and the storm," Bro. Atkins kept right on "preaching the word." A deep feeling pervaded the community, and many were in earnest to know the truth on one subject at least. Believing the time opportune for special efforts, a series of meetings were begun which resulted in a precious ingathering of souls. Bro. A. tells me he had the satisfaction of seeing the membership of his church nearly doubled, and that among the applicants received were the fifteen leading men of the place whom he had dissuaded from joining to form a lodge.

Surely God's ways are not our ways, and we may all learn a lesson of trust and activity from this example of Christian heroism. Had the achievments of this brother over pagan idolatry been in some far off land of darkness, the whole religious press would have resounded with his praise; but since the battle was fought and the victory over Baal won in "Christian America" they will be as "silent as a grave-stone."

Bro. A. says they are moving in the direction of a house of worship on the plan of union. That they have no lodgery in their church, and that they have set up their banner and taken the field in the name of the Lord, and that their enemies, like "Sanballat and Tobiah," "are much cast down in their own eyes, for they perceive that this work was wrought of our God."

Christian or Masonic Benevolence.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Statements held to be true are often found to be false. It was affirmed and believed that the sons of ministers as a rule, turned out worse than other people. Statistics proved the reverse to be true. It is widely believed that Masonic lodges are eminently benevolent, much more than the churches, and that because of this benevolence much that is apparently evil should be overlooked. Let us look at the facts.

First, the preaching of the Gospel, which costs the churches about twenty-five millions of dollars a year does far more to mitigate and prevent human suffering than all other things put together. No nobler gift of benevolence or more beneficent plan for mutual and self-protection, was ever devised. Next to this comes the work of foreign missions, which if it had no other result than to extend our commerce, promote civilization, and make good government practicable, would amply repay all that has been expended. Then comes the work of general and higher education which is the outgrowth of Christianity and for which the churches do and have expended vast sums. In none of these have the secret orders ever taken any part, nor do they propose to do so.

For the relief of physical want and suffering by alms houses, hospitals and medical dispensaries the state largely provides. Yet all the larger religious organizations sustain institutions of this sort. Not one of them does so little as the Masonic fraternity, which boasts but one benevolent institution, an asylum for widows of Masons at Louisville, Kentucky. While the work of city missions with their extended plans of relief is in all our cities the work of Christian charity.

But let us look at facts and figures. The Congregationalists are one of the smaller of our Protestant denominations. In 1877 they report 350,658 members, over two-thirds of whom were females, and of the males a considerable per cent were minors, and yet these (say 125,000 men) gave that year for benevolent purposes $3,768,522.77, or more than $30 each. Of this amount $1,184,-356.49 were for other than local benevolence. Now the Masonic fraternity had 602,000 members, all adult males, and hence were four times as strong as the Congregationalists, and yet what great work did they do? It is difficult to obtain Masonic statistics, but something can be learned from Grand Lodge reports. The Grand Lodge of Missouri received in 1876 $19,864.64 and expended nothing for charity. The Grand Lodge of Wisconsin received in 1877 over $21,000 and gave nothing. The Grand Lodge of Illinois has for a series of years expended nearly all the vast sums it has received and gives not five per cent for charity. The statistics of Odd-fellowship show about thirty-three per cent of receipts expended for relief, and sixty-seven per cent for running expenses. The utter inadequacy of these orders to meet the wants of their own members is seen in the fact that they have found it necessary to supplement their work by adding mutual relief societies.

Let us look again to the work of the church. There has been given during the last four years for the support of Christian and higher education the sum of $16,733,000, besides $2,371,000 for theological seminaries. Daniel Stern, of Massachusetts, has recently given for educational purposes $1,000,000; Asa Otis, of Connecticut, for foreign missions nearly $1,000,000; Judge Parker, of Pennsylvania, to Lehigh University, $3,000,000; Gardner Colby, of Boston, $400,000 to different Baptist institutions; while Mr. R. R. Graves, of New York, gives $400,000 for Christian work in the South.

These are some of the practical workings of Christian love; there are others less pretentious, but not less beneficent. The Home for the Friendless in New York reports for the past year 787 inmates of whom 522 were children. There were received during the year 434 children and 200 adults. Situations were provided for 375 children and 207 adults. The whole number of inmates since 1847 is 25,-100.

Two benevolent institutions are sustained by unsolicited Christian charity—Dr. Cullis' Hospital for Incurable Consumptives in Boston, most wonderful and blessed in its inception and results, and George Muller's Orphan Asylum at Bristol, England, which provides for more than 2,000 orphans and for whose support there has been paid out about $3,000,000.

How absurd in the view of these facts, is the claim of pre-eminent benevolence on the part of the lodge and how foolish to plead for its toleration on account of its pretended benevolence.

Wheaton, Ill.

The Sermon.

Preached in the College church, Sabbath evening, August 3d, before the Wheaton Normal Institute, by Prof C. A. Blanchard.

Thou that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself.—Rom 2:21.

This text is one of the many which, in the Bible, call on us to practice as we preach. One of the principal reasons why men are evil is because they are so frequently unwilling to do this. There are few men who are willing to take their own medicine. It is easier to prepare a whole decalogue for others than it is to practice the first commandment for ourselves. Hence we find multitudes of persons who are laying down rules for their fellows and sharply criticising their wrong doings and short comings where we find one crying out with Paul, "Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver ME.

Against this universal tendency of fallen humanity the Bible squarely sets itself. It has no compromise to make with the defects of mankind. "Be ye perfect, for I am perfect," is the only language it speaks. The law is holy, and just, and good. Grace abounds to the chief of sinners, but it is manifested in magnifying the law and making it honorable; not in trampling it under foot. It says to no man: "Your intentions are right, your temptations are strong, your strength is not great, you may teach a perfect rule for others and live imperfectly yourself." But to every man it says (and more than to any other, to the teacher), "Thou that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself."

YOU TEACH WHAT YOU ARE.

This is a saying which is growing common, and it is well that it is so. There is danger that the teacher make the great mistake of supposing that his only or principal work, is to convey to children the knowledge contained in books. This hundreds have gained, and other hundreds can gain without a teacher. In intellectual work it is preeminently true that the man makes himself. Buildings, libraries, apparatus and tutors do not make the scholar. If the mind be dull and inactive, it may be surrounded by all these influences and remain unchanged. If, on the other hand, it be wide awake and hungering after knowledge, even though imprisoned among the quarries of Patmos, over it the heavens will be opened and angel voices covey the intelligence desired. There is no way to educate the man who don't want an education; there is no way to keep in ignorance the man who wants to learn. The Swiss boy who all day long leans over the side of his rocking boat to watch the finny fish, is Agassiz going to school in God's great university. He will learn because his soul is athirst and God always says to such ones, Here is the water, drink.

You will say to me, "Of what use then is the teacher and the school?" If those who wish to learn will do so, and if those who do not desire it can not be compelled to it, why not leave the whole childish race to "natural selections" and the survival of the fittest?

I answer that, though what I have said be true, there is use in the school. It would not be wise to turn our eight millions of scholars into the street nor our seventy thousand college students back to workshop, office or farm. The teacher may breathe himself into the souls of those under his care; every true teacher does this. If the teacher be an eager, earnest student of the wonders of God's creation, the scholar will drink in the same spirit. If the teacher teaches himself he will teach others; if he does not teach himself he cannot teach anybody.

SEEK EARNESTLY THE BEST GIFTS.

The teacher then is chiefly an inspirer. His main business is to make persons want to learn. No man teaches who does not drive pupils crazy over something. A person may have an exact and critical knowledge of many things, be able to criticise in the most satirical manner those who are learning for their awkwardness or their mistakes, and at the same time may act on minds as choke damp does on a lighted candle; instead of helping on the process of education, the only result of his work is to extinguish, if not the desire, at least the hope of learning. Alas! how many teachers make the mistake of supposing that they teach with cudgel, frown and sneer. These things do teach but they are the devil's own teachers.

If then the teacher is an inspirer it follows that he is the best teacher who leads his pupils to seek eagerly the most valuable things. Now a good character is the very best thing that man or woman can have. If one possess this he is rich though he have nothing else. If he want this, he is poor though he have all beside. The man who walks the earth homeless and naked and starving, if he be at peace with himself and entitled to the name of a truly honorable man, is a prince; while he who dwells in marble halls, is clad in purple and fine linen and fares sumptuously every day, if he be of bad character, is a beggar. This leads us directly to the thought that the moral influence of the teacher is the most important thing about him. If this influence be good, if the tendency of his life and work be to render those about him more honest, noble and unselfish he is doing a blessed work; if this be not the tendency of his life it matters not what else he may do, he is a damage.

THE TEACHER HAS A MORAL INFLUENCE.

It is necessary to keep this fact clearly in mind. Too often we teachers get to considering ourselves mere teachers of books. We look on our pupils as so many vials into which we are to pour each day the orthodox quantity of reading, spelling, arithmetic, geography, grammar, history, etc. Now we need to understand that this is wide of the truth. The teacher has a moral influence. Every word spoken, every motion made produces an impression that is as lasting as the human soul. The way you come into the school-room, the manner in which you lay aside your wraps, the tones of your voice, the glance of your eyes, all these things build characters for good or ill. There are some persons who go through the world as a rippling brook goes through a meadow, everything about their path is more fresh and sweet and beautiful because of their presence. There are others who are like the hot winds from the desert, blasting and burning wherever they blow. One walks through the street with arms full of flowers tossing out here a pink, there a violet, there a rose, and so on, until the whole way is fragrant and smiling with pink and crimson and blue and gold. The other scatters thistles and cockle burs and deadly nightshade berries along the path where he walks. The teacher can choose which work to do. He must do one; he may do which he will; and upon this decision will depend his usefulness. If he be a self-sacrificing, humble, faithful man he will be continually sending out pupils who will stand as a breastwork against iniquity, and who will be, like John and James, sons of thunder for the truth. If he be a selfish man, who loves his own ease and avoids every burden which men ought to bear, he may be as learned as Erasmus but he will be as mean and in the end as miserable.

LIARS HAVE THEIR PART in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone. Among all the virtues, none is more fundamental than perfect honesty. A man who will speak the truth whether he make or lose, is a valuable man. The presence of this one excellency will atone for, or at least render tolerable many frailties; the lack of it will render useless and offensive almost all virtues. One thing that the teacher should impress, both by precept and example, is the necessity of rigid, absolute honesty. If the teacher say, "I have fogotten," when in truth he never knew; if he cast promises and threatenings recklessly to right and left, careless as to the fulfilling of the one or the other, he may preach honesty like an angel, but he will manufacture liars by the score. There are no little lies; there are no white lies; all lies are big and black and ugly, like the devil, who is their father. The vice of falsehood has permeated the race and there is no resolvent but the Bible that will throw it out of the blood. Business lying, professional lying, lying by tradesmen, lying by politicians, and ministers, and farmers. It is the first duty of the teacher to stand against this dark flood and to speak the truth or say nothing.

IN A MULTITUDE OF WORDS

there wanteth not of sin, saith the Scripture. There are many sins to which those who are constantly talking are especially exposed. Such persons are almost certain to be slanderers, and they are nearly always liars. Nowhere does the Bible justify its claim to be the Word of God more fully than in its treatment of the tongue. It is a world of iniquity; it is an unruly member; it is an untamed beast; it is set on fire of hell. David prays God to set a watch before his mouth to keep the door of his lips, etc. I do not here quote words but sense. Now some teachers use a great multitude of words, and hence are likely to fall into sin. Weigh well your words, and unless you are sure that they are true and are needed, drive them back even when they stand on your teeth. The best teachers, as a rule, talk least. This statement has a moral and intellectual side and is true both ways.

BE PATIENT TOWARD ALL MEN.

The virtue of patience probably stands next to honesty in its relation to practical success in life. Next to dishonesty, I suppose impatience causes the failures of life. Laziness ordinarily goes along with these two as an equal partner in the sorrowful venture. The most casual reader of history has often observed that our race has made its advances not slowly and imperceptibly but by eras of agitation and struggle. Doubtless the long quiet centuries which separate these periods of strife do a work of settling and establishing principles which have been forged out in the fires of conflict, but the contests are the hinge points. Now in these crises, these times when, as by earthquake shock, the vast plains of humanity are upheaved, the quality most prominently exhibited is patience. We see it in Alfred, in Socrates, in Luther, and in Lincoln. After we have done God's will we have need of patience that we may inherit the promises.

Then, too, from the greater we may know the less. There are merchants, lawyers, farmers, ministers, and mechanics by scores who fail in places where a brilliant success is possible, simply because they have not the gift of holding on. I am not ignorant of the trials of a teacher's life. I know how sometimes the worry and work and care drive the teacher to the verge of distraction. Nay! I know how sometimes the teacher is driven clear over that verge. But if we wish to teach those whom we instruct to be patient, we must be so; and we must learn to be patient toward all men, just as the Lord Jesus is patient with us.

PROVOKE NOT YOUR CHILDREN.

These words are addressed to parents, but they come with no less force to the teacher. How often do we see parents and teachers whose only idea of instructing children is to command them. Why, when God was giving law to the world he only used ten commandments; the Lord Jesus cast them in a little different form and gave two while the apostle says that love is the fulfilling of the law. But these dear friends, forgetting these high examples, seem to imagine that their chief end is to say: "You must, and you must not," as many times as possible. The thing that they need to learn is that the law makes nothing perfect but the bringing in of a better hope does. It is not rules nor curses children that usually want, but a loving word and a helping hand. Exceptions there are and they must be cared for, but the danger is too many rules, not too few; too much law, too little grace and truth; this is the case in schools, churches and communities. If even a church cannot worship rules and forms without making itself an offence to God and a laughing stock to men, far less can a teacher do so.

HONOR ALL MEN.

Along with this duty of leading by example rather than attempting to drive by rules, comes the obligation of treating all with respect, even children. We hear much about the deterioration in the manners of children. We are told that young America will push old America off from the walk, whistle in his presence, take his easy chair and do many other ill-mannered things. There is no doubt in reference to this matter; the facts are as stated. But how does this come about? Who has been training young America? Is it not old America that has done the work? Now if young America's manners are bad who is to blame? I have never seen an old person treated disrespectfully by those who had been, as little children, respected. You respect the child and the child will respect you. This may not be a universal truth, but it is nearly enough so for practical purposes. Action and re-action are here, as they are everywhere, equal and contrary. If you call your pupils brats and blockheads they will return the compliment with interest compounded to date. Be gentle toward all men. Honor all men. In thirty years the Senate, House, State Legislatures, thrones and judges' benches throughout the world will be filled by boys who are to-day wearing round-about jackets, doing sums and swapping jack-knives in the common schools. To-day is ours, but to-morrow belongs to the children. They are clay in our hands; we can make them what we will.

O teacher! it is the image of God on which you lay your hand. Each day that you teach you are perfecting or marring it. Have a care, and remember that you must give account of your work.

WHO IS SUFFICIENT FOR THESE THINGS?

It seems to me that no thoughtful mind can contemplate the high privileges and awful responsibilties of this work without being elevated and awed. The walls of the narrow school-room widen out and the roof rises until you perceive that your sphere of action is not some little corner, but the universe; you labor not for time, but for eternity. How can you worthily do so great a work? You cannot of yourself do it at all. Your strength is weakness; your wisdom is folly. But there is in this world a Holy Spirit. Silent and noiseless he passes from heart to heart and from home to home. His aid you can have and his aid is sufficient. The Lord promised that he would send this Comforter to abide with us forever. With you in the times when your hopes are strong; with you when your helpless hands are crossed and your hopes in ashes.

Here brothers and sisters in this great and noble work is our help. Let us ever reach for that outstretched hand and we shall find that our seed-sowing will not be fruitless,but bring forth some thirty, some sixty, and some a hundred fold.

Lodge Notes.

—The stair builders of Chicago have just formed a secret union.

—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have resolved themselves into a church. July 27th a meeting of the order "for religious purposes" was held in Urbana, Ill., in which members from different States attended.

—The Odd-fellows have been very quiet about publishing the steady loss in their membership for a term of years; but a few days since the Grand Master of Illinois found from his reports that during the last year two-thirds of the lodges of the State had gained four hundred. He quickly telegraphed the news around.

—It is left for a Nebraska lodge to surpass in the style of Masonic mourning. At a meeting to celebrate their sorrow for the death of a former master, his chair was covered with black velvet "sprinkled with tears of silver." The spirit of Masonry tends to repress all tears of affection and sympathy. One of your thorough Masons on such occasions loves more to see "the tears of silver" than of love, and what he himself sheds can most of them be appropriately named from the reptile of the Nile. In the symbolic language of the lodge the silver tears represents the money paid into its bottomless bag, though as the friends of Mr. Rounseville found, not always is the amount thus deposited a ratio for the silver tears sprinkled on the bier.

—The Odd-fellow lodges of Pennsylvania number six more than last year, but the membership in the State fell off 5,243 in the same time.

—L. L. Mills, the Prosecuting Attorney for Cook county, is a member of Hesperia Masonic Lodge in this city. This office has been in the hands of Masons some eight years.

—The report of the transactions of the Grand Lodge A. F. & A. M. of New York, to May 1, 1879, shows a total of 717 lodges in that State. Total membership is given at 75,086, against 78,050 in 1878, a decrease of 2,964. Total number who ceased to affiliate in 1879, 5,051, and the loss by death 865. There are twenty-nine Masonic districts in the State, including one for the German lodges; and one for the French, Spanish and Italian together; Valley Lodge, 109, with 413 members, is the largest.

—A Masonic contributor to the Inter-ocean makes some unwitting admissions in his plea for the purification of Masonry. There is much to think upon in this paragraph:

"There are too many lodges, and the humiliating spectacle is exhibited of a scramble for members on the part of some of the lodges only equaled by the need of the treasury. We do claim that there shall be a caste in Masonry, especially of the intellect, as well as the social standing, and that committees should be most searching in their inquiries before a report is submitted; also that at least two months should intervene from the time of the reception of a name until the ballot is taken. Masonry is not a reformatory institution, yet how often a committee will agree 'Well, if he is admitted it will be a check upon him.' But the real reason for the admission of improper persons is, too many lodges and too little money in the treasury. Especially is this true of the higher degrees where money is needed and material to operate upon, to exhibit the work. Unless we stop our 'fast work,' and not make the necessary standard dollars, Masonry is destined to have a 'set back' equal to that of forty years ago. 'It is not the place that makes the man but the man that makes the place honorable or dishonorable.' But as the ray of light was kept burning through the dark ages by our beloved order, so will that light in this refined age bring us back to our ancient purity and perfection, and our work will be pronounced good."

Reform News.

Report of Northeast Pennsylvania Association.

Our meeting at Uniondale, Susquehanna county, on the 27th to 29th of June last was a success. It rained on each day, making the attendance less, but it was quite good. Ministers present who took a part were Elds. J. W. Raynor, S. E. Miller, Coon, Barager, Bronson, and Callender.

On the evening of the 27th, after the opening address by your correspondent, a stranger, who turned out to be an M. E. preacher from New York State, asked the chairman a question. Brother Raynor, who presided in the absence of Bro. Miller on that evening, answered the question, which being a vital one gave him an opportunity to most thoroughly dress the gentleman very much to his chagrin and mortification. He made two or three attempts to reply, but without any effect, to rescue him from his uncomfortable position. Poor Hiram looked at his watch and then withdrew quietly.

Addresses, lectures and sermons were delivered by Elders Bronson, Raynor, Miller, Coon, Barager and Callender. Many others joined in the conference and prayer meetings and made a good impression. Bro. Bronson, whose hospitalities we shared, and who has built a house for God in Uniondale, is a noble example of Christian devotion and liberality. It is cheering to see and hear him when his soul is on fire as it usually is. There are a few live people in Uniondale who love righteousness and hate iniquity.

The next quarterly meeting of this association will be at Green Grove school house, Lenox, Susquehanna county, Penn., on the 29th, 30th and 31st of August next.

Bro. S. E. Starry—A Good Man Putting on the Armor.

We have the pleasure of putting before our readers by Bro. Stoddard's permission, the following from S. E. Starry, the brother who renounced Freemasonry a few months ago at Clarence, Iowa. The letter is dated August 2nd:

Dear Brother:—Your kind and welcome letter is at hand. I was glad to hear from you. You spoke about my working the degrees of Masonry. I have been doing some work in Cedar, Jones and Linn counties of this State. I am making preparations to go out and do some work this month in the eastern part of the State near the Mississippi river. I think it is my duty to expose Masonry, and my wife as you know is a very strong and wide-awake Anti-mason,and of course she is in sympathy with me and anxious to see the good work goon. I am going to dispose of my stock and rent the farm and go into this business in earnest and do all the good I can—devote my whole time to the work. Do you think I had better work in this State or some other? I ask you this because you have been over the country through the different States and know where the work is most in need. I feel that I am called to this work and am ready and willing to go any place and perform it.

S. E. Starry.

A Letter from Bro. Lipp of Missouri.

Martinstown, Putnan Co., Mo., July 23, 1879.

To all Friends of Truth and Freedom:—I am made to thank God for his delivering mercy among the sons of men. Almost every day while speaking or preaching I hear some poor deceived soul's confession of the folly in Baal worship. The good Lord granted us an especial shower the first Lord's day in July. Here within two miles of home I was speaking on 1 Kings 18:21: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God follow him, but if Baal then follow him." I called attention to 2 Kings 23, Ez. 8, 2 Pet. 2, Jude, and Rev. 2, and asked all classes now to consider and see if words could be found to show any fact clearer than that all manner of emblem ceremonies, no matter what they may be called, or for whatever purpose used (except the public services of the church of Christ in communion) they are no more than ancient wicked heathen Baalism; God forbade all such in the law kingdom, and Israel could not prosper while practicing such things; and God positively rejects all such in the Gospel kingdom. I ask grangers and all to tell by what rule except the devil's could they claim to be loyal citizens of the kingdom of Christ? There being but two kingdoms in the world, we are the subjects of one or the other. We are leading those whom we can influence into the service of one or the other. We can not act in both at once, neither dare we claim the right of citizenship in both at the same time. O how great the contrast between the two! In Christ's sacred kingdom all things must be held up and we demand the examination of all. The devil's affairs like himself must be kept hid behind the most man-degrading and God-dishonoring pledges and brutal oaths and obligations, with such blasphemous ceremonies as the cunning of his serpent nature can invent or persuade his subjects to practice.

Let me say to all lovers of Christian freedom, if you have not a supply of books on the secret societies, so as to know how beastly corrupt they are, and have not the means to buy, do not forget to study the Word of God and the nature of the American compact; and see that as citizens of the United States we have no need of such things, and as followers of Christ Jesus the Lord we dare not try to use them, else we should be found in open rebellion against the laws of God. To those brethren who have inquired how to manage these younger children of Masonry, such as Good Templarism, the grange, etc., don't forget that while the cause of temperance and farmers' interests should be attended to, there is no need or sense in having a pagan tail tied to either one. The farmers' club movement can do all the honorable business that the grange can do, with a great deal less expense and no blindfold in it. One can not be a Christian without being a temperate man, and with the word of God in his hand and the Spirit in his heart what more does he need or can he use.

The cause of truth is driving the lovers of darkness to the wall in this part. I have been lecturing some since I last wrote, and had the pleasure of a joint discussion with an M. E. preacher and an Odd-fellow, on the Christlessness of that order. Before we were done he and his friends looked, and I believe felt, as I would to God all such Baalites might feel till they learn to renounce the hidden works of dishonesty. I rode one whole night and spent three days to get with the Missouri State grange lecturer, to show my objections to the grange, but he did not have time, after publicly calling for any one in the community to show reasons of objection while he was here, or else not be blowing their horn when he had left. So I can "blow" on. Several asked why he did so. I said because likely he having learned my objections knew he could not meet them, and dreaded exposure.

Yours truly, A. B. Lipp.

Correspondence.

Footprints of a Warning Power.

Editor Cynosure:—Not without some misgivings for so little as I have been able to encourage anti-secretism in the past, I am yet thankful for ability, faith and firmness to do even the little in the holy uprising against wickedness—the warfare against secret, personal as well as national foes. Notwithstanding all that "hath hindered me" by way of secular duties and enterprises on one hand, and no small prejudice on the other, yet I have, by Divine aid held up some anti-secret light before secret-loving friends, as the Word and Spirit has inspired; and I am gratified to believe the season of more usefulness steadily approaches, at least in the circle of my influence and means.

I see by a note in response to a late little money letter, to aid Christian reform work in northern New York, that the little just pays for the pulpit for the new Free Methodist church in Watertown now being converted from a Papist shrine to the worship of a living Christ. All right, dear brethren in Christ Jesus, may God bless every "mite." May God both bless and honor your work and be honored by you at that altar is my prayer.

The following notice and request suggestive of recent events here may interest some of your many readers:

National Home, D. V. S.,
Northwestern Branch,
July 26th, 1879.

General Order No. 84.—Hon. C. F. G. Collins, Grand Master; J. W. Woodhull, Grand Secretary; Hon. Gabriel Bouck, H. L. Palmer, A. V. H. Carpenter and others, members of the Masonic fraternity have kindly consented to lay the corner-stone of the new hospital. * * * All residents of the Home are requested to participate in the exercises, and a cordial invitation is extended to citizens generally. * * All inmates not excused on account of duty or disability will assemble in uniform under their company sergeants, who will report their companies to the sergeant major, etc.

On considering which I penned the following request and handed to the gentlemanly and kindly disposed chief officer:

National Home, D. V. S.,
Northwestern Branch,
July 29th, 1879.

Capt. Wm. H. Lough, Commandant,

Dear Sir: In accordance with General Order No. 84, all inmates (except those specified) are expected to be in procession at parade of laying corner-stone of the new hospital this P. M. Being conscientiously opposed to all Masonic pre-eminence in our land of blood-bought freedom, even of conscience and Christian duty; and having rather the fear of God than the unprovoked displeasure of men before me, though in such a system combined, I earnestly beg to be excused from participating in honoring that institution by any means, if not absolutely essential to the discipline of the "Home."

Very respectfully in obedience to orders.

I signed my name and soon after received the request returned written on the back, "Approved, Wm. H. Lough, Commandant."

Our commandant is no Mason, but a truer, better man. His assistants vary; some are of that persuasion, others are not. For myself I used the day at will; partly to flash a little light on the minds of several groups by the use of the Cynosure and tracts which caused quite a flutter and some harsh denials and squirming. Others were glad. I hope for more time and leaves ere long to help the squirming, or what not else, to become more general, and some will manifest this desire for "more light" by subscribing for the blazing Cynosure; and may soul saving and unshackling become mighty indeed to the honor of the lodge-rejected Christ.

Not being present to witness minutely the number and proceedings, yet I was near enough to hear distinctly the closing, Christless prayer after the stone was settled away. Not by the Grand Chaplain, an Episcopal rector, who is also the Protestant chaplain of this "Branch," but a prayer (?) by the Grand Master Collins, as Christless as any to Baal ever was, and all amid the pretty little aprons and fancy showerings of corn, wine and oil. Some 300 or 400 ex-soldiers, all told, were in the assembly, a sprinkling of citizens and 160 to 175 Masons in all, of whom about thirty were of the fifth-libation, wine-drinking degree. These Knight Templars in gay colored gloves, cuffs and crosses, swords, military hats and ostrich plumes, heading the column at seven P. M. marched to the well-arranged repast prepared, not forgetting to rattle in due and ample style the temperance tone of the order on the beer tables, until the return train whistled up and soon all the happy grips and good-bys were exchanged and the train moved off. A voice was heard, "Three cheers for Masonry," and a faint response was given, while a groan seemed more properly given by at least one not disposed to honor the swindling, deceptive despotism, doubtless an Anti.

Hoping that our Wisconsin State meeting at Evansville may be another well-attended success, and Christ again be exalted among believers there, I remain in better hopes and strong faith in God.

S. E. Orvis.

Thank God for Another Renunciation.

St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill..
August 4, 1879.

Dear Cynosure:—I wish to add my name to the list of seceding Masons. I am sick of it. I think it is eating the real life out of the churches. I know it is in this wicked city. We have had but one minister in the M. E. church for the last fifteen years who was not a Mason. They are not preaching for Christ, but for the loaves and fishes. I wish you God speed; may this evil be rooted out of the land. I send the Cynosure on its rounds among the brethren, being now in my 79th year but enlisted for this war.

Yours in the faith that this evil will be blotted out of the land.

The New Reform Song Book.

Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 5, '79.
Clark's Cottage on the Hillside,

Brother Kellogg:—My new Reform Song Book is now about ready for the press. It will contain nearly 200 choice songs, ballads and hymns, original and selected; embracing all subjects of reform, not only, but national, social, devotional and miscellaneous pieces, with a well spiced variety of temperance, prohibition, revival and anti-secrecy songs from some of our best writers. It will comprise a greater variety of songs on a greater variety of subjects than any other book of the kind. I want to get it out in time for the fall and winter series of public meetings, social gatherings and conventions.

Those who wish to help out the first edition and get the first impression, which will be printed in convenient form with good material, and in nice paper covers, can have six for $1.75; twelve copies for $3.35; fifty copies for $14, and one hundred copies for $25; single copies 35 cents.

Persons wishing to obtain the book for themselves or others, to furnish choirs or clubs or aid in its circulation, please send their address and the number of copies wanted to me at Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y., box 15, that I may know about how large an edition to issue. The money need not be sent until the work is out.

Yours truly,
Geo. W. Clark.

"I went out on Monday last over these prairies three miles on foot to get subscribers. I came across a man, showed him a paper and said to him, 'Would you like such a paper?' He said, 'No, it is too radical.' I said to him that I lived within forty miles of Morgan when they took him and put him to death. 'Well,' said he, 'I am a Morgan killer.' I did not think he knew how this sounded. I saw by his looks he was not old enough to be there at that time. You see we have great battles to fight. I mean by the help of God to struggle on the remainder of my days; they will be but few. I was 24 years old when the Masons took Morgan. So you can see I was old enough to remember the circumstances that grew out of it. Down went the lodges here in the North, but they were kept up in the South, I believe. I have known Masons to clear each other in courts, right or wrong."

"I like to have all who will read the Cynosure, for it is indeed a valuable paper, and if the Christian people of the country would read its columns, and heed its admonitions, Masonry and all kindred orders would soon be things of the past, of which the historian would say as little as possible and be just."

Trial of Rev. A. G. Miller.

A LOCAL PREACHER IN THE M. E. CHURCH.

In order that the proceedings of the trial may be understood it is necessary to insert here a copy of

THE PLAN OF OUR WORK.

We are connected with the M. E. church and love its doctrines and Discipline. Believing, however, that its present worldly condition unfits it for taking proper care of truly converted souls, we intend to organize any who may be saved through our labors, provided they are willing, into societies, and to govern them by the Discipline as far as that book will apply to such societies.

We want in every charge of the Newark Conference an earnest Christian man or woman who is a member of our church to obtain signatures to the following:

We, the undersigned, members of the M. E. church within the bounds of the Newark Conference, believing "that God's design in raising up the Methodist Episcopal church in America was to reform the continent and spread Scriptural holiness over these lands;" and believing that the practice of our church in many respects is not what it should be, and not what its Discipline requires, thus greatly hindering the Lord's work, we are in favor of holding, sometime during the present conference year (1879-80), a reform convention for the purpose of considering the differences between our Discipline and our practice. And as Rev. J. T. Michael and Rev. A. G. Miller propose to hold such convention, we will assist them as far as they act according to our convictions of right.

If you wish to co-operate with us in the manner here indicated, you should write to us before commencing the work. Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it, go ahead without it, but be sure you have the Holy Ghost. You should also secure a supply of our two tracts entitled, "Some Differences between the Discipline and Practice of the M. E. Church," and "The M. E. Church and Freemasonry." By applying to either of us they can be obtained at the rate of ten pages for one cent.

We will be glad to correspond with persons in other conferences who will unite with us in a similar effort in their own communities. It is only necessary to test our ordinary practice by our General Rules (Discipline, ¶31-¶35), to see that there is a pressing need of reform throughout the church.

Support. Persons organized by us into societies will, of course, be expected to contribute according to their ability to our support. Contributions from others working or sympathizing with us will be received, but no unprincipled schemes will be resorted to in order to get money from the people.

J. T. Michael, Milford, N. J. A. G. Miller, Everettstown, N. J.

The trial was held in the M. E. church, Bloomsbury, N. J., July 22, 1879. The religious exercises were conducted by the president, Rev. C. E Little. Rev. J. M. Meeker was appointed secretary.

CHARGES AND SPECIFICATIONS.

Charge I. Improper tempers, words and actions

Specification 1. Asserting in printed form "that the present worldly condition of the M. E. church unfits it for taking proper care of truly converted souls," he at the same time being a regularly constituted local preacher in the M. E. church.

Specification 2. Asserting in the same manner and form an intention to organize independent societies, expecting to be supported by them, and to govern them by the Discipline as far as that book will apply to such societies, such action being without warrant or authority in our book of Discipline.

Specification 3. Proposing in the same manner and form to do these things in defiance of and in opposition to the regularly appointed pastors of our churches, he having instituted and conducted religious services at various points without consulting with or receiving the consent of his pastor or the preachers in charge.

Specification 4. A manifest want of Christian temper and integrity in asserting and carrying out these disorderly measures while at the same time declaring his love for the M. E. church.

Charge II. Evil speaking.

[This charge and the specifications accompanying it refer to certain statements made by Bro. Miller before an audience in Frenchtown, New Jersey; but as these statements were not repeated after the first reprehension, both the charge and the specifications were ruled out by the president. (See Discipline ¶ 215.)

It is not admitted that these statements would have sustained the charge. Bro. Miller was prepared to show that what he said was not evil speaking.]

Charge III. Dissension.

Specification 1. In inveighing against the Discipline of the church by proposing in printed form to organize independent societies and to govern the same, inviting loyal members of our church to cooperate with him in this disorderly work in opposition to the regular order and authority of our church.

Specification 2. Having been reproved for these improper words and actions as the Discipline directs, said Miller declared to his pastor that he expected to be called to answer, and that the sooner such investigation took place the better, that the verdict of any ecclesiastical court would in no wise change his convictions of right and duty, and in harmony with such assertions continues in the same disorderly course without acknowledgement of his fault or humiliation for the same.

The bill of charges was signed by Rev. E. S. Jamieson, who is Bro. Miller's successor as pastor of the Everettstown and Little York charge with which the accused was connected as a local preacher at the time of his trial.

The accused, through his counsel, Rev. J. T. Michael, pleaded "Not guilty." The first charge was then taken up.

THE ACCUSER PRESENTS HIS TESTIMONY.

Rev. E. S. Jamieson.—I am sorry to occupy this position. I am not moved by a spirit of malice toward the brother, but by a spirit of loyalty toward the church. To sustain the first specification I read from the circular entitled "The Plan of our Work," as follows: "Believing, however, that its present worldly condition unfits it for taking proper care of truly converted souls."

Cross examined.—Q. Does Bro. Miller say that the present worldly condition of the M. E. church unfits it for taking proper care of truly converted souls, or that he believes such to be the case?

A. The word believing is used.

Q. Do you know of anything in the Discipline that forbids such a statement?

A My interpretation is that such a statement is not according to the Discipline.

Q. I did not ask for your interpretation, but whether you knew of anything in the Discipline to forbid such a statement?

A. I know of no such printed prohibition.

Q. Is there anything in the spirit of the Discipline to forbid this statement?

A. I do not think it accords with the spirit.

Specification 2.—The plaintiff read as evidence that part of the "Plan" which refers to the organization of societies.

Cross examined.—Can you produce anything to show that Bro. Miller declared in printed form an intention to organize independent societies?

A. (Reads as before.) If that is not independent I do not know what is.

Q. Is the word "independent" used?

A. It is not, but such is my interpretation of this paragraph.

Q. Is there anything in the Discipline to forbid the organization of such societies as are referred to in the "Plan?"

A. I think there is.

Q. Can you show the place?

A. Not at this moment; but I could in time, I think.

Specification 3.—Plaintiff reads from the "Plan:" "Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it, go ahead without it, but be sure you have the Holy Ghost."

President. Is this all the proof you have to sustain this specification?

Plaintiff. This is given to prove the first part only. Meetings have been held by Bro. Miller at Hickory school house and at other places.

President. Do you know this?

Plaintiff. I know it by common report.

Cross examined.—Q. Has Bro. Miller ever stated in printed form that he does this work in defiance of and in opposition to the regularly appointed pastors of our churches?

A. (Reads from the "Plan.") "Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it go ahead without it, but be sure you have the Holy Ghost."

Committeeman. When was the meeting at Hickory school house held?

A. Bro. Miller preaches there once in every four weeks.

Committeeman. Did you personally object to his holding these meetings.

A. I did.

Committeeman. Did you ask him to desist?

A. I did.

Committeeman. Did he desist?

A. He did not.

Cross examined.—Q. Did Bro. Miller ever preach within the bounds of your charge?

A. Yes, sir. He preached in Hickory school house.

Q. How do you know that this school house is within the bounds of your charge?

A. That seems a strange question. My people live around there.

President. Do your people live beyond it?

A. I know of none beyond.

President. Do the members of other Methodist churches worship there?

A. No, sir.

Counsel for Defense. I want to ask a question of law. Is a Methodist preacher sent to a church with certain territory attached, or does he receive simply an appointment? Is our system a parish system?

President. That is not a question of law. (It was not answered.)

Specification 4.—Counsel for Defense. I object to the expression "a manifest want of Christian temper and integrity." (It was stricken out.) Also to the word "disorderly." (It was not stricken out.)

Plaintiff. As proof I refer the committee to the statement in the "Plan," especially to that one which says, "We are connected with the M. E. church, and love its doctrines and Discipline." Also the various services that have been held.

Committeeman. Did the meetings interfere with your work?

A. I have reason to believe that they have affected my work to some extent.

Committeeman. How?

A. By influencing some to leave their own meetings and to attend Bro. Miller's; by nourishing a feeling for Bro. Miller which properly belongs to the pastor.

Committeeman. What evidence have you that he has thus alienated the minds of some?

President. This question is embarrassing to the brother. I can see that the answering of it might effect his work.

Committeeman. I am trying to find where the disorder is. Has Bro. Miller alienated any of your people?

A. He has never asked them to leave the church. I do not want you to suppose I mean that.

Committeeman. Have you any other evidence?

A. None other than that they treat Bro. Miller warmly and me a little coolly. Bro. Miller has not attempted to undermine church work, but some attend his services and seem to like him. I do not want it to appear that he alienates them from the church.

Committeeman. Have your people been absent from your services on account of Bro. Miller's meetings?

A. They have.

Committeeman. Did Bro. Miller ever declare his love for the Discipline?

A. I never heard him or any one else do so.

Cross-examined.—Q. Does Bro. Miller preach at Hickory schoolhouse on the Sunday you preach at Little York?

A. There have been services there on the same Sabbath, but not recently that I know of.

Q. If Bro. Miller preaches on an opposite Sunday, how does he interfere with your service?

A. Such is the influence of his meeting, that people are absent when there is service at my church.

Q. Hickory school-house is two miles from Little York where your church is. When Bro. Miller found that his service might interfere with you, did he not put it on another day?

A. He may have done so, but not to my knowledge.

CHARGE II. (Ruled out. See bill of charges and specifications.)

CHARGE III. DISSENSION.

Specification 1. Plaintiff reads as follows from the "Plan." "We intend to organize any who may be saved through our labors provided they are willing, into societies, and to govern them by the Discipline as far as that book will apply to such societies. * * If you desire to co-operate with us in the manner here indicated."

Specification 2. President. When you reproved the accused, did he manifest a spirit of obstinacy?

A. No, sir; he seemed to be thoroughly conscientious.

President. Does the brother continue to hold his meetings?

A. Yes; he preaches as usual and circulates his "Plan."

President. Does he circulate it now?

A. He circulated copies of it here yesterday and at Everettstown on various occasions.

Cross-examined. — Q. Will you give the course you pursued in giving the reproof referred to in this specification?

A. I called on Bro. Miller with some of my brethren.

Q. Did you do as the Discipline directs? (See Dis. ¶214.)

A. Yes, sir; as I understand it.

Q. Did you first reprehend him privately, and then with two or three faithful friends?

A. I did not; but when I called upon him I took two of my brethren. That was the only reproof I gave.

Q. Does not the Discipline require two reprehensions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why then did you not reprehend him twice?

A. It was a mere oversight; and I rather questioned my right to give a private reprimand for such a public offence.

President. When did Bro. Miller say that the verdict of no ecclesiastical court would change his convictions of right and duty?

A. When I gave the reproof.

President. Did he manifest a spirit of hostility or a spirit of conscientiousness?

A. He did not show a spirit of hostility, but a conscientious desire to do his duty. I only wanted to know if he was acting according to the spirit of the Discipline.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE DEFENSE.

Counsel calls the accused to testify.

Q. Did you believe that such societies as are referred to in your "Plan" to be necessary?

A. I did.

Q. Why did you propose to govern them by the Discipline. A. Because I believed in and loved it.

Q. Did you believe the M. E. church was doing the work its Discipline required? A. I did not.

Q. Had you seen anything in the Discipline forbidding the course you have taken, would you have taken it. A. I would not.

Q. Whose example did you follow in regard to these societies? A. John Wesley's.

Q. Do you object to the doctrines and Discipline of the M. E. church or to its corruption? A. To the corruption.

Q. Did you ever propose to do this work "in defiance of and opposition to the regularly appointed pastors of our churches?" A. I did not.

Q. Did you desire to get the consent of the ministers? A. I did.

Q. Why did you not consult with your pastor in reference to the services you held? A. I didn't think I was under any obligation to do so.

Q. Did the presiding elder or preacher in charge give you work for Sabbath? A. They did not.

Q. Had they given you work, would you have considered it your duty as a loyal local preacher to attend to it? A. I would.

Q. How do you justify your course in preaching at different points. A. (Reads from "Baker on the Discipline," p. 78, ¶12.) "The presiding elders and the preachers in charge are required so to arrange the appointments, whenever it is practicable, as to give the local preachers regular and systematic work on the Sabbath, but they can not control the appointments of local preachers unless they conflict with the plan of the circuit."

Q. When you found that your service at Hickory School-house might interfere with the appointment of the pastor at Little York, what did you do? A. I changed it to another day.

Q. Did you consider that there was any inconsistency in doing the work you did, and at the same time professing to love the M. E. church? A. I did not.

Q. Why did you invite loyal members of the M. E. church to cooperate with you? A. In order to find out the evils of the church and to correct them.

Q. Did you insist upon members adhering to the church and to the Discipline? A. I did.

Q. Did you have any idea that your course was contrary to the Discipline? A. No, sir.

Cross-examined by Plaintiff.—Q. Admitting that you have not received work from the presiding elder or the preacher in charge, does the passage you read from Baker justify you in taking the course you do? A. Believing that I was called to preach, when no work was given me, I was compelled to find it myself.

Q. You say follow the example of John Wesley. How does this justify you? A. John Wesley, believing that the Church of England had become corrupt, organized his converts into societies for the purpose of spiritual instruction. I thought I had the right to instruct any who might be saved through me in the same manner.

Q. How do you reconcile your statement that you never said in print that you propose to do these things in defiance of and in opposition to the regularly appointed pastors with the words of your "Plan," namely, "Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it, go ahead without it?" A. I regretted doing this work without the consent of the pastors. I wanted their sympathy. With it we could have done a glorious work.

Q. Were you acquainted with that part of the Discipline which requires the preacher in charge to have oversight of all the local preachers? A. I was.

Committeeman. You said that had you received an appointment you would have attended to it. Would you have preached from point to point as you do now? A. I should first have attended to my appointment.

Com. Having received an appointment from the presiding elder and working on it, would you have preached that the church was not living up to the Discipline and needed correction? A. I would, as I have done for the last four years.

Com. Then do you believe that you are actually led by the Spirit in a crusade against the corruption of the M. E. church? A. I believe I am led by the Spirit to fight against the corruption of the M. E. church and all other churches, but not against its doctrine or Discipline.

Com. Did you circulate this "Plan?" A. I did.

Com. Did you write your name at the bottom of it? A. I consented to have it written there, and I believe what is contained in it.

Com. What do you mean by the expression in your "Plan," namely, "Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it, go ahead without it?" A. I believed that the approval of the pastors would help our work.

Com. What was to be done? A. We wanted to get up a reform convention. We wanted the members to get the names of those in favor of it, and we desired the pastor's name first, but if he would not give it the member was to go ahead without it and try to get as many names as he could.

President. Of whom were the societies to be formed? A. Of persons converted through our labors, provided they were willing.

President. What is the object of these societies? A. To instruct in pure Methodism and pure Gospel.

Q. Should a member of your society ask what church he should join, what would you tell him? A. I would not limit him as to the church, but would try to give him so much real Gospel that he could withstand the evil and do his duty.

Committeeman. When were these "Plans" first circulated? A. About the latter part of May, I think.

Com. I would like to know whether Bro. Miller expects members in this and other conferences to contribute toward his support.

President. There could be no objection to Bro. Miller's receiving a support. Other evangelists do the same.

Com. Have you a business? A. My business is to preach the Gospel.

Com. Do you hold allegiance to the presiding elder? If he called for a report of your work, would you give it? If he desired to remove you, and put another man over your societies, what would you do? A. I would give a report of my work. I do not know that a presiding elder has a right to send a local preacher anywhere he pleases, or to put another man over my societies.

Com. Should the presiding elder request you to assist your pastor, Bro. Jamieson, what would you do with the societies? A. I would consider it my duty to attend to the work given me by the presiding elder first and to the societies afterward.

Council for Defense. Mr. President, may I ask the witness a question? A. You may.

Counsel. Should you find a pastor who would enforce the Discipline, what would you do? A. I would turn the members of the society over to that pastor.

Com. What has Freemasonry to do with your work? A. I believe Freemasonry to be a cause of evil in the M. E. church.

Defence calls Mr. Kitchen, official member of the Everettstown M. E. church. He testifies as follows: I have frequently heard Bro. Miller say that he did not want any one to leave the church on his account, but that he desired the wrongs in the church destroyed. He said that he was convinced that something was needed to better the condition of the church membership, and that after carefully and prayerfully considering his method, he believed good might be done to the M. E. church.

Mr. Bunnel, a member of Little York M. E. church, was then called. His testimony was as follows: Bro. Miller said that he did not wish persons to leave their own churches to hear him, but that when there were no services at their own churches he would be glad to see them.

Defendant. When I found that my preaching at Hickory schoolhouse might interfere with the M. E. church service at Little York, what did I do? A. You changed the day of your service.

Commiteeman. When Bro. Miller spoke to you about preaching at Hickory, what did you tell him? A. I told him there was no preaching there and there were a good many people up there who did not go to church.

Committeeman. Did he on that occasion speak of the corruption of the M. E. church? A. I do not think he did.

Committeeman. When you heard him preach, did he speak of the corruptions of the church? (President. We all do that.) A. He preached the same as he did during the two years he was pastor of the church at Little York.

Cross examined by plaintiff.—Q. I heard that you intended to divide what you paid for the support of the Gospel between Bro. Miller and myself. Is that true? A. It is not. Bro. Miller told me to pay to my own church and if I had anything left it would be thankfully received.

President to plaintiff.—Q. Are you prepared to say that Bro. Miller's work has injured the M. E. church? A. I am not prepared to say it has yet.

CLOSING ARGUMENT.

The prosecution did not wish to argue the case.

Counsel for the accused endeavored to show—

1. That the M. E. church as it now is is unfit to take care of truly converted souls, because it would not enforce the General Rules; because the example of many members in reference to dress, the use of tobacco, and other violations of our rules was ruinous to young converts; and because the proper instruction in regard to Freemasonry was not given. Some plain things were said about this institution, and it was asked if a pastor who was a Mason was a fit person to train the young in divine life.

2. Following the example of the founder of Methodism, Bro. Miller had a right to gather his converts into bands or societies for their proper spiritual training when the churches would not do the work. When they would enforce the Discipline, he would give up the societies. There was nothing in the Discipline to forbid such a course. The early preachers, no doubt, would have advised it, had they foreseen the worldliness of the M. E. church of the present day.

3. Bro. Miller wanted the consent of the preachers. There was nothing improper in advising a member to get names for a reform convention, even should he fail to obtain the approval of his pastor. He never asked members of the church to join his societies or to leave the church.

This is but a very brief outline of the argument. The prosecution did not reply.

The minutes were read and the committee feared.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The committee organized by electing Rev. D. M. Matthews chairman, and C. H. Benson secretary.

Charge I. Improper tempers, words and actions.

Specification 1. Sustained.

Specification 2. Divided. Part 1, asserting an intention to organize independent societies was sustained. Part 2, expecting to govern them by the Discipline as far as that book applies to them, sustained. The whole specification was taken up and sustained.

Specification 3. That part of the "Plan" which reads, "Ask your pastor for his approval. If he will not give it, go ahead without it," being the evidence upon which this specification is based, and as it was shown by the defense that these words refer solely to the matter of a convention referred to in "the Plan of our Work," we vote not to sustain specification 3.

Specification 4. Not sustained.

The committee then took up the charge number one and declared that it was sustained by the specifications 1 and 2.

Charge III. Dissension.

Specification 1. Sustained in so far as it relates to the intention to organize independent societies beyond the control of the regularly constituted authorities of the church.

Specification 2. Not sustained.

The charge was then taken up and declared sustained on the first specification.

Whereupon the committee set their hands to this finding.

D. M. MATTHEWS, Pres.
C. H. BENSON, Sec.
D. W. RYDER.
A. F. CAMPBELL.
WESLEY MARTIN.

The President then declared that the accused was suspended as a local preacher until the next district conference when the case will be finally disposed of. This was the penalty required by the Discipline.

REMARKS.

1. The accused is declared to be guilty of "improper tempers" without one word of evidence to show that he ever displayed such a temper. Upon the same principle the purest men might easily be found guilty of the vilest crimes.

2. The specifications that were sustained were the 1st and 2nd, under Charge No. 1, and the first so far as it relates to the societies under Charge No. 3. The only evidence upon which these were based was, that Bro. Miller declared in his "Plan" that he believed the present worldly condition of the M. E. church unfitted it for taking proper care of truly converted souls, and that consequently he intended to organize any who might be saved through his labors, provided they were willing, into societies, and to govern them by the Discipline as far as that book will apply to such societies, the members of these societies being expected to contribute according to their ability to his support. Here, for instance, are twelve persons saved in Bro. Miller's meetings. They want to be Methodists. Bro. Miller says to them, "There is no M. E. church in the community which I can advise you to join, but if you are willing, I will organize you into a society and govern you by the Discipline as far as it will apply to you, and as you should be trained to pay according to your ability toward the support of the Gospel you will be expected to contribute, if you are able, to my support. This is exactly what he proposed to do, and forthwith he is declared to be guilty of "improper tempers, words, actions, and dissension in inveighing against the Discipline of the church." Notice, too, that not one line was read from the Discipline or any other book to show that such a course under the circumstances was out of order; nor was any effort made to show that the M. E. church was not corrupt.

3. Bro. Miller is brought to trial and declared to be guilty of the charges preferred against him while nothing is done with those M. E. ministers who organize or join anti-Christian societies and leading their converts into them, administer to them oaths of which an insane, pagan butcher might well be ashamed, drag them, blind-folded, cable-towed and almost naked through a mass of ridiculous nonsense, and then tell them that "The Master Mason represents a man under the doctrine of love, saved from the grave of iniquity, and raised to the faith of salvation." "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith. These ought ye to have done and not to leave the other undone. Ye blind guides which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUG. 14, 1879.

THE ADVANCE HAS SPOKEN.

In a review of Rev. Mr. Anderson's essay on the "Church and the Lodge," the Advance, which has several times intimated that it has opinions on the secret society reform which would at some time be given to the churches, undertakes to vindicate the State Congregational Association from the charge of going back on its record.

The facts are these: In 1846 the Association unanimously resolved that an "association exacting an oath or pledge of secrecy of its members is thereby different from and opposed to a church of Christ," and it proceeded to exhort Congregationalists to disfellowship such secret organizations. This testimony (all the Association could give) it has repeated in various parts of the State at its different meetings, in the strongest language from Scripture and other sources. Yet a year ago last May this same Association endorsed the election, for three times in succession, of a defiant Mason of 32° as secretary of a national council of the denomination, by voting that the churches of Illinois shall pay their pro rata of his salary of $5,000. That is, to tax the Congregationalists of this country for a purpose hitherto unknown, and to support a national advisory court of which he is permanent secretary, having control of all its correspondence and affairs. If this is disfellowshiping Dr. A. H. Quint, who said in 1872, he was "proud of being the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons, and anybody who don't like it can help himself," and yet maintains that defiant attitude, the Association has not gone back on its record. If not it has gone back on its own record by its own testimony.

Again, last May one of its members, Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy, came forward in General Association with the now notorious article, "The Church and the Lodge," putting the former into unfavorable contrast. Mr. Anderson boasts that when on an exchange the various secret lodges sent secret correspondence in advance to the lodges of Springfield, Ill., advising them of his coming and exhorting them to show him marked public attention: showing the advantages which said Anderson has above his brethren to swell his congregations and exalt his fame. Instead of disfellowshiping Mr. Anderson, the General Association passed a complimentary vote to the speaker and referred his paper to a committee, headed by Prof. Hyde, which committee repeated the complimentary notice of the Association, but dissented from the doctrines of the essay. If this is having no fellowship with Mr. Anderson, then the Association has not gone back on its record. This dissent and the publication of the essay in the Voice of Masonry with approval, of course, raised Anderson in the esteem of the secret lodges which recommended him at Springfield. And yet, though he is thus put forward as the champion of these lodges, he is in good standing to day with the Illinois Congregational Association and with the editor of the Advance. Will the Advance, which is the exponent of the Association, and in a most important sense a religious guardian of the churches, please explain how this is having no fellowship with organizations which exact an oath or pledge of secrecy from their members?

In his editorial General Howard speaks of "evils that are inseperably connected with these secret orders: the waste of money in showy pageants and buildings; their tax upon the time of members; their frequent substitution for the church, thus quieting the consciences of men who otherwise would seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; not to mention their dangerous and corrupting tendencies when interfering with elections, legislation and courts of justice,"—a true and terrible indictment. Now how and in what manner does the Advance propose to relieve the churches of this incubus of the lodge?

The editor of the Cynosure has dictated these few lines from a sick bed. The article of the Advance is on file, and if he should become able, he may resume this important discussion.

THE ALBANIAN MISSIONARIES.

A letter from Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes, mailed from London, England, on the 19th ult., announces the safe arrival of his company at that city. With his wife and two Armenian girls who have been at school at Leroy, N. Y., he set sail from New York on the 3rd of July, after several days of hard work in preparation. The gifts of friends supplied him with a small reed organ and a sewing machine, which will be valuable accessories to his work in Turkey. The voyage was prolonged through delays in leaving the harbor, and from strong headwinds. Heavy seas and very cool weather were also experienced through part of the passage. Nearly every passenger being sick for the first few days no religious worship was held on the first Sabbath out, but on Thursday evening, the 10th, request was made of the captain for a prayer meeting, and part of the cabin was set off for it. Threats were made by some of the passengers to disturb the services, but nothing of the kind was attempted. Twenty-eight gathered and drew near to God with songs, and prayer and reading his Word.

Bro. Zaraphonithes spoke from the words, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself." It was a precious season. Among the passengers was an evangelist and a minister from Kansas,so that on the next Sabbath and Thursday evening services were held. "There are many enemies upon the ship," says the letter, "and every day we had discussions for a week. Thus, dear brother, we began the work of our Lord upon the ocean, and look forward for his blessing. Do not forget to pray for us in your meetings, for we will be among enemies in the future." On Sabbath, July 20th, they attended the Temple Congregational church, London, and listened to Rev. Dr. Parker. The next stop will be at Syra, Greece, where letters may be sent, and any aid that the readers of the Cynosure may wish to give our brother in his work for Christ.

THE NEW BOOK.—Among the numerous commendatory notices of the press the following from the Christian Instructor is one which will interest all:

"A thorough, authenticated and candid examination into the character, history and purposes of the chief of the secret orders is to be found in a work recently issued from the press of Ezra A. Cook & Co, of this city. * * * President Blanchard has given the greatest care in the collection and compilation of this work, bringing to the work matured scholarship, extensive research and thorough analysis. We commend the result of his labors to all who are interested in discovering the true character and history of Masonry and its relations to the three heaven-constituted societies of church, state and family. The book is unprecedentedly cheap; it will be sent to any address on receipt of one dollar."

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES.—Bro. Tapley, whose success among the colored churches of the South has greatly cheered us all, writes to urge our Northern churches to give their testimony, to take the pledge of anti-lodgery, by putting their names on the roll of the Associated Churches of Christ. As such a measure compromises no denominational obligation, and is a means of good to the individual church and of encouragement to all others, let us have many names added this fall. Read Bro. Tapley's letter:

COLUMBUS, Miss., July 30, 1879.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, readers of the Cynosure:—Send other names to add to the Associated Churches of Christ. Let many more churches unite together in their opposition to secret orders that we may strengthen, sympathize with, and pray for each other. These churches will doubtless become a great power for good and against evil in the land. What is needed is a united effort by the church. I am fully persuaded that it is through the church that Christ will overthrow the powers of darkness. Let us have fifty additional names by the first of September next. Brethren and sisters, let us hear from you. E. TAPLEY.

WHEATON COLLEGE.—The fall term of this institution opens on Tuesday, September 2nd next. From various providential indications a marked increase of attendance is expected next year. The Normal Institute which closed on Monday, was a great success. Some hundred teachers of Illinois were in attendance, and so far as we have learned there was universal satisfaction with the instruction and all the arrangements. Many of those attending this summer school are expecting to return in September to pursue a more extended course, well satisfied that for thorough instruction, sound educational and religious principles and general facilities they cannot do better than to come to Wheaton. Actual acquaintance immediately dissipates the false impressions spread wide by the enemies of the institution through the ex-parte council's pamphlet. During the Institute lectures have been given by each of the members of its faculty, Professors Bailey, Blanchard, Fischer, Moffatt and Morgan; also by Miss Ada Sweet, U. S. Pension Agent in this city; A. H Hiatt, M.D.; Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker; and Prof. S. S. Hamill. A large portion of the members of the Institute have attended the religious meetings of the College church and have freely participated in them with mutual profit. All the friends of the institution are confident that the blessing of God has attended the work of the summer. All inquiries regarding expenses, which have been much reduced since last year, or instruction, will be cheerfully answered by any member of the College faculty.

— The sickness of President Blanchard took on a rheumatic character last week and until Saturday was extremely painful and depressing. On the Sabbath he was much easier and was able to rise from the bed for a short time. The kindness and solicitude of many friends in Wheaton and this city deserves a grateful mention. We trust their prayers may also be effectual and fervent, and healing be sent in answer.

—In response to a desire of a number of friends made known directly and through the Cynosure correspondence, Prof. Blanchard preached a second sermon last Sabbath morning to a very large congregation on the evils of setarianism and the means to overcome them. This discourse we hope to print next week. In the evening from the text, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," he preached an excellent discourse on the testimony of the College church against secret societies.

—Large space is given this week to another page in the history of reform, reporting the trial of Rev. A. G. Miller of New Jersey, the faithful co-laborer of Bro. Michael. The fullness of the report leaves nothing to be said upon so unwarrantable a conviction. Let the New Jersey brethren rejoice in that they are counted worthy to suffer persecution for Christ's sake. They thus are experiencing the fulfillment of some most precious promises of the Word of God.

—Elder Brown writes that word has come from Elder Rathbun that he will be unable to fill the appointments published for Illinois and Wisconsin. Bro. Starry of Iowa will probably take his place, and in expectation of this we venture to keep the notice standing. Bro. Starry has to within a recent date been a bright Mason. His letter published on another page tells us how his heart is in the work, and he hears the call of God for laborers in this harvest. He has, beside, the cordial co-operation of a noble wife; with such a help he can hardly do other than succeed. Pray that his hands may be strengthened for this good work.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman left Wheaton last week on a visit to several churches in Illinois to consult with them and arouse an interest in favor of free missions. Few have felt more deeply than he the deplorable condition of the mission boards, which, while they are spending millions of money and wearing out hundreds of lives in pagan lands, not only overlook, but intentionally ignore the idolatrous practices at home. We pray that the providence of God may open the way for a new departure in missions.

—The Inter-ocean says that in spite of the threats and bullying of the Beaconsfield government at the Berlin Congress, the Russians outmaneuvered and secured all they claimed under the San Stephano treaty, and says this is now conceded by the English journals. "Any one who has studied Russian diplomacy knows that when her diplomatists make most noise about conceding a point, they are really conceding nothing, and that when they make an extraordinary show of humility, their protestations cover an intrigue to secure success. The failure of the treaty of Berlin was as apparent the day it was signed as it is now, but English papers were slow to admit it."

—Nicaraugua is after all taking the lead in the matter of an interoceanic canal. Dispatches from Washington represent that the Nicaragua government has begun the work of improving the San Juan river, so as to open direct navigation between Lake Nicaragua and the Caribbean Sea. This is on the line of the proposed ship canal, Nicaragua route. Navigation open between Lake Nicaragua and the Caribbean Sea, there remains to be cut only a short distance canal to the Pacific to open the way between the two oceans.

—The way they opened a lodge of Knights of Pythias in Union City, Indiana, last month, was to begin initiations at 9:30 P. M. and continue until 1 o'clock in the morning, when a recess was taken and a banquet spread in a neighboring hotel. The process of making dupes to the lodge was then continued till towards daybreak.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM HARPER of Hillsdale, Michigan, died on the 28th ult., at Newark, N. J. Bro. C. Reynolds of Hillsdale, went to Newark and brought back his body to Plymouth, Mich., where he was laid by the side of his wife who died four years ago. Bro. Harper was 69 years old and had lived in Michigan over half a century. He was an uncompromising foe of the lodge as are so many who lived during the Morgan times.

A note from sister Myers of Vineland, N. J., brings intelligence of the peaceful departure of her husband to his heavenly mansion, July 18th. His disease was a heart affection, and his death had been anticipated by himself and friends as likely to occur at any time. Bro. Myers was what the world would call an eminently successful man, and had laid up in store ample means for the autumn of life. He began as a laborer on a farm at $8 per month in western New York, and so carefully husbanded his means and so judiciously invested them that he soon became a prosperous land-holder, with money at interest. Bro. Meyer's first employer was a Freemason and Baptist deacon who advised him to join the lodge. When Bro. M. received $24, the pay for three months hard service, he made application to the lodge, and was received, but there not being a sufficient number present to perform the ceremonies of initiation he was required to kneel and take the oath, for which he paid $5 of his hard-earned money, and was instructed to come for his regular initiation next lodge evening. Returning home, some three or four miles, on that dark and rainy night, he made up his mind that it did not pay and never went near the lodge again. This $5 for lodge secrets Bro. Myers considered the most foolish and unwise investment of his life. He was ever after a zealous and consistent opponent of the order. He contributed liberally to sustain others and let slip no opportunity for personal effort in saving the perishing from this snare. He was long an active member of the M. E. church and was accustomed to exercise his gifts in "preaching the word" as God opened the way. He leaves a faithful and beloved wife who has borne with him the heat and burden of life and whose sympathies and views are in harmony with those of her husband. Some of their children have gone before and those remaining are settled in homes of their own. A large circle of acquaintances will sympathize with the bereaved in their loss and we will unite in a fervent prayer for the sanctification of this affliction to the good of us all.

Home Circle.

Look up! Christian.

Look up! Christian. Why that sadness?
What has caused thy grief and fear?
Hast not thou some room for gladness?
Is not Jesus ever near?

Look up! Christian. Why desponding
'Cause the way is dark and drear?
Cease thy fretting and thy mourning,
For a light will yet appear.

Look up! Christian. Did thy Saviour
Say no trials must be borne?
Nay; he led the way before thee—
Trod the wine-press all alone.

Look up! Christian. Jesus bids thee
Look beyond this vale of tears;
Says: "If thou wilt follow me,
I will vanquish all thy fears."

Look up! Christian. Be not faithless,
Lean upon thy Saviour, God;
Trust him where thou canst not trace him,
Thou wilt find a rich reward.

Soon the mystery will be open,
Now to mortal vision sealed;
Not a word that he hath spoken
But shall one day be revealed.

A Work of Faith in Boston.

By request, Dr. Cullis gave the story of his Faith-work in Boston. He seems the ideal of modesty—a man in middle life, of medium stature, in appearance the farthest from fanaticism. His work has not been to try to cure dying consumptives by the prayer of faith; but by that reliance to procure a home for them and the means of physical and spiritual comfort until they pass away. Nor is it for the rich who can take care of themselves, but for the very poor who otherwise would go to the poor-house or to the hospital.

The story runs like a romance, and stranger still than fiction—a sort of sacred "secret of the Lord" that has been told in public only three times before this in the fifteen years of its course. Brought up as a moralist; could not tell the time of his conversion; started out as a business man; laid aside by five years of sickness; led, meantime, into the study of medicine, into its practice, and into the consecration of everything to God. Struck by the passage: "To every man his work," and then seeking to find his own work—finding it when a poor consumptive came to him and asked if he knew of any place where such a man could go to die; had been reading of the work of Francke two hundred years ago; came to the conclusion that God could do the same now; gave himself up to believe everything between the two lids of the Bible, with no doubt since that; bought first house for $6,500 during the war, and then a second, both of which were paid for before the first report was made, so that it was not done, as is sometimes said, by the advertisement of reports—both houses full to the last bed; heard of a consumptive woman fading in a dark, damp cellar; asked the Lord to send bedding; in fifteen minutes expressman brought a package with bed clothing; but not time for it to come from the country, as it did; yet "before they call I will answer."

But what shall be done with the children of such parents? The means came in answer to prayer, and another house is purchased as an Orphan's Home. Another house is added to the original "Home;" and now there are four in this group; also one for the children, one for a mission chapel, and one for the mission workers. All these years God is asked for the souls of the patients, great numbers of whom have been converted. Two examples: A son of an Episcopal minister, an encrusted moralist. Couldn't be touched. Then a poor colored girl, after seeking despairingly for days and days, finally found the pearl of great price, crying: "I've got it; I've got it!" So happy was she that she wanted everybody to come and hear her story. The young man came and sat down by her bedside. "That is something I never saw," he said. He accepted the same Saviour and was the happiest of men all the months of his life. The other case was that of a hardened, grumbling, profane man. After a long, hard tussle the doctor said: "Do you know what you are doing? You tell God he is a liar. He offers; you refuse." The man gave in and was happy all the remnant of his days. After his death it was told the doctor that this was a man who for the murder of his wife had been in prison, and who, after ten years there had been pardoned out to be sent to that Home.

More room is needed. The old buildings are sold out and new ones bought upon an eleven-acre tract at Grove Hall. Grounds lovely. Rooms cheerful, with mottoes, plants and flowers. Seventy patients. A "Spinal House" has been opened. It was started for one old lady, who could not speak, who could not move a limb, who by the death of a sister was about to be sent to the poor-house. This department has now four occupants. A lady gave $1,000 to start it. Then a Home was found to be needed by the cancer-suffering poor. A house that had cost $840,000 had been bought for $10,350, to meet the want. This home is not yet occupied. Two lady missionaries have been sent to India; one to China. A Tract Society has been started. Three missionaries are employed in Boston. A Training College has been set up for preparing Christian workers. And now the old Randolph and Macon College in Virginia has been purchased to be used for the cause of education among the freedmen. The buildings, with the grounds, had cost $150,000, and had been secured for $6,200. Three thousand dollars had been put on upon repairs. To mend the broken windows, 2,728 lights of glass had been used. This school has not yet been opened, though a Presbyterian minister has been sent down to take charge of it.

All this time Dr. Cullis supports his family by his private practice. As money is needed for the Homes and their adjuncts, it is asked for in prayer to God, never by solicitation from men. In this way $400,000 has been gained and used. It comes from the rich; it comes from the poor, from poor relatives of former patients. A cook, whose sister had died at the Home, gave $2,000. It keeps coming all the time.

"Doctor, are you not burdened greatly with all this care?" "No; it doesn't take many minutes for me to go to sleep. I sleep all night. Never have a feather's weight upon me. Happy as a man can be. Even in the days of straits, the trial of faith has been precious. I have reveled in joy over such trials, knowing that the answer would come."

"Are any cured?" A few. Not many. It is a dreadful disease, very deceptive to the patients. They come to us to die."

"Are any healed by the prayer of faith?" "A few." The doctor detailed two or three cases, and then he said: "You will ask, 'Why not cure them all in that way, and so save the expense of the establishment?' It was built to furnish a home to such unfortunate poor. Then it is only the prayer of faith on the part of the individual that heales the sick in each case. But we don't know the possibilities of the prayer of faith. It is all of God, the power and the glory."—J. E. Roy in Advance.

Peculiarities of the Sandemanians.

Faraday's father and paternal grandparents were Sandemanians. The sect is a small, decreasing one, which rejects all belief in the connection of church and state, all fellowship outside of his own communion, and makes no missionary efforts; believes in the independent self-government of each separate body of communicants; claims to take its rules of faith and polity directly from the New Testament, which is expounded from Sunday to Sunday by elected, unpaid elders, of whom there must be a plurality in each church. The members are strongly attached to each other, hold that the Christian should not take interest on loans or hoard for the uncertain future, but that the better provided brother should freely give to the less fortunate or be ready to perform any act of kindness as the early disciples were to wash one another's feet; so one gives and one receives without access to or loss of dignity. They maintain the love feast and are bound to assemble on the first day of the week for prayers, preaching, the breaking of bread and bringing together of that which each has "put by." As unanimity of church business is required, a persistent dissenter from the large majority is cut off from church privileges; so is the neglecter of church duties and the immoral; this cutting off puts the condemned under social ban and the offender can never be received back but once; second excommunication is final.—Sunday Afternoon.

Do Right and Let Slanderers Talk.

Vain are the efforts of slander permanently to injure the fair fame of a good man. They may obscure it for a while, but as the sun never shines so brightly as when it struggles through the darkness of an eclipse, it will flood with glory the very clouds through which it has to struggle to shine.

There is a cascade yonder in a lovely Swiss valley, which the fierce winds catch and scatter as the waters go over the rock, and for a while the continuity of the fall is broken, and you see nothing but a thin, feathery wreath of apparently helpless spray. Further down the consistency is recovered one more, and the full stream of brilliant water pours as calmly as if no breeze had ever blown, and the very blast that seemed to interrupt its course only fashions the torrent into more etherial loveliness, and makes the spot a shrine of beauty to which all pilgrim footsteps travel.

And so the blasts of calumny, however fiercely they spend themselves against the good man's character, will only contribute to its wider influence and greater beauty. Preserve a good conscience toward God, and you need not fear though the whole pack of the spaniel-hearted howl at your heels.—Punshon.

A Sailor's Death Grip.

A sea captain related, at a prayer-meeting in Boston, a thrilling incident in his own experience: "A few years ago," said he, "I was sailing by the island of Cuba, when the cry ran through the ship, 'Man overboard!' It was impossible to put up the helm of the ship, but I instantly seized a rope and threw it over the ship's stern, crying out to the man to seize it as for his life. The sailor caught the rope just as the ship was passing. I immediately took another rope, and, making a slip-noose of it, attached it to the other, and slid it down to the struggling sailor, and directed him to pass it over his shoulders and under his arms and he would be drawn on board. He was rescued; but he had grasped that rope with such firmness, with such a death-grip that it took hours before his hold relaxed and his hand could be separated from it. With such eagerness, indeed, had he clutched the object that was to save him, that the strands of the rope became imbedded in the flesh of his hands." This illustrates the fact that God has let down from heaven a rope to every sinner on earth, every strand is a precious promise, and we ought to be so intensely eager to secure these promises, as to lay hold on them as for our lives, and grasp them with tenacious grip.—Christian Herald.

Hints to Boys and Girls on Good Manners.

1. Never look over another person when he is writing a letter, or reading that which does not concern you.

2. Never enter another's room abruptly. Have you special business? knock gently at the door, or ask permission to enter.

3. Never select the best articles of food at the table. Wait till you are helped. Be modest, polite, temperate.

4. Never ask trifling or foolish questions, or inquire about things with which you are already familiar. "A fool's voice is known by a multitude of words."

5. Never speak unless you have something to say—think twice before you speak once. "In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that refraineth his lips is wise." Prov. 10: 19.

6. Never dissemble, feign yourself sick or asleep, or unwell, to avoid correction or some unpleasant thing. This is a species of lying, for which the Lord will not hold you guiltless. "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile." "Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee." "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord."

7. Never be glad or rejoice at another's calamity or misfortune, even though he be your enemy. "He that is glad at calamities shall not be unpunished." "Does thine enemy hunger, feed him. Does he thirst, give him drink; by so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." "Overcome evil with good."

8. Never mock or ridicule the poor, the infirm, or the aged. "He that mocketh the poor, reproacheth his Maker." "Better is the poor that walketh in his integrity, than he that is perverse in his lips and is a fool." Prov. 19: 1. Read the fearful doom of those wicked children who mocked Elisha, the holy prophet of God. (See 2 Kings, 2: 23, 24.)

9. Never set up your own will in opposition to your parents or teachers: submit calmly, sweetly, cheerfully. "Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry."

10. When addressed by your parents or superiors, give immediate attention.

11. Be kind and gentle to your brothers and sisters, invariably.

12. When a favor is conferred, always express your gratitude politely to the person who bestows it.

13. Little folks, whenever you enter a room, always be careful to notice, respectfully, your superiors or those older than yourself.

14 Never interrupt persons engaged in conversation, reading, or writing, but wait till a suitable opportunity is given you to speak.

15. Never ask when you know.

16. Never whisper in company, or make remarks on the dress of those about you, or about things that are in the room where you are.

17. Never flatly contradict any person, and especially your superiors. Rather say, "Are you not mistaken, sir? I had supposed differently." Meekness and modesty are more precious than rubies.

18. Be polite or courteous to everybody; true politeness is giving attention to little things, little acts of self-denial, kindness, and love, striving to make everybody happy. It is benevolence flowing from a noble, generous, pious heart. It is, in a word, doing to others as we would that others should do to us. —D. F. Newton.

Fourteen Keeps.

He will keep thee as the apple of his eye.

He will keep thee in all thy ways, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

He will keep thy foot from being taken, lest any hurt thee.

He will keep thee day and night.

He will keep thee as a shepherd doth his flock.

He will keep thee from the evil that is in the world.

He will keep thee from falling.

He will keep thee from the hour of temptation.

He will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.

He will keep thee in the way and bring thee into the place which he has prepared.

He will keep the feet of his saints.

He will keep that which thou hast committed to him.

A Knowing Bird.

Where do you think a bird once built its nest? On the edge of a quarry of slate so near that when the rock was blasted a piece of the flying and falling slate frightened and incommoded the poor bird very much, says the New York Observer. It was a thrush. Yet she did not change her quarters. But being a pretty observing bird, she noticed that at the ringing of a bell the men started and ran. "Ah," thought the bird, "I'll run too," so the next time the train was fired and the bell rang to warn the men, away the thrush flew from her nest and lighted among them, indeed close under their feet. The explosion over, she returned to her nest and they to their work.

This she did whenever they blasted. Of course it highly diverted the men, and visitors were told of her sensible and discerning conduct. They were anxious to see the thrush. The slate could not be blasted to gratify visitors, but the bell could easily be rung, and it was. The bird heard it and down she flew. After a few times she saw herself hoaxed, and when the bell rang again, she peeped over her nest to see if the men left. If they did not she sat still and cocked her head as much as to say: "No, gentlemen, I am not to be cheated again. Life in my nest is too serious to be trifled away for your amusement. No more make believes for me."

Did Jesus Answer "Yes?"

"Mamma is talking to Jesus," said little Mary to herself, as she heard her mother at prayer in the adjoining room. As Mrs. H. left the place of prayer, Mary ran to her mother, and asked very innocently, "Did Jesus answer, 'Yes,' mother?"

When you kneel down by your bedside to pray, dear children, think of the question of this little child. Do you expect an answer to your prayer, or do you only repeat the words as a mere form? If you ask aright, Jesus will answer, yes; for he said in his holy word, "Ask, and ye shall receive."

A negro being asked what he was in jail for, said it was for borrowing money. "But," said the questioner, "they don't put people in jail for borrowing money." "Yes," said the darkey, "but I had to knock the man down free or fo' times before he would lend it to me."

LESSON XXXIV.—August 24, 1879.—THE MIND OF CHRIST.

SCRIPTURE.—Phil. 2: 1-13.

1 If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels
2 and mercies, | fulfil ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love,
3 being of one accord, of one mind. | Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem another better than them-
4 selves. | Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.
5 Let this mind be in you, which was
6 also in Christ Jesus: | who, being in the form of God, thought it not rob-
7 bery to be equal with God: | but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was
8 made in the likeness of men: | and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.
9 Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name
10 which is above every name: | that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; |
11 and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.
12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation
13 with fear and trembling: | for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

GENERAL NOTES.

3. "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory." A striving hurtful to unity on the part of individuals to make themselves important. Their common source was selfishness, which is always to be found along with a want of humility and self-denying love; and this selfishness was displayed in strife and vain-glory.—Olshausen.

9. "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him." Paul proves by Christ's example that they are blessed who voluntarily humiliate themselves with Christ —Alford.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

What consolation of Christ was waited for by a devout man? Whose name means "son of consolation"? In what way are Christians sure to have fellowship with each other?

[From International Quarterly.]

How is the mind or humility of Christ

seen in this chapter (verses 6-8). Notice the wonderful descent—from God to man, from man to a servant, from the servant to death, even the death of a criminal. (And all this for ME). How is this pattern to be followed by us? (verses 1-4; verses 12-15). How was it copied by Paul? (chapter 3:4-8). How is it commended in chapter 4: 4-9? Give some illustrations from the life of Christ. What is the opposite of this pattern? How can we copy after Christ in our daily life at home and at school? Read John, 13: 14; 1 Peter 2:21.

How is the reward seen in our lesson? (verses 9-11). What is said of the reward set before Jesus? (Heb. 12: 2). How did the reward affect Paul? (1 Cor. 9: 24-27; Phil. 3:9-14). What is said of rewards in Luke, 19: 12-27? What is promised to the "overcomers" in Rev. 2 and 3? How is humility rewarded here? What lesson is taught in verse 12? What is obedience to Christ? What are we to work out? What is necessary before it can be worked out? (verse 13). What preliminary steps are given in verses 10, 11? This then is the order: kneel, confess, obey, work.

[From the Evangelical Repository.]

A PATTERN OF HUMILITY.

We need examples as well as precepts for our instruction. Jesus is our perfect example in all things, but he is here held up before us as our pattern in humility. The humility of Christ is best seen by contrasting it with his glory, both before and after his humiliation. Therefore, the Apostle speaks of the Saviour's pre-existence, human life and exaltation.

1. The pre-existence of the Saviour is described in verse 6. Before he came to the world as its Redeemer, he was in the form of God; he had the nature of God; his mode of existence was that of God. It was no robbery for him to claim divine attributes, for he was equal with God; he was God.

2. The human life of the Saviour is described in verses 7, 8. He made himself of no repu'ation, literally, emptied himself. He laid aside the manifestations of his glory. He took upon him the form of a servant. He, who was God, became a servant (Luke 22:27). He was made in the likeness of men. He was born a real man, but not a mere man, for at his birth his divine nature was not laid aside. He was found in fashion as a man. He was not only born a man; he lived a man, having a true body, and a rational soul. And even then when he appeared as a man, he humbled himself; he did not seek high honors, but condescended to the lowest conditions of life. He became obedient to the law of God, even when that obedience terminated in death. And his death was not a natural one; it was the death of the cross, the disgraceful death of a criminal slave. This was indeed the depth of humiliation.

3. The apostle gives some instructions which would help them in obeying his exhortation (vs. 2-4). They were to be humble; but how could humility be reached? They should cultivate harmony in plan, in love, in soul, and in mind (v. 2). They were to be like-minded, framing and executing the same plans; to have the same motive. Our life should be such as to fulfil the joy of the saints.

4. The exaltation of the Saviour is described in verses 9-11, as a reward of his humiliation and sufferings. God highly exalted him, as mediator, in his resurrection, his ascension and the glory that followed. A name, which is above every name, was given him. It stands alone. He only is the Redeemer, the Saviour, the Christ, the Son of God. No name can be compared with his. So highly was he exalted, that at this human name of Jesus, the Saviour (Mat. 1: 21), every knee should bow in adoration. This adoration will be universal. The angels and the glorified saints in heaven, men who are alive on the earth, and the dead who are under the earth, will worship at his feet. The phrase, under the earth, may also include demons and lost sinners, for even they must render to Jesus the homage of fear. Every one in this mighty congregation must confess that Jesus Christ is Lord; every tongue must worship and acknowledge him as the divine and universal sovereign. The end of this adoration and confession is the glory of God, the Father. The Father is glorified in the glory of his exalted Son.

In Jesus, we have the perfect pattern of humility. A study of his pre-existence, of the deep humiliation of his earthly life, and of the glorious exaltation which is the reward of his humiliation, will lead us to have the same mind of humility, which was also in him.

--Three open air meetings were held on Sabbath evening in the three divisions of Chicago for the street railway men, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. At the North Side meeting, Bro. J. P. Stoddard and Major Whittle conducted the exercises.

CONGREGATIONAL.

— A Chinese Congregational church was organized by a council held at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, June 8th. The Rev. Dr. Damon was elected moderator, and baptized the six persons who united with the new church by profession of their faith.

—The dispatches of Saturday reveal a sad state of affairs in the family of Newman Hall of London. He has just obtained a decree of divorce from his wife on account of her adultery with one Richardson, a stable-keeper. The trial created a great sensation. His wife brought counter charges of the same character. Hall admitted that he abandoned his previous action for divorce because he feared it would be an obstacle to raising funds for his new chapel and for the Lincoln Memorial Tower, commemorative of Abraham Lincoln. The result of the suit was somewhat unexpected. The judge, in his charge to the jury, leaned strongly in favor of the plaintiff. Dr. Hall's friends express themselves greatly elated at the decision of the jury, but the verdict is much criticised, as it is regarded as having been somewhat against the weight of evidence in the case.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—Bro. Woodruff Post, who has suffered many things of the lodge for his honest purpose against its wickedness, is now stationed at Gaines, Tioga county, Pa. He is glad to know that he is not forgotten of the Cynosure friends, and is happy and cheerful though God has permitted the agents of the lodge to grind him to the dust.

—Rev. K. P. Jervis of Wellsboro, Pa., has spoken boldly and publicly in his conference against the evil of secretism.

—Rev. A. T. Riley who renounced Freemasonry at Owatonna, Minn., a few years since is now stationed at Garden Prairie, Ill.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—According to the order of the General Assembly, the Board has appropriated $2,000 to Lawrence, Mass.

—At a recent communion at Willamette congregation, Oregon, nineteen names were added to the roll of the church by profession, certificate and baptism.

—In compliance with the recommendation of the last General Assembly, Messrs. R. Stewart & Co., the publishers of the Repository and Bible Teacher, will undertake the publication of a quarterly, beginning with October 1st.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The terms on which Geneva College was to be removed from Northwood, Ohio, to Beaver Falls, Pa., have been complied with. A magnificent site of ten acres of land has been donated by the Economite Society, and $20,000 has been subscribed for the erection of the building. The building is to be of stone, an excellent article of which is on the ground. A station on the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad, at the corner of the lot, will be called College Station; and a station on the Ft. Wayne and Chicago railroad on the opposite side a quarter of a mile distant. The college will be visible from both roads. A steep bank of great natural beauty and grandeur on one side of the grounds descends to the Beaver river, from 50 to 100 feet. The contract for the building will be let immediately, to be finished by September a year. The many friends of Pres. H. H. George and the institution which he has cared for at Northwood, O., will rejoice to note these advantages which are expected from a change of location.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. Wm. Warner with his son Wm. W., who received his degree at Wheaton at last commencement, is occupying for Christ a large field in Wisconsin, including Byron, Oakfield, Waupun and Baraboo. Their joint labors have been greatly blessed. Nine have lately united at Byron and thirteen at Baraboo.

—Elder N. Wardner, whose visits as connectional evangelist have been greatly blessed to hundreds of churches during the past three years, is now pastor of the church in Morley, N. Y.

CAMP-MEETING NOTICE.

The Lord willing, there will be a camp-meeting held in the town of Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis., four miles west of Baraboo, near Kirkwood Station, in the grove owned by Bro. N. North, commencing the 26th of August, and hold one week. The brethren and sisters coming by the cars on the Chicago and Northwestern road will be met at Baraboo Tuesday at 6 P. M., on the arrival of train; at North Freedom, 7:30 A. M., by dropping a card to W. Van Driessen of Baraboo. It is time to work and take sides for Jesus. All lovers of a pure Gospel are invited. Brethren who expect to attend the Anti-masonic convention are invited. A cordial invitation to all.

W. VAN DRIESSEN.

FRIENDS.

—At the Goshen, Ohio, quarterly meeting were recorded some happy deliverances from filthy habits, as the Christian Worker says:

"The praise meeting on First-day morning was truly a wonderful manifestation of the power of Jesus to save from all sin. Many testified to a full deliverance. One testified of the manner in which he had been save from the use of tobacco; then another, and another, when a proposition was made for all to rise who had been thus delivered from its use. Many stood up, and before taking their seats gave their testimony—all ascribing their salvation from this sin to the power of Jesus only."

—The London Friends at their yearly meeting held in May adopted a strong protest against the South African war which closes thus:

"We now solemnly protest against the flagrant violation of the divine law involved in the aggressive war undertaken against the Zulu people; and plead earnestly that no sentiment of so-called national honor, or the necessity of maintaining the prestige of the nation, or the need of avenging the losses we have sustained, may stand in the way of a speedy and merciful termination of the war,

"We emphatically dissent from the plea so frequently urged, that the evil of such wars may be extenuated as opening the way for the promulgation of the Gospel of peace. On the contrary, we undoubtedly believe that missionary enterprise is greatly retarded by the warlike action of civilized nations toward the heathen races; and we would appeal to our fellow Christians to unite with us in earnest effort for promoting a truly Christian policy toward other nations.

"Signed on behalf of the meeting.

"G. S. GIBSON, Clerk."

BAPTIST.

—Sometime since our New York York letter mentioned the work of Dr. Justin D. Fulton in building up a people's church in that city. The difficulties in the way are great. The free seat system found many opposers in the Hanson Placechurch where he begun. So the Centennial church came into life. A correspondent of the Standard writes hopefully of this enterprise:

"His work with that church has been a constant success. But the house is small, the masses could not be accommodated there. Out-door meetings have been held during the summer, and good has followed. For months his people have been endeavoring to concentrate their thoughts on some line of action. Dr. Fulton believes God clearly indicated to him that he should take the Rink. The gentleman having it in charge has placed the rent at a nominal figure. At a meeting last week, the people who came together seemed to be unanimous in favor of making the effort. On Friday night, July 25, the church voted unanimously to go forward. The Rink has been secured for September and October, and after the doctor's return from his August vacation the campaign will be begun in earnest. No one knows better than he what is involved in such an effort. As he is reported to have said Sunday last, 'a people's church is not what many think it, a plaything or a toy. To work in such a place, fashion, fame and the good opinion of those who desire to make their religion a stepping-stone to position, must be given up. The battle for the truth has to be fought, not looked at and described. It must be a hand-to-hand conflict. Blows must be given and blows must be received.'

"Very many outside the Centennial church will be rejoiced to know that Dr. Fulton is prospered in this enterprise. To him, as to no other, belongs the credit of having first made the Tremont Temple a great success. He gathered and held for nine years that great congregation. There is no disposition to detract from what other did there; but I suppose all will concede what is here claimed for him. Many have long felt that he ought to attempt a similar work in Brooklyn. Can it succeed? It is not easy to answer this question. Brooklyn is now overrun with sensationalism. Looking at the venture on one side, that state of religious life will be hurtful; looked at on another, it may be helpful. Dr. Fulton has many qualities which fit him for such a work. In his best times of public speech, few men can move an audience as he can. There are many all over this broad land who will earnestly pray that this effort may be crowned with an abundant blessing."

FREE MISSIONS.

—Father Taylor, the celebrated Methodist preacher and traveler, organized a free mission work a year or two since in India and South America. This work is independent of any missionary board and is quite successful. In a meeting in New York a few weeks since he made the following statements concerning them:

"Twenty-four missionaries have been sent out to South America. Since last fall, four have been transferred from the field to the kingdom and the crown of glory. Bro. Torbet went to Bombay and from there to glory. He died not from illness. None of those who have gone to India in connection with this work, thus far, have been lost to it from disease. He went with other friends to visit on board the ship Harriet McGilvery. After some time spent in pleasant converse, they all took tea with the Captain, and then engaged in singing. Bro. Torbet left the party to go to the forecastle, and talk among the sailors about Jesus. He did not return. The mate went for him, and was informed that he had left to return to the saloon. The hatch was open, and he had fallen into the hold. He knew not the danger, as he walked from his work among those whose souls he loved; but with his heart in heaven, and his eyes looking upward as he prayed for them, he unconsciously took the step which led him so soon from his work and loved ones, but brought him into the glorious presence of the Master for whom he toiled and suffered.

Bro. Birdsall went to Aspinwall. The place was sickly, and he worked too hard; came home one night from a prayer-meeting suffering from illness. He knew he must die, but did not regret that he had entered the field; prayed that God would send two hundred missionaries to South America. Said, "My faith is in Jesus, that his work in this country will go on." He soon went home to glory. His plucky little wife has come north, expecting after a little preparation to return to labor for the Master. * *

Thus four have gone to glory, and the rest are working on all the harder, because of the consecrated ones who have been buried in South America. They are bound to win the country for Jesus. "And," said Bro. Taylor, "many in Christian lands are dying of respectability and comfort."

The heathen have something startling to show every day. Delicate women in India, when they can, elude the Government's watchfulness, throwing themselves on the funeral pile, to be burned with the dead body of their husband. Every now and then, a man with a hook through his shoulder may be seen swinging through the air, a sacrifice to his religion; while many are eager to throw themselves beneath the car of Juggernaut, to suffer or die to gain the bliss they seek. Thus does heathendom stir up the heroic spirit in men and women.

The pagan priests understand this, and are ever striving to arouse the people to these acts of devotion. While with us, this which leads to mighty deeds is slumbering.

GENERAL.

—The Chinese in New York are meeting for religious services regularly every Sunday, and on several evenings of the week. They are under the general supervision of Rev. C. S. Brown, Methodist missionary at Five Points. Ah Ching, a native Chinaman, has been ordained as deacon of the Trinity Episcopal church in San Francisco. He now takes the name of Walter C. Young, wears his hair short, and wears an American costume. This is probably the first case of a Chinaman being admitted to orders in that church.

—Dr. J. E. Roy thus records an instance of cure by faith in the direct and immediate work of God, which occurred at a "Believers' Meeting" at Clifton Springs, N. Y.: "At the experience meeting on Sunday afternoon Mrs. B., of Evanston, Ill., a lady of Christian character and position, gave testimony to the healing that morning of a thirty years' ailment of her spine by the prayer of faith. She had never thought of that process until a few days ago, when the senior physician asked her why she did not apply to the Lord, get cured, and go home at once, while it would take a year to cure her here. It was proposed that Dr. Cullis come in and pray for her. She declined at first, and then sent for him as she was ready. The attending physician calling and leaving medicine, she told him she should not take any more of it. Prayer was offered by the brother and by herself. The excruciating pain, which for years has followed her waking in the morning as long as two hours, and all other pain of the kind, had not returned for these three days. After waking the first morning, instead of the paroxysms of pain, she had two hours of pleasant sleep. I have consulted with her physician and with the lady herself and am not able to make anything else out of the facts."

—A Bible reading community of eighty souls has been found in the town of Corato, in the Neapolitan province of Italy. It is the outgrowth of the present of a single Bible in 1860 to an image-maker of the place, who, being converted by its perusal, added the work of Bible distribution to his own trade. By this course he so aroused the hostility of the priests that for a considerable time he was compelled to conceal himself.

—A Christian church has lately been built on a hill near Jabra, India, by native Christian masons, carpenters and other artisans, and these workmen were originally thieves by profession. In consequence of having become Christians, they have not only forsaken their evil ways, but learned their various trades. This good work is mainly the fruit of Mr. Narayan Sheshadri's labors.

—The spread of Christianity in Japan during the last seven years has been remarkable. There are now forty-three Protestant churches in that country, with a membership of 1,500. There are fifty-four Sunday schools, with 2,000 scholars; three theological schools, with 175 students; eighty-one missionaries, ninety-three native assistant preachers, ten native pastors and 150 preaching places. In addition to the distinctively religious work, a large number of secular schools are carried on by Christian teachers.

News of the Week.

—Owing to the increase in the number of new cases and deaths in Memphis during last week the Board of Health resolved on Saturday to declare the fever epidemic. A notice at the same time was published warning every one to remain away from the plague-stricken city until official announcement is made of it being safe to return.

—The sale of public lands by the Government during the year 1878 was unprecedentedly large. During the year there were over 6,000,000 acres occupied under the homestead law. The special land grants, sales and homesteads for the year reached nearly 14,000,000 acres. As we have more than 200,000,000 acres tillable land yet unimproved there is room for more.

—Two men were killed and three severely injured by the falling of an over-weighted scaffold last week at a new music hall now being erected in this city.

—Recent efforts to promote the observance of the Sabbath in Peoria, Ill., have been in a degree successful. A telegram on the 27th ult. says: The temperance folks organized what they term a Citizen's League some time ago, and for the past three weeks have been vigilantly and vigorously prosecuting all saloon-keepers who kept their places open on Sunday. Thursday evening the saloon-keepers met and determined to enforce the city ordinance in full, and to-day everything is closed except drug stores, and they are selling nothing but drugs and medicines. It was thought an effort would be made to stop the running of the street cars, but nothing was attempted in this line. The sudden stoppage of everything has caused no little excitement.

—It is reported that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has bought up the Northern Pacific bonds in sufficient quantity to secure the road and the control of all the vast grain trade of Dakota.

—A severe storm passed over the province of Ontario, Canada, last Thursday, doing great damage to property. Several lives were lost.

—A monthly statement of the clearing house returns for the whole country in July shows encouraging gains. The operations of midsummer, even more than those of February and March, show that resumption has given a great impetus to business throughout the country. The grand total for the month is $3,123,000,000, against $2,583,000,000 in July, 1878. Of all the cities of the first-class, Chicago decidedly takes the lead in proportion of increase, with New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia following.

—In the British House of Commons the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the Government proposed to ask a vote of £3,000,000, on account of the expenses of the war in South Africa, which sum, if not sufficient, would at all events suffice for expenses until the next session of Parliament. The new credit thus asked for will raise the expenditure for the Zulu war to £4,500,000. The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the new credit would transform the surplus estimated at the introduction of the budget into a deficit of £1,163,000. He said the Government hopes to recover this sum from the South African colonies, and would ask authority to raise the remainder in exchequer bonds.

—Official returns show that twenty officers and 400 men died of cholera and other diseases on the return march from the Afghan campaign, while only about 100 men were killed in action during the same time.

—The fire which broke out in Serajevo, the capital of Bosnia, on Friday last was extinguished at 8 o'clock next morning after tremendous exertions by the garrison. Help is urgently required for the 20,000 houseless persons. Three soldiers were killed. The conflagration was prevented spreading during Saturday. There were a few isolated outbreaks among the ruins, and soms of the warehouses are still burning. Some of the large firms in the city estimate that the damage will exceed 100,000,000, florins but this is considered exaggerated.

The homeless people are camped in squares and gardens. A relief committee has been organized.

The Emperor of Austria has forwarded 10,000 florins in aid of the sufferers.

It has been definitely ascertained that the fire was caused by the explosion of some spirits, as at first stated.

—Full accounts of the accident to King Alfonso of Spain on his way from the Escurial to La Granja, returning from the funeral of his sister, Maria del Pilar, show that he and the Princess of Asturias had an exceedingly narrow escape. The axle of the carriage broke while passing a precipice. The postillion contrived to swerve the vehicle to the opposite side of the road, thus avoiding a fall by which the whole party must have been killed.

—The Afghanistan treaty has been completed and signed by Major Cavagnari, Yakoob Khan, and other representatives of the two governments. The provisions of the treaty stipulate for the construction of a telegraph line to Cabul through the Koorum Valley. The Ameer's foreign relations are to be entirely under British control, and the British on their part, guarantee him against foreign aggressions. The British Mission was well received and courteously entertained in Cabul.

SALT WATER FOR THE EYES.—Many persons are suffering inconvenience if not pain from weakness of the eyes. This sometimes proceeds from local inflammation, and sometimes from other causes. Persons who have been thus afflicted say that they have derived almost immediate, and in some cases, permanent relief from the application of salt water as a bath; and where the pain has been aggravated, form a compress saturated with salt water laid on the eye, and renewed at certain intervals. Opening the eyes and submerging them in clean salt water has been found beneficial to those whose eyesight begins to fail. The solution should not be more than a tablespoonful of salt to a pint of water, and less if the eyes are weak and very sensitive.

CARE OF THE DROWNING.

Dr. Howard, medical officer of New York harbor, recently explained at the receiving house of the Royal Humane Society, London, his method of resuscitating persons taken from the water in a state of insensibility. The principles upon which he acts are those of clearing away the water and mucus which prevent the entrance of air into the lungs, and the imitation of the movements of the chest in respiration.

He first empties the stomach and passages of water. For this he places the patient's face downward, puts a roll of something hard under the pit of the stomach, so that it is above the level of the mouth, and then presses with all his force on the back. Afterward, to set up artificial breathing, instead of partial rolling of the body or the pumping action of the arms now practiced, the body is laid upon the back with the clothes stripped down to the waist. The pit of the stomach is now raised to the highest point by something under the back. A bundle of clothing or the the body of another person will do this. The head is thrown back and the tongue must drawn forward by an assistant, so as to keep open the entrance to the air tubes. Beware of more than one or two assistants. The hands are passed over the head, the wrists crossed, the arms kept firmly extended. In this position the chest is fully expanded. The operator then kneels astride the body, places his hands on the lower part of the ribs, and steadily and gradually makes compression. Balancing on his knees he inclines himself forward until his face nearly touches that of the patient, and so lets fall the whole weight of his body upon the chest. When this has yielded as much as it will, he throws himself back, by a sudden push, to his first erect position of kneeling, and the elastic floating ribs by their expanding bellows action draw air into the lungs. These manœuvres must be repeated regularly twelve to fifteen times in the minute.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Clean a brass kettle, before using it for cooking, with salt and vinegar.

Yolk of egg is as nourishing as white, though a little heavier.

Milk soup is a very nice dish for children or sick persons.

Lamps will have a less disagreeable smell if you dip your wick in strong hot vinegar and dry it.

Try a very small piece of hard soap and a little butter in hot starch to make it glossy.

In making puff paste the batter should be free from milk and butter. Squeezing it in a clean towel will take out all superfluous juice.

Hartshorn will restore colors taken out by acid. It may be dropped upon any garment (especially black) without doing harm.

Indian meal should be kept in a cool place, and stirred open in the air once in a while. A large stone put in the middle of a barrel of meal is a good thing to keep it cool.

Those who make candles will find it a great improvement to steep the wicks in lime water and saltpetre and dry them. The flame is clearer, and the tallow will not run.

Spirits of turpentine is good to take grease spots out of woolen clothes, to take spots of paint from mahogany furniture, and to cleanse white kid gloves. Cockroaches and all vermin have an aversion to spirits of turpentine.

Where borax and insect powder fail to work on cockroaches, use red wafers, scattering abundantly where they run—a sure cure. A quarter of a pound will clear the largest house; they eat and die.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge hy a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This hook has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

To Wisconsin readers:—Are you a friend to this reform? If so you cannot well afford to be absent from this meeting. You are needed to aid in planning, and starting the work of the year. Will you have a State Lecturer? If so, who? and how shall he be supported? Get your church or society to send delegates. If you cannot attend or get your church to send a delegate, direct a letter to the convention. Let the friends know in some way what you want and that you are a live anti-secret church or individual. Take a collection, send a contribution, or do something to help on the cause. Secretary Stoddard will deliver the opening address. Elders Barlow, Browne and Rathbun will be present, with others always able in council and eloquent in speech. Two or more degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry will be worked. This will be a favorable opportunity to subscribe for the Christian Cynosure and to obtain tracts and anti-secrecy publications on special terms. Topics of the Time.

In respect to the late warlike reports from the northwest, great satisfaction is reported from Washington at the news of peace. President Hayes says he has been determined from the first not to allow an Indian war if there was any possible way to avoid it. The expense of Indian wars is so great that he is determined there shall be none in his administration if possible. The country will endorse the President, although his motive may be only one of economy.

Reports from Alaska show that liquor is the cause of nearly all the dffiiculty in that region, and that the U. S. troops and gunboats kept there at great expense are really of little use but to protect the traffic, by preventing outbreaks arising from its sale. Commander Beardsly reports destroying three stills and a large quantity of material and liquor in the houses of soldiers, and thirty-eight stills and 150 gallons of liquor and much mash among the Indians. He believes that the first and only step by which Alaska can ever be saved or developed will be such laws of Congress as will put a stop to the manufacture of intoxicants. Naturalized American merchants, mostly Jews, are the dealers in liquor and are the loudest in calling for "protection!"

In the pardon of Heywood, the publisher of vile literature, President Hayes learned that he had committed a grave mistake. Another case has just been decided by him in defense of pure morals and strict justice. D. M. Bennett, under sentence for violating the law against using the mail for transmission of immoral publications, had appealed for a pardon. The efforts for his relief are said to have been unprecedented. Petitions from all parts of the country signed, it is said, by 130,000 names, were sent to Washington and the personal influence of prominent men was added to the scale. But Anthony Comstock had made the case too clear, and executive clemency was absolutely refused. Bennett was removed immediately to Albany penitentiary to expiate his base and monstrous crime.

A very significant leer at Mr. Comstock and at Protestant Christianity in this case should not pass unmentioned. The Catholic Review charges the crime of Bennett upon Protestantism, as a legitimate result of the doctrines held by the evangelical churches, and is much more provoked at the efforts to punish such crimes than at the criminal himself. Such brazen effrontery may possibly be explained as an attempt to cover the corruptions of the celibate priesthood. As to crime in general the papal church furnishes its proportion, if the frequent visits of its priests to the gallows is any evidence. "It is a singular fact," observes the Catholic Mirror, "that many criminals seem to be drawn toward the Catholic church when all earthly hope has left them." It is, on the contrary, a remarkable evidence of the unsafe moral instruction of Romanism. The condemned man seeks the consolations of that religion under which he was trained, and that the majority of such cases turn to the priest shows how little power exists in that false system to reform society or save the race.

Whatever arrangement of their differences may be completed between Bismarck and the Pope, it is rumored that the Crown Prince Frederick, Queen Victoria's son-in-law, has declared officially and positively that on his part, to agree to the alteration of Prussian laws to accord with the statutes of Romanism, would be inconsistent with loyalty to his ancestors and duty to his country. His influence may modify the measures now pending. In France where a similar struggle with Rome is going on, there is more than a possibility that the priesthood, by an apparent acquiesence in the political changes of the republic, will secure their control in ecclesiastical affairs. The following paragraph from the daily press presents the case clearly: "By far the most striking and suggestive passage of M. Paul Bert's great speech was his forecast of a total change of political front on the part of the Jesuits—at least of those in France. 'The Jesuits are not to be feared at present,' he observed; 'they will first become really dangerous when they become republicans.' If the republic becomes a settled form of government in France and gives certain pledge of a long duration, the conversion of the French Jesuits to republicanism is certain. That the order knows exactly how to accommodate itself to republican theories, procedures and forms has been made plain enough in the history of Switzerland prior to the total expulsion of the Jesuit fathers, thirty years ago, by the consentient vote of the Catholic and Protestant cantons, after the civil war of the Sonderbund."

Some of the Southern planters have taken a novel way of checking the exodus. Persuaded that the colored people already in Kansas were suffering greatly beyond their former condition, two Mississippi men of means sent all through the the State inviting representative colored men to go with them to Kansas and see for themselves, confident that their ill report on their return would be enough. This novel excursion with eleven cars full of colored and one of white men passed through St. Louis last week to spy out the poverty of their brethren.

Free Missions.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The great and pressing need of the times is an emancipated ministry of the Word; a preaching of the Gospel that regards neither the fear nor the favor of man, and that has no fellowship with any unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reproves them. Manifestly the ministry of the great religious denominations are (with honorable exceptions) in bondage to public opinion. To them the voice of the people is the voice of God. A few years ago this public sentiment said "Thou shalt not speak against American slavery," and the church and the ministry obeyed. To-day the same voice says, "Thou shalt not speak against the lodge," and the same spirit of obedience is rendered.

Quite unconsciously, perhaps, but really and truly, the churches and the ministers are asking, What will be most popular? what most promote the interests of our denomination? What is the mind of Christ is a secondary and subordinate consideration.

The press, secular and religious, yield to the same law. They are either dumb with silence or speak in apology for and in justification of the lodge.

Of the missionary societies (except those of the churches that have a standing rule against secretism) all alike reflect the popular opinion. All alike welcome to their ministry and mission churches not only those who practice the Christless religion of the lodge, but a ritual and rites copied after and precisely similar to the paganism they are sent to destroy. The apparent exception of the American Missionary Association is only apparent. Its feeble testimony against the lodge seems to have died out, and its voice is no more heard.

Six hundred thousand Freemasons dominate the churches, the ministry, the press and the mission boards, just as half that number of slaveholders did thirty years ago. The man who does not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, now as then, does it at the expense of popular favor and a comfortable support. Now as then, "They hate him that rebuketh in the gate. They abhor him that speaketh uprightly."

What we need now is what we needed then—an emancipated ministry and a free Gospel. We need a plan and work of that shall help us in this conflict with the lodge precisely as the American Missionary Association and other free mission societies did in the conflict with the slave power. We need it as the almoner of those churches and Christians who can no longer give to Masonic ministers, nor to the support of churches which are the bulwarks of Baalism. We need it to aid those faithful men who "follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth," whether amidst the shoutings of popular favor or in his humiliation and to his cross. And we need it that the church may be purified and the nation saved.

Such a plan was adopted at the meeting of the Illinois Christian Association at Wheaton, Nov. 21–23, 1878. A little was done in aid of one or two needy missionaries, but mainly the cause has slept. We must awake. The time is opportune and the light is breaking.

The Moral Influence of College Secret Societies.

The time is now at hand when hundreds of students will gain in Commencement examinations their first view of college life and college men. The occasion is favorable for an earnest consideration of that institution which, in most colleges, attracts the earliest attention of the novitiate—the college secret society.

These societies profess to exist in the interests of brotherhood, mutual advancement and moral culture. Noble and worthy aims, but does their record sustain these claims? It speaks but little for their benevolence that they select only the wealthiest and most highly gifted, while those who most need assistance and protection are left to bear unaided their own burden, made still heavier by the withdrawal of all sympathy and encouragement. The interests of the individual are even made subordinate to those of the society. This is manifest in the attitude of these secret organizations toward purely literary societies, as shown in the extermination of the "Linonia" and "Brothers in Unity" of Yale, the "Phœnix" and "Union" of Hamilton, and in fact the almost universal paralysis of similar literary effort. Their habits of secrecy weaken the moral fibre by exalting trivial matters into a fictitious importance, and substituting for the open truth a pretentious sham. The impulses and sympathies, natural to youth, are warped and stunted by the narrowing effect of living only in the contracted sphere of their own little clique. Within its limits, the sentiment of the outside world fails to penetrate; and abuses, which might otherwise be speedily corrected by public opinion, are thus protected and strengthened. The habits and opinions of its leaders exercise such despotic sway, that the young member soon finds his own conscience lost in the will of the majority, and the deception of instructors begins to appear a very excusable matter, or not an offence at all. Dissension and clannishness in the college, are the natural results of the secret society: partiality and favoritism follow on the part of faculty members, combinations are formed by their means which screen members from just punishment, and the personal rivalries occasioned are equalled only by the obscenities which grow unchecked under their shelter of secrecy. The students become so broken up into cliques, that they unite with difficulty in any Christian or moral enterprise. The fraternity becomes exalted to the place which the church ought to occupy, the hand of Christian sympathy too often reaches no farther than the limits of the society. Pledged by oath to support things not yet known, members often sicken of their bargain upon their exposure, and while hesitating to incur the enmity consequent upon their withdrawal, they find their better natures revolting at the real character of the associates to whom their oath holds them in bondage.

The expense of insignia, furnishing of halls, frequent suppers and conventions, drains the purses of those of moderate means to an extent often exceeding the legitimate college expenses. The false pride of display which these societies foster by making honest labor disgraceful in their members, excludes all but the wealthy, or else leads to the use of funds of charitable endowments or church boards in the maintenance of a needless and dishonest luxury by those dependent on such funds for the opportunity of an education. To such an extent does this state of things prevail in many colleges that numbers of able young men, capable of bearing the expense necessarily incident to a collegiate course, are yet constrained to forego its advantages through inability to satisfy the requirements of a pernicious system. Instances are numerous in which by the aid of his society the student has expended in one or two years the sum provided for the four, and in consequence been compelled to abandon his college course.

A still greater evil is the immunity from the observation or discipline of college authorities. Their numerous festivities, besides unfitting for study, tend to cultivate habits of intemperance, as well as gambling and other vices. These and similar influences unite in breaking down the barriers of Christian restraint, emasculating conscience, and poisoning the moral atmosphere, until terrible as the indictment may appear, the number of conversions occurring in college revivals does not replace those who have gone from Christian homes, themselves professing Christians, and been to all human appearance ruined utterly by their connection with these societies. This great evil is the more lamentable because counterbalanced by no corresponding good.

The very interests which they claim to subserve, can be better promoted by other means. Literary advancement, upon which the advocates of this system lay such stress, is far more effectually obtained in the broad field of the open society. All requirements of brotherhood and firm friendship may be fully met in this, and without the veil of secrecy, or the silly mummery of grips and symbols. Indeed, every college graduate will at once recall frequent instances in which the joining of different fraternities has led to the estrangement and even antagonism of life-friends.

The names of former members, now high in place and reputation, often form the chief argument used to secure new additions; yet the name and position of alumni, are no guarantee for the present condition of fraternities to which they belonged thirty or forty years ago. In fact, the moral status of the secret society is ever shifting with the moral character of the men controlling it; and instances are not wanting of associations organized upon the basis of anti-secrecy, which in a very few years have degenerated into the most exclusive of secret societies.

What is the well-considered testimony of our most experienced instructors? In his "Reminisences of Amherst College," President Hitchcock has embodied the "Answers to Inquiries addressed to most of the Northern Colleges." The reply of one, substantially represents the rest. "Nothing but evil results, or is likely to result from them upon members themselves as students or as Christians."

In 1869 Howard Crosby, Chancellor of the University of New York, wrote in the Congreationalist of Boston: "Thirty years ago I was a member of a college secret society, and while I had upright fellow-members, and we encouraged literary culture, I found the association was chiefly a temptation to vice."

The Illinois Synod of the United Presbyterian church, convened at Monmouth Sept. 6, 1873, adopted the resolution, "That no presbytery recommend any young man to the Board of Education for aid in his study for the ministry, who is connected with a Greek society."

Harper's Monthly for January, 1874, contained an article by its editor, G. W. Curtis, himself a society man, where we find these words: "Everybody knows, not in particular, but in general, that the object of a college secret society is really 'good fellowship,' with the charm of mystery added."

President Eliot of Harvard, in the North American Review, of March–April, 1878, commends Oxford and Cambridge because the "'hazing,' 'rushing,' secret societies and the other barbaraties and puerilities which still linger in most American colleges," are there unknown.

The testimony of Dr. McCosh, as given in a succeeding number of the same Review, is that "they foster in youth, when character is formed, a habit of underhand action which is apt to go through life."

President Porter of Yale ("American Colleges," page 195) states that "could the continuity of many of these societies from one college year to another be broken up, the college life would be greatly ennobled."

There is, however, no need to trespass upon your columns with any further quotations from the mass of testimony on our table. We have touched only a single phase of the objections to secret societies, but that alone is enough to secure their condemnation.—N. Y. Evangelist, June 12.

From the Lodge to the Saloon.

[Extracts from the Masonic department of the Advocate, edited by Albert G. Mackey.]

It would be a great advantage if our lodge Masters would say a few words to the candidate at the close of the degree, impressing upon him the moral force and personal application of the ceremonies and the meaning of the symbols, and the importance of the obligations they have assumed. The standard ritual of the M. W. Grand Lodge of the State of New York as was practiced ten years ago, is, in itself, a grand, interesting, instructive and impressive series of ceremonies, and if properly appreciated by the officers and brothers, cannot fail to make a deep and lasting impression upon the candidate. Add to this the explanation of the symbols, clothed in beautiful language by by the Worshipful Master, adds not only pleasure and profit to the members, but fixes indelibly upon the mind of the candidate wise and serious truths, and thus through a lifetime are never forgotten. This system would so impress the minds of the brethren that they would not only remain until the close of the lodge, but would have little relish to go from the lodge to a saloon to drink beer and whisky. Higher and holier aspirations would result from such a course.—Masonic column Advocate, June 5, 1878.

No brother should be arraigned before the lodge until private efforts have been exhausted to reclaim him. A brother on trial for intemperance might well plead, "Not one of my brethren have ever warned me of approaching danger." How can members who have drank with him, sat in saloons with him, and observed him going down the hill of vice with such speed, vote to expel him? He was a jolly good fellow, and had no right to give way to drink and thus subject him to the ignominy of expulsion, you say, while you were the the direct or indirect cause of his downfall. Every member of a lodge who drinks intoxicants is guilty of the downfall of any brother who may be arraigned for unmasonic conduct resulting from drink! How then is it possible for such to vote for expulsion?—Advocate, July 10, 1878. [Compare with 1 Cor. 8. 9–13.]

Nothing is thriving in the soul unless it is growing.

Mabel Martin is the title of one of Whittier's "Home Ballads." It is a love story in which the praying, Bible-reading mother was executed as a witch by the dupes of superstition who thought they were doing God's will—at which the poet bursts forth in these lines:

Dear God and Father of us all,
Forgive our faith in cruel lies,—
Forgive the blindness that denies!

Forgive thy creature when he takes,
For the all-perfect love thou art,
Some grim creation of his heart.

Cast down our idols, overturn
Our bloody altars: let us see
Thyself in thy humanity!

A good man had the courage to marry the poor, despised daughter of the burned woman; gave her his heart and home and made life again dear to her. But alas! that the prayer itself should be applicable to our own day and country in relation to the slavery past or nearly so, and the lodge yet present. H.

The Sermon.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Sabbath morning, August 10th, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

SECTARIANISM—THE ROAD OUT.

For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another I am of Apollos: are ye not carnal?—1 Cor. 3:4.

Some Sabbaths since it seemed a duty to say to you some words on the subject of sectarianism. In regard to the thoughts advanced at that time so far as I know there is little difference of opinion. Both in this congregation and among Christians in other places the doctrine taught was, so far as I am aware, accepted as Scriptural. There have been only two suggestions made in reference to it, to which I care at this time to allude. The first was, that though the sermon was a fair statement of Bible teaching on the subject of sectarianism, yet neither this particular church, nor any other was free from condemnation in the matter. That is, all existing churches are to a greater or less extent, involved in the sin of dividing Christ's body and hindering Christ's prayer for the unity of his people.

My answer is first, that if this were true it is a thing of the past and is only to be repented of and abandoned. The responsibility for division and strife is widely distributed. Perhaps a portion of it falls upon us. If so, we will bear it, repent of it, and put it away. In the second place, so far as I know, we are not at present guilty of any schismatic practices. We are not named from Paul nor Apollos, from government or practice, but as all churches in the Bible were so we are named from locality. We are the College church. We receive all who truly love our Lord Jesus Christ as brethren in him. We have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them, and we earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints.

As to the practice of other Christian churches, we have no responsibility save to declare the truth as God reveals it to us. To the Master of us all they shall stand or fall, yea (as we believe) many of them will be holden up, for God is able to make them stand. The fact that they have been saying "I am of Paul; and I am of Apollos," is no sign that they will continue to do so, nor would it make any difference with the teachings of God's Word, or our duty if they did.

LET US SEE WHERE WE ARE.

We found, when considering this theme before, that Christ prayed for the union of his people, that they all might be one.

We also found that the union prayed for does not at present exist. That instead of being one, Christians are divided into multitudes of warring sects, each magnifying itself and pushing Christ out of sight.

We found that the causes for these divisions are entirely insufficient. In a town where there are enough Christians to make one strong working church we find two, three, four or five feeble organizations, the points separating them being questions of church government, church ceremonies, or the amount of water to be used in baptism; whether as much as one can hold on the fingers, or in the hand, or as much as may be contained in a tub. Now these are matters on which agreement is desirable, but they are not points which will send any body to heaven or hell, and while the world is lying in wickedness, it does not seem to us pleasing God, to divide up his children on matters of this kind.

These inexcusable divisions we found to be a heavy burden. Needless church edifices, erected by the self-sacrifice of the poor, are standing empty two-thirds of the time in ten of thousands of cities and towns to-day. In the churches of this little village probably there are five hundred sittings unoccupied at this moment. Two mission societies have already promised money, given much of it by the poor, to complete a building here in this town where the morning congregation is said to be from seventy-five to one hundred and fifty, and the evening congregation from ten to thirty. Of course the church requires a minister, fuel, lights and janitor service, all of which expenses are needless made from two to ten times as great as they ought to be.

These divisions, being burdensome, keep poor people out of the church. A man of spirit don't want to join a church loaded with debt, with a minister unpaid and a regular deficiency at the end of every year, for incidentals. He not only don't want to unite with such a church but he won't do it, and does not do it. The men of average means throughout the United States are steadily drifting into the non-church going class, and these burdens which neither we nor our fathers have been able to bear are largely responsible for this unhappy fact.

We found also that because of this state of things churches are constantly perjuring themselves. They want a man to fill the pews, to attract the crowd. Such men usually have not spirituality. They are only moved by the magnetic influence of a good salary and a long vacation. To get such a man the church promises more than it can pay and time after time the church, the Bride of Christ, dishonors her word and causes honest men of the world to blush for her shame.

Then, too, what money is raised is often secured by unchristian means. Not long since the Catholics in this village gave a dance at a beer house to raise money for their building. One of my friends who is in that church when remonstrated with on the subject replied: "Any way to get money for the church; it's all right." Now this dance is only the church festival gone to seed, and those who find no harm in the one ought not to grumble about the other.

In the eighth place we found that churches court unconverted and wicked men who have money because of this state of things. Have we not seen time and again minister and church down on their knees before some purse-proud man, flattering, fawning and dirt-eating in the hope (often a vain one) that he will open his safe and enable them to play at religion in fine style. Oh brethren and sisters, how does the Lord Jesus look on such a sight? Often these unconverted men are urged into the church, and when this is not the case, frequently a society is organized which holds the money power and rules the church with a rod of greenbacks.

Again, of course the preaching corresponds to the church. If the church is run on worldly principles the minister will take his cue and run greedily in the way of Baalam the son of Bosor who loved the wages of unrighteousness.

And finally, the few good men in each sectarian organization, who really wish to testify for the truth will find themselves hampered and hindered at every turn by those who are willing to crucify the truth once a week if only in this way they can keep alive our church, which never should have come into existence. If I saw a man tinkering at a reaper, mending it here and there while his grain was going into the ground, I should advise him to let his reaper alone, take a cradle or sickle and go into the field. So, if the only thing a church can do is to live; if the minds of brethren and sisters are continually busy with the questions, How shall we pay our minister? How shall we get a new carpet, and wherewithal shall our church obtain a new coat of paint? if these are the things which are occupying the mind of a church it would please God (I believe) to take the house to pieces, give the lumber to some poor people, and then let the members take Bibles under their arms and go everywhere preaching the word.

WE HEARD ALL THIS BEFORE.

I know, but, dear friends, these are not mere words; they are awful, horrible truths, that need to be so deeply impressed upon our minds that we shall be led to pray with Christ that his people may be one, and take some practical means to produce that result. If Paul were writing to us he would not say, one says, I am Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; for we don't say this. He would say, "While one says, I am Congregationalist; and another, I am Presbyterian; and another, I am Baptist: and another, I am Episcopalian; are ye not carnal? These names are evil clouds that hide the sun of righteousness from the hearts of men—away with them all." That is, this is the way he did then and would do now unless his methods had changed.

But, you say, there must be some divisions; all the people in a country or even in a city cannot worship in one congregation, and since there must be divisions, why are not these which we have as good as any?

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF DIVISION.

This is true and I will briefly state the Scriptural teaching on the subject.

The first ground of separation which is just and Christian is locality. In the Bible churches are always named from the place where they exist. We have the church of Ephesus, of Smyrna, of Sardis, of Philadelphia. There is no mention of any general churches in the holy book. We have no church of Asia Minor, church of Palestine, church of Greece or church of Italy. We find no sectarian names like Wesleyan, Congregationalist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, or the like. The churches were simply congregations of people who worshiped the Lord Jesus, and they took their names from the place where they were.

Of course in a city churches statedly meeting in certain streets would be named from street or square, and this so far as the Bible teaching is concerned is the only manner in which they should be designated.

A second ground of division is denial of the Word of God. A church is an assemblage of believers who statedly meet for the worship of God and the maintenance of the ordinances of his house. They are believers in what? Why in the Word of God and in the revelation of God therein contained. Now if this book be denied or dishonored, the organization so doing, by that act ceases to be a church. It is no longer an assemblage of believers, and hence he who finds an organization purporting to be a church, but denying the Word of God as the rule, and the only rule for faith and practice is not to have fellowship therewith.

It is not to be claimed for a moment that any church understands perfectly the whole Word of God. The man who makes the claim for himself or his church makes himself ridiculous. Protestant infallibility is just as sensible as Catholic infallibility, and no more so. There are in the Book many things hard to be understood, and probably that soul which has penetrated most deeply the mysteries of God will in one moment of heaven understand more than by three score and ten years of study on earth. But while no man is to constitute himself God's vicegerent on earth and attempt to declare authoritatively on all points of difference, still every man who claims the Christian name is bound to believe that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, reproof and correction in righteousness. If any church deny this it is a synagogue of Satan.

A third ground of division is the practice and justification of wicked and unscriptural works. Thus those churches which commune with and defend slavery, Freemasonry, or any other immoral act or association are not in the Bible sense, Christian churches.

If then in a village there be one church (so called) which denies the Word of God, or refuses to apply it to the ways of men, Christian men and women are not under obligation to sustain it. If they can say truly, "I believe that this church as a church rejects the Word of God, or is holding the truth in unrighteousness; that it is apostate or heretical," he is not guilty of sectism if he withdraw from it and establish a church in his own house. But if he say, "I believe that this is a true church, its members endeavoring to walk in the light and its works in accord with the commands of Christ; but because they don't govern themselves by the right kind of officers, don't name their prayer-meetings class meetings or vice versa, don't use enough water in baptism or use too much, I will draw off from them and start another church which shall have the names right or use a proper amount of water." Such a man seems to me to be a divider of Christ's body, a schismatic.

THE WAY OUT OF OUR PRESENT STATE.

We have now considered the present deplorable condition of the church of Christ, rent and torn into a thousand factions, which have no excuse from the Word of God or reason, and which are a shame and disgrace to the Christian world. We have also seen the grounds on which separation of churches is justifiable, but we have not learned how we are to get out from our present state into one where we can feel that we have behind us, and under us the rock of God's Word, and sound common sense.

First the change is to be produced by proclamation of the truth. This is not an easy or agreeable thing to do. Men don't like to hear it or speak it when it goes contrary to the prevailing customs or opinions. The thing which made John Knox and Luther and Peter and Paul differ from other men, and particularly from us poor ministers, was the habit they had of nailing down to the counter every piece of base coin, which men offered them as the currency of heaven. Going around difficulties instead of meeting them like men, this is the prevailing vice among moderns and it is making us a mean set.

Now so far as I am acquainted with men, the views which are here presented are almost universally acknowledged to be true. They admit that while one says, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; we are yet carnal. They admit that millions of dollars are spent every year for simple sectism. They do not deny that missions in foreign lands are disgraced by rivalries and of course weakened in power. They know that the weakness of churches makes them dependent on monied men, and that there are thousands of empty or half filled church buildings all over the country, standing like salty pillars as monuments of this sectarian folly and sin. And yet we do not hear this third chapter of first Corinthians read and applied to this crime against God and man.

Our religious (?) papers print for the sects; we ministers too often preach for them. We busy ourselves in finding excuses for men's saying I am of Paul and I of Apollos. We put the Scriptures to the rack in order to compel them to testify in favor of this abomination. If Paul were to come into one of our villages and find half a dozen churches where there was field and work for one, each one barely existing and giving suppers and shows of one kind and another to eke out a subsistence, do you imagine that he would go to lecturing and preaching all round the horizon, or would he say, "Ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?"

Oh! for one or two sermons to modern Christians from that old tent maker! But he is among the blessed ones. He has finished his course and kept the faith, and now we are to follow in the same narrow, blessed, hard way until there bursts on our vision the light from the heavenly hills where now he is crowned.

Dear brethren, preach the word; tell men that it is wrong to say, I am of Paul and I am of Apollos. You need not worry over the fate of your seed. Sow in the morning; in the evening withhold not thy hand. God takes care of his own truth and when once it is uttered it is immortal; at sometime or other it will spring up and bear abundant harvests.

Another step in this good work is the union of weak churches on a Christian basis. Where two or more organizations are occupying ground where the interests of Christ's cause require but one, reason and religion join in making it a duty to seek their union. There is no profit however in going into such a conference unless you are willing to give up all unchristian and sectarian titles. So long as persons are determined to be called after Paul or Apollos, it will be wasting time to talk of union. I have known cases in which the members of two churches amused themselves with the idea that they were planning for union, for years, when in fact neither party was willing to take the first step in that direction. Each hoped the other would abandon its sectarian name and peculiarities, neither one of them had the least thought of doing so itself. Hence their talk simply occupied time that might have been better spent. Now don't insult God and abuse your own intellects by talking union on any such basis. God is not mocked. If you do this, he sees how you hold on to your sect and allow his cause to suffer and he is not pleased with you.

One other thing essential to this work is the possession of a meek and humble spirit. The spirit of sect is proud, arrogant, self righteous and devilish. No union is possible until this is cast out. Not long since I spoke to a brother who was trying to build up a little organization in a town where there was already one of almost identical faith, doctrine and practice, and said to him: "Why don't your people unite with ——— congregation instead of trying to starve along and start another?" He replied: "O, if they will be converted we will receive them into OUR church." What a sweet, lovely, humble spirit was manifested in these words! Now the neighbors would have told you that the one church was quite as good as the other; that the members were as honest, kind and Christian. But he says, "If they will be converted we will receive them into our church." From all such churches and Christian ministers Good Lord deliver us.

There is no union in a spirit of this kind. If you have this spirit don't attempt anything of the sort. You will fail. if you do. Only when men's hearts are melted by the divine love do they run together. If you are willing to have such a church as the epistle to the Romans or Corinthians was addressed to, and if your hearts are humble you will find that you can (not at first perhaps, but by and by) unite the scattered flock of Christ. But if you are proud and self-righteous, determined to be Methodist, or Baptist, or Congregationalist or what not, go on saying I am of Paul or Apollos, but remember, you are yet carnal.

One thing more and I have done. We are not to aid by money or word in this sect building. Churches that are built merely to sustain a denomination are churches into which no Christian man has a right to put a dollar. Probably no man in this congregation, forty years of age, could say that he has not done this thing. I have done it myself. I supposed that I was helping to build a reform church, but when it was dedicated the pastor of the Masonic church of the village was invited into the pulpit and not many years after this reform (?) church went into a protracted meeting, with an explicit agreement that no mention was to be made of the lodge. Nor were the men who made this bargain bad men; they were simply dear, weak brethren who wanted to keep up THEIR church. I do not speak these words to reproach them or any one else. The trouble was not with men; it was that dark spirit of sect that has rent and torn the body of Christ until the church to-day lies, as the lad did at the foot of the mountain, while the father cried, * * "if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us and help us." We have all, perhaps, to a greater or less extent, aided this foul fiend heretofore, and the times of our ignorance God will forgive, but now he commands all men everywhere to repent of sectarianism and to love one another with pure hearts fervently. God help us so to do, for the sake of his dear Son, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Reform News.

—Elder J. F. Browne lectured last Thursday evening at Oneco, Jo Daviess county, Ill., and the next evening at Pleasant Valley Bethel (Church of God), in the same county. He expects to attend the expositions this week and next with Elder Rathbun and then to help on at the Wisconsin State meeting.

—The brethren in Missouri are arranging for their State meeting. Time and place will be settled by the executive committee which meets this week at Avalon, during the session of the Missouri conference of the United Brethren in Christ.

RALLY AT MORNING SUN, IOWA.

Correspondence with some of the veteran reformers in Iowa indicates that they have lost none of their zeal in the cause which they have so heroically defended, and that they are determined to make the approaching anniversary the grandest rally yet. They have made a good selection, where the cause has many and fearless friends, and now let there be a gathering together for earnest work and importunate prayer. There will be no lack of speakers, and there should be no lack of workers. Wise counsellors to plan and set the work in motion for the next year will be most needed and every friend should begin to think how the work can best be done. Shall the State be districted and canvassed by a number of volunteers armed with tracts who shall visit from house to house, hold meetings in school houses, or wherever they can get a hearing; or shall Bro. Rathbun, Bro. Austin, or some other competent man be kept at work; or can both be combined and worked together? In either case or whatever plan may be adopted will require some money to make it succeed and every friend should make up his mind to bear his part of the necessary expense of the year. I know the generosity of some of the Iowa brethren, and have no fears that they will ever be found wanting. But this matter of paying should be more generally and justly shared by the friends than it has sometimes been. A good many plans have been suggested and talked over in our conventions to raise money, but the only one that has succeeded worth a cent is for each man to put his hand into his pocket and pay his share. You have a treasurer in Iowa whose word is good for ten thousand dollars in trust, without a bond, and no friend need to fear that any amount sent to Moses Varney, Springdale, Cedar county, will slip through a bottomless bag into some private pocket and be lost to the cause.

The ranks of the enemy are depleting; their lines are wavering; fewer recruits and more desertions every month. Once more to the onset! Victory begun if not followed up is the most inglorious of defeats. "Lo I am with you even unto the end," is the Captain's word. Yours in the hope of a grand triumph of light over darkness, truth over error, and Christ over the devil at Morning Sun, Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th prox. J. P. STODDARD.

"ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH."

Great principles are immortal. Great reforms founded upon them, can never fail. All who intelligently and zealously labor for such transformations will sooner or later receive their reward; while those who stand idly by, indifferent to the sufferings inflicted upon society by individuals or institutions, may expect the treatment experienced by him who buried his one talent.

All true reforms are a carrying out of God's purposes, and reaching to God's ends, and all who further them by the necessary labor and sacrifices, giving to them heart, hand, prayer, time and money, are God's servants, under wages and doing his work. Among these reforms may be classed the work of

by the State Christian Associations auxiliary to the N. C. A., among which may be ranked, not last nor least, the Association of Wisconsin, which meets at on the first Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next month. To this meeting every local association, every ecclesiastical body in the State in sympathy with our reform, should send its representatives; and where there is no such organization, let individual friends represent themselves—coming up to the meeting with zeal, with faith, with prayer, with courage and with money to meet the current expenses and to enable us to put a lecturer in the field the coming year. We are enabled to say to the friends of this cause that ours is attempting impossibilities and fighting against an invincible foe; but since the revival of our work twelve years ago, there has been an advance along the lines,—slow, it may be, but sure. Our prospects were never more encouraging. According to a statement in the July number of the Voice of Masonry, within the last ten years (since we began our active work) 150,000 Masons in this country have been lost to the craft. And the Supreme Grand Commander, in view of this showing, fittingly cries, "What shall the harvest be!"

It is worse than useless to say that our work has had nothing to do with this. Many of us know better. Not a single State Convention in this or other States but has given an impetus to this work of disintegrating the lodges; and now let the friends in Wisconsin take courage, and come up to Evansville in such numbers, and showing such a front to the foe as shall convince that we are in earnest, and determined under God to redeem the family, the church and state from the dominant influence of Freemasonry and its kindred societies.

Wisconsin leads off this year in the State meetings. A good meeting and good work done at Evansville, will send a tidal wave of good cheer all along the lines, while a failure would have an opposite effect, and one we must, if possible, avoid. Up, then, friends, to the work. We anticipate a grand time. The work of preparation is in good hands. A telegram just received assures the presence of Rathbun to work the degrees, and the speakers who will be present are no novices in the work.

Britten, Van Alstyne, Carter, Collins, Wood and others too numerous to mention, of the tried and true; your acting secretary wants to see you face to face, and strike hands with the workers in his adopted State. As our meeting is so near the Illinois line, may we not expect to see some of the friends of that State? "Once more move unto the breach, dear friends."

FATHER TAYLOR READY FOR WORK.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—How shall I make it known to the lecture bureau, to the churches and friends of reform, and the rest of mankind, that I am a Presbyterian minister out of regular work; that I understand Freemasonry and am quite capable of showing its heathenism or working the degrees; that I am or have been a popular speaker in my time; that I have stood fire; and that though kept a little in the background I am ready for the battle now going on between light and darkness, between the armies of Satan and the armies of the living God. Here I have been flashing and thundering in your columns for three years and more, and have at least advertised myself in three other papers; and yet I find a man with a congregation at his back, wanting a Presbyterian minister endowed with the grace of grit, and because he knows of no such Presbyterian, goes right by me clear to Illinois, and gets a minister of another denomination. And now comes a man who wants lectures on Masonry, and you make the welkin ring with inquiries for some body to go to his help, but you do not tell him that I am ready to aid him with all my artillery.

The Utica convention treated me very kindly indeed; in fact, they were over-kind to my nerves and gray hairs. Is that the reason why I am left in the background?

Meanwhile I am not idle. Within the last five weeks I have given fourteen lectures and sermons at and within eight miles of this place, have "demonstrated" the first degree four times and the third degree three times, if putting a man through those degrees a la Rathbun amounts to demonstration; and have had the satisfaction of seeing a very great fall in Masonic stock. The craft, so far as I know, do not deny the correctness of my demonstrations, but have sought to defend their idol by creating a little disturbance once or twice when I had a full house, and by making the air dark with falsehoods about me personally. They did get up a picnic for the 24th of June, but it reacted like that famous gun which

"Tho' well aimed at duck or plover
Bears wide and knocks the owner over."

My common method is to speak three times in each place closing on the Sabbath with a sermon on the religion of Masonry; I can do this every week after the arrangements are made.

Now will you please to let our friends and the rest of mankind know that I am at Milnersville, Guernsey county, Ohio, about midway between Columbus and Steubenville, and ready for work, having but one more appointment out.

WARREN TAYLOR.

Correspondence.

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE COLORED PREACHERS.

A note addressed to Bro. G. M. Elliott of the Reformed Presbyterian mission at Selma, Alabama, asking for the names of influential colored ministers to whom the Cynosure might be sent through the gifts of friends of the reform, and also for means of distributing tracts at the South received the following interesting response. The supporters of our work can see through the eyes of the brethren already at work in the South, how important is the circulation of our reform literature among the colored people. The fund now started deserves large increase. Remember that every $1.50 puts fifty-two copies of the Cynosure in circulation at the South where they will be carefully read. The letter follows:

SELMA, Ala., Aug. 9, 1879.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 2nd inst., was received when I went to the office to mail an order for some tracts. I was rejoiced to receive it; for it was what I have been desiring for some time, that a fund might be secured for sending the Cynosure to worthy colored preachers of the South. I think scarcely a better work could be begun than this. We labor against many difficulties that would not be met were all ministers well informed with regard to the evils of secret societies. I have met many good men (ministers) who are tied up with these associations, and I think they do not really know where they are, nor what influence they are giving to Satan and the world by becoming members of these societies. I do believe they have been led into them in the innocence of their souls, not knowing their nature, and even after joining not having given themselves the pains to thoroughly examine the fundamental principles of oath-bound societies.

For my part I cannot understand how a true lover of Christ can be a member of any of these associations. He must be false either to the church or to the lodge. It is like trying to serve two masters. I lament very much that so many of my brethren have been so hoodwinked by the devil. I have resolved to fight these institutions of darkness with all my might and as long as I live.

If the entire ministry of this country were united against this great and popular evil, and were not afraid to speak out it would not be long till her walls would give way and fall. But the great trouble is the pulpit is muzzled. God forbid that my pulpit should ever be muzzled against any evil because it is popular. The pulpit is a place of teaching as well as a place for proclaiming the joyful news of Christ's atonement. True preaching embodies everything that pertains to the thorough establishing of Christ's kingdom and the overthrow of that of Satan. The want of sound preaching—the fearless presentation of the doctrines of the Bible—is the reason that wickedness abounds and the church in many parts languishes. My constant and earnest prayer to God is that the church universal will soon be awakened to the evils of secretism, and that Zion's watchmen may see their duty in this matter.

We can distribute all the tracts you can spare us, and will be glad to do so, for this abomination is fast spreading among the freedmen. I think if the youth are well informed they will forever remain out of the lodge. We have here in the South a wide field and if this evil spread it will do the church of Christ much harm. Its influences are very bewitching, and being once led on to a half way ground many will not enter the church. Already some who have espoused its heresy say it is as good a religion as they desire. Its members are firmer to their principles than those in the church. Let us therefore strive to prevent the spread of this evil. I wish you God speed in this great and glorious work. You shall have the assistance of my prayers and purse, as far as they will go.

I give below a list of names. It has long been my desire to be a subscriber to your valuable paper, but lately my financial condition has been such that I could not. Sickness and providences over which I had no control have hindered me from helping forward your work pecuniarily. But if I cannot assist in one way my desire is to do so in another. Yours faithfully,

G. M. Elliott.

Rhode Island Odd Fellowship Going Down.

Editors Christian Cynosure—Dear Brethren: We enclose synopsis of the Grand Master's report of the state of Odd-fellowship in Rhode Island, from which we make a few points.

1. "The additions to the membership of the order for the past six months has been the same as during the term just previous," viz., a hundred and sixteen.

2. The losses show an excess of loss over that of the preceding term of thirty-seven.

3. The total losses for the past six months are 248, or a net loss of 132. This the Grand Master says is only 2 59-100 per cent of the membership January 1st. Very true, but that is 5 18-100 per cent per annum, and at that rate it would only take a little over nineteen years for the order to wipe itself out of existence in Rhode Island.

This excess of loss the Grand Master thinks "is by no means a discouraging fact to contemplate; the only astonishment is, that under all the circumstances attending the social and financial condition of society, that the total losses is not greater." Let him gather all the comfort possible in the case.

The exact status of the order on the first of July ultimo, we find to have been: Number of lodges 42; number of members 4 970; amount of invested funds $198,919.47. Of this invested fund a decrease is shown of $785, "Which," the Grand Master observes, "considered in the abstract, seems small, but when placed over against the fact that the gain of this fund during the previous term was $8,842.38, we find a loss as compared with the last semi-annual report of $9,627 38."

Over this fact the Grand Master expresses some concern, and well he may, for if the decrease continues in that ratio it would only take about twenty years to empty the treasury. A singular and noticeable fact is that no hint is given in the Grand Master's report as to the reason of this falling off in receipts. He simply says: "The order has at last reached where the expenses and losses had been greater than the receipts." He suggests some change in the financial system of the order.

Taken altogether, the report is of great interest to all engaged in our anti-secret reform. Yours in Christ.

How Many Times can we be Born Again?

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 8, 1879.

Editor Cynosure:—In the Cynosure for August 7th is an article on page 6th entitled "The Sermon Defended," from J. S. Perry of Thompson, Conn., in reference to a sermon preached by Prof. Charles Blanchard a few weeks ago, wherein he used these words: "This change is once for all." The writer feeling a deep interest in the above subject and in Bro. Blanchard, my mind has been drawn out by what has been written by other parties since its delivery. I hope you will excuse me for presuming, with my limited education, to meddle with theological subjects. I have been reading the New Testament; some portion I will refer to having some bearing on the subject, and proves our free agency. We can be saved if we will, but if we will to depart from God we will be lost. I refer to John 6:68–71; Rom. 9:15–18; Rom. 11:21–23; Eph. 6:10–16; Heb. 6:4–6; 2 Peter 2:20–22; Rev. second and third chapters. I think "him that overcometh" and persevereth unto the end will be saved; otherwise, born or unborn he will perish.

Hoping to hear something more on the subject in your next issue of the Christian Cynosure, the only paper that I read from the beginning to the end, and then circulate them.

I remain yours truly,

G. W. Thompson.

Trials and Encouragements From an Earnest Sister.

Johnstown, Mich.

Editor Cynosure:—The Christian Cynosure has been a welcome visitor at our fireside for a number of years; I should not know how to do without it. My husband and myself are trying to do what we can for the cause so nobly advocated; we believe it is God's cause, and we know he will conquer in his own good time. But he requires us as his children to work in his vineyard; so every true child of God should be at work to put down sin in every form—and is not Masonry the greatest sin of our nation to-day? See how it is fostered and fed in many of our churches in the shape of Masonic ministers and deacons! O does not the devil laugh when he sees a minister of God coming to the door of a Masonic hall seeking the new birth?—and one of these Masonic members, either minister or deacon, will sway a whole church, as it is in our own experience. We once belonged to the First Congregational church of Bedford, and they still hold our names, but we refuse to support them because they fellowship Masonry and its kindred orders. Now, because we refused to sit and hear a Masonic minister, we have been threatened with tar and feathers, rotten eggs, etc., so you see it costs us something to stand for the truth. But we are not discouraged though surrounded with secretists, but shall try to work in the name of the Lord.

And now, dear brothers and sisters, as the time of our annual State meeting is drawing near, let us take hold and help for I fear we are growing slack in Michigan; and the enemy may be gaining ground while we are asleep. Dear sisters, I would earnestly appeal to you, that we put forth an effort to help put down these foul dens of iniquity, for we know not but our sons may be ensnared therein: but not as one said to me, "I hate Masonry as much as you do, but I shall keep my mouth shut about it. That I think is a grand way to reprove sin, by letting it alone." Not so, but we must reprove sin wherever we can, both in word and deed. It is the prayer of your humble writer that grace and strength will be given to all of God's children to work in the name of the Master, knowing that if faithful we shall conquer in the end, for Jesus is our Captain.

Yours for the truth,

Mrs. George Swanson, Jr.

A New Book against a Great Evil.

838 Erie St., Toledo, O.

Beloved in grace, the Lord be with you. I am issuing a work on the food question, taking a Bible view of the subject. Gormandizing, eating to repletion, making a god of the belly, is the order of the day. This wretchedness begins at home, in the nursery, at the mother's breast, here's where gluttony begins. We talk about intemperance in the use of strong drinks, liquid death, distilled damnation, and well we may, this is one of Satan's strongholds; but is not the overloading the stomach with rich, costly unwholesome dainties, tea, tobacco, etc., inlets to inebriation, the drunkard's grave, the drunkard's hell? For years I've pondered this question, till now I'm constrained to speak. The subject of dietetics, the eating and drinking to God's glory is viewed theologically, God's word being the text-book from first to last. The work progresses slowly; when the book will be completed or forthcoming the Lord only knows. I clip a few items from the proof sheets for your inspection and criticism. Should the ideas herein expressed meet your hearty approval, I feel quite sure you will give them a place in some remote corner of your weekly issues. God forbid they should go forth to the world save his name is glorified thereby.

Let me say to you, beloved editors, without flattery or exaggeration that it seems to me the Cynosure is growing in grace, making advances in the divine life—forgetting the things that are behind, etc. See Phil. 3: 13, 14. It is possible I am mistaken in this belief, but this is my candid, firm, unwavering opinion that its movements are progressive, increasing in Bible reform, Gospel vitality. Praise the Lord for it. To him be all the glory. The sermons of Professor C. A. Blanchard speak for themselves. The lecture on the evils of the divisions and subdivisions of Christ's body, the church, is pure gold. The Lord spread it the world over. I have said, and keep on saying, that there would not be a single nest-egg of Satan on the globe, that is, a secret oath-bound society hatching cockatrice's eggs, were it not upheld clasped to the bosom by schismatics or those professing godliness in sectarian bodies. The Lord help you, beloved in the Lord. Raise your voices still louder. Lay the axe of God's truth at the root of every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit. The more Gospel fire you use the more intensely virulent will the devil rage. This blessedness you know by happy and joyful experience. Agitate! agitate! The holy prophets agitated; so also did the holy apostles; so likewise did the blessed Saviour. Peter, after he received the pentecostal baptism, agitated — powerfully poured in the liquid flame of agitation, when three thousand were led to cry out, "What shall we do?" He was bold as a lion before the Sanhedrim, the murderers of the Lord Jesus. He feared not to charge home this blood-guiltiness upon them, come life, come death. This declaration of "all the words of this life" was followed up henceforth, till, like his blessed Master, he hung upon the cross. Paul is another bright, glowing instance of agitation. The very moment the scales fell from his eyes and he exclaimed, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" he flew on the wings of agitation, midst idolatry, superstition and will-worship, in perils by sea and perils by land, agitating and agitating, till he fought the good fight of agitation, finished his course, and received the crown of glory. All the holy martyrs of God were agitators, more or less. Luther, Wesley, Whitefield, Fox, Bunyan, Baxter, were all bright specimens of agitation.

Reader, are you agitating, fighting the good fight of faith, rising up against evil-doers, standing up against the workers of iniquity?

The prophet Elijah would not have been persecuted had he not agitated, used the fire and hammer of God's word against Ahab and Jezebel, the sins of the church and the nation. John the Baptist, in all probability, would have escaped decapitation had he not agitated, opened his lips wide against sins in high places, rebuked the incestuous Herod and his vile paramour. Had not Stephen agitated, been quite so zealous in the cause of his Lord and master, his enemies might not have gnashed on him with their teeth, and stoned him with stones till he "fell fast asleep." Paul doubtless would never have met with such rough treatment from the hands of Demetrius, the silversmith who made silver shrines for Diana, had he not agitated, been a little more wise and let the subject of idolatry alone. Paul was a very rash man! very precipitate! The scribes and Pharisees would not have hated and persecuted Christ as they did, had he not agitated, exposed their wicked hypocrisy and time-serving. We have learned prudence since Christ's day.

Many of the martyrs during the reign of terror doubtless might have escaped persecution and saved their lives, had they not agitated, been as wise and prudent as many at present are. Luther would not have been persecuted as he was, by popes and cardinals, had he not agitated, exposed the awful wickedness and corruption of the Romish church, the idolatry, will-worship, and superstition of the mother of harlots, Babylon of old. How very unwise! Wesley, in all probability would never have been persecuted as he was, had he bowed the knee to forms and ceremonies, winked at the abominations of a corrupt national church—never advocated a holy life, denounced boldly and fearlessly intoxicating drinks, rum and tobacco, the idolatry in dress, and more than all, the sin of oppression, man-stealing, "the sum of all villainies." He agitated, made God's truth to flash lightnings against chattelizing God's own image—very rash man, this same John Wesley! So we might say of Baxter and Bunyan. The cause of all this trouble or persecution is preaching all the words of this life, agitating, laying the axe at the root of all sin, every sin. It is taking God's Word, bringing it home to every sinner in the church and out of it, as Nathan did to David: "Thou art the man."

"Woe unto you when men shall speak well of you! For so did their fathers to the false prophets."

"He that followeth after righteousness and mercy findeth life, righteousness and honor." (Prov. 21:21.)—D. F. NEWTON, author of "Picnic Religion," "Diabolians run Mad," etc.

Our Mail.

Rev. Joel Martin, Hickory Corners, Mich., writes:

"It affords me great pleasure to send renewals and also new subscriptions to your valuable paper. I sincerely wish you abundant success in your efforts to circulate a reform paper among the people. As a Wesleyan Methodist pastor, of course I make more of a specialty of circulating and obtaining subscribers for our denominational paper, the American Wesleyan, but it is also a source of gratification to me to be able also to secure subscribers for the Cynosure. The paper is certainly worthy of extensive patronage."

Wm. H. Taylor, Sparta Center, Kent county, Mich., writes:

"You may take my bread and butter but do not stop the Cynosure. While I live I expect its companionship. The principles it advocates are my principles, its friends are my friends and my chief desire is God speed the day when it and they shall triumph."

Wm. M. Bowker, Herricksville, Pa., writes:

"Our minister had said that the Masonic books we had 'were a lie, a lie all the way through,' if so then our lecturers were liars for they quoted largely from these.

"I knew that the truth remained somewhere and sent for Rev. E. W. Wheeler, S. Edwards, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., who came among us in the spirit of the Master confirming what our lecturers had said and proving the truth of Masonic books in a way that none could gainsay or resist. May God bless him evermore.

"While other boys were in school I was hand sledding home potatoes on which to live. But no reflections, I am thankful that when the winds of adversity swept away father's earthly estate, it did not take the Bible. Through its precious teachings six sons and two daughters are moving on towards the evergreen shore."

Stephen Hatch, Little Valley, N. Y., who is in his eighty-eighth year, writes:

"I have taken your paper ten years and have always liked it very much. I read it with great interest for I am a strong Anti-masonic man. I was present at the first Anti-masonic convention that was held in Madison county, after the Morgan affair."

R. Faurot, St. Louis, Mich., writes:

"I think we are making some encouraging headway against the lodges here. I constantly get little testimonies from them that scare them with the fear they have exposed some point or points through their unworthiness or thoughtlessness."

G. M. Elliott, Selma, Ala., writes:

"Enclosed you will find $2 sent to me by a friend to be used in the purchase of anti-secretism tracts. * * Please send what seem to you the most convincing publications against these institutions of hell. We trust our efforts here against them will not be in vain. We have already been instrumental in turning many back whom Satan had almost seduced. We wish you God speed in your great and good work."

LESSON XXXV.—August 31, 1879.—PRACTICAL RELIGION.

SCRIPTURE.—Col. 3: 16-25.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the
17 Lord. | And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.
18 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.
19 Husbands love your wives and be not bitter against them.
20 Children obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto
21 the Lord. | Fathers provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.
22 Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God: |
23 and whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; |
24 knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance:
25 for ye serve the Lord Christ. | But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul wrote the Epistle to the Colossians while he was a prisoner at Rome, and sent it to them by Tychicus, who also conveyed at the same time the Epistles to the Ephesians and to Philemon. There are many points of resemblance between that to the Ephesians and that to the Colossians, and a more expanded form of the truths of our lesson will be found in Eph. 5: 17 to 6: 9.

TO THE SCHOLAR.

Try to make this lesson on "Practical Religion" practical for yourself individually in the relations of child, servant, husband, wife, father, whatever they may be. This is a peculiarly important lesson on duties in the family.

GENERAL NOTES.

20. "Children, obey your parents." The ground of the obligation to filial obedience is expressed in Eph. 6: 1—"for this is right." It is not because of the personal character of the parent, nor because of his kindness, but because it is right. An obligation growing out of the nature of the relation between parents and children. It is enforced by the direct command of God. The duty is so important as to be included in that brief summary of the moral law given on Mt. Sinai. It was engraved by the finger of God on the tables of stone, "Honor thy father and thy mother." To honor is to reverence, and therefore the command has reference to the inward feeling as well as to the outward conduct.—Hodge.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

Under what teaching did a good man promise to hold his tongue? Who was directed by God to teach a song to the people; and for what purpose? What example of singing in honor of God, earlier than the giving of the law, is recorded in the Bible? What Old Testament precept, and what New Testament precept also, show that singing should be with sense as well as spirit?

SPECIAL DUTIES.

Compare Eph. 5: 22-33; 6: 1-19. By special duties we mean those duties which are peculiar to certain relations in life.

1. The duty of wives (v. 18). Wives are to submit themselves to their husbands; but the submission here enjoined is that willing submission which is prompted by deep affection. Such submission is fit in the Lord; it is what should be, because of the divine appointment, which makes the husband the head of the wife, and yet places them on the same level as heirs of the grace and glory of God.

2. The duty of husbands (v. 19). Husbands are to love their wives, and to avoid that careless and unkind treatment to which imperfect love so often leads. When husbands love their wives, as Christ does the church (Eph. 5: 25), wives should obey their husbands, as the church should obey Christ. Both husbands and wives have an example in "Christ and the church."

3. The duty of children (v. 20). Children should obey their parents in all things. This is the rule; there may be exceptions, which come under the principle of obeying God rather than man, but these exceptions are left out of view. The duty of obedience is not founded on the character of the parent, or on his kindness, or on expediency; it rests on the nature of the relation between parents and their children, and is enforced by the express command of God (Ex. 20: 12). In this obedience of children from the very cradle lies the foundation of all good discipline in the family and in the state. The obedience of children is well pleasing unto the Lord, for he has commanded it, and has given a special promise to the obedient.

4. Duty of parents (v. 21). Parents are not to excite the evil passions of their children by injustice or undue severity. Children, provoked by such treatment, become discouraged; they lose heart and no longer try to please.

5. Duty of servants (vs. 22-25). Servants must obey their earthly masters in all things consistent with their duty to God. They must do all the duties which grow out of the relation they sustain to their masters, not with eye-service, such service as is given when the eye of the master is on them, not as men pleasers, as if it was their only object to please men; they are to obey in singleness of heart, fearing God; that is, they are to render sincere, not hypocritical or deceitful obedience, knowing that God's eye is upon them, and that in the faithful performance of their duties they are doing service for God. Still further; every service is to be done heartily, with hearty good will, and as to the Lord, as an act of obedience done to Christ. To encourage them to render such obedience, he reminds them that, no matter what station they occupy in life, they serve the Lord Christ, who is their real master, and if they are faithful in the duties he gives them to do, he will bestow upon them the reward of the inheritance in heavenly glory. On the other hand, if they are not faithful, they will be punished for the wrong they do. In this respect, masters and servants stand on the same level. Both the one and the other will be rewarded for faithfulness and punished for unfaithfulness, for there is no respect of persons with God (Rom. 2: 11); so far as external distinctions are concerned, all men will be on an equality at the bar of Christ. Then the question will not be, what station did you occupy? but, have you done the will of God?

The progress of some men is so rapid that they keep ahead of common sense.

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

Prof. Paul Feemster of Kansas, and several others of late have urged that a more extended explanation of the Associated Churches of Christ be given, and Bro. Tapley of Mississippi makes a very sensible suggestion that a brief explanation be kept standing above the list. I am scarcely off a sick bed and this is my first writing, but I will endeavor to make the question better understood.

If there were two churches on opposite sides of the globe, which had come to an agreement to exclude from their respective communions all who practice or uphold the secret false worships which cover this globe with their net-work; and if these two churches should unite in the purpose to expose and destroy such worships, and pull down "the strongholds of Satan" which shelter them, by spiritual weapons, prayer, truth and the Holy Ghost,—those two would be "Associated Churches of Christ" within the meaning and understanding of the terms by those of us who first used them.

On the altar of Abel, by every lamb sacrificed on altars since, until the instruction was finished on the Cross at Calvary, this one truth has been taught down the ages and to all nations, to wit, that men are saved by the sufferings and blood of an innocent victim, Christ; and that he was the only begotten Son of the Infinite God, sent into this world to save all sinners who are penitent believers. Even heathen sacrifices are a sort of devil's confession of the same great truth.

The reliance of Satan to obliterate, mystify, mix, confound and neutralize this one truth are false worships, made or invented by men, administered by priests, and inhabited by devils.

These two systems are now mixed all over Christendom. Moses executed such worshipers, burnt their idol, and made the people, who went into that lodge-worship, festival and dancing, drink the ashes of the symbol of their false god. Hezekiah and Josiah scoured all Palestine clean of them, and burnt the bones of their dead priests on their Masonic altars. Solomon, Manasseh and the whole race of kings who ruined the nation and the national religion, practiced or protected these worships. Paul commanded to disfellowship them; and Christ denounced them as "traditions" which made the worship vain and the law void, and sentenced those who invented and used these human religious contrivances to hell.

Now as the Abolitionists proposed to abolish slavery by the simple process of going on converting the people of the United States into abolitionists till the system should somehow fall; so we propose to overthrow these "unfruitful works of darkness." But the first abolition society, Benj. Franklin, president, 1769, had an article excluding slaveholders from membership. This is what we intend and hope by God's help to do. Let each church which is agreed to this writing, become one of the "Associated Churches of Christ," and working in its own way, keep its communion pure and swell the united testimony against anti-Christ.

THE MORMONS IN TROUBLE.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Reynolds case last winter, and the imprisonment of that convicted polygamist; the martyrdom of a Mormon "missionary" in Georgia; the incarceration for contempt of three of the twelve "apostles," one of them Congressional delegate Cannon; and the warlike notice to foreign governments by Secretary Evarts are arousing all the old murderous spirit of the followers of Brigham Young.

Cannon and his two companions were executors of the will of Young. They had helped themselves and the church in true priestly style from the two and a half millions willed by Young to his heirs. About a million of this property had been turned over to the church or otherwise illegally appropriated, when on petition of the heirs the United States court turned over the estate into the hands of receivers, and for refusing to give up some $440,000 the three executors were committed to the common jail. The history of the whole matter is a narrative of fraud from the prophet Young down, but the action of the court is hooted throughout Mormondom.

The foreign circular was drawn with that careful preparation due to a matter of great importance. It announces that the United States Supreme Court having sustained Congress in pronouncing polygamy a crime, and its prohibition, even when justified by a religious belief, constitutional, the government proposes to prosecute offenders, and attempt to blot out the peculiar institution of Mormonism from the United States. The act of July 2, 1862, is quoted, which prohibits the practice of polygamy under heavy penalty, and the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Reynolds case is cited as declaring the constitutionality of the act. The letter calls attention to the obligations of other governments not to allow persons to emigrate into this country with the intention of committing crime here, and also that this obligation be observed with reference to Mormon proselytes who are leaving Great Britain, Germany, Denmark, Sweden and Norway in great numbers. Diplomatic representatives are instructed to lay a copy of the circular before the powers to which they are accredited, and ask, on behalf of the United States, the cooperation of these powers to prevent further immigration of Mormons. They are also directed to make it publicly known in places from whence Mormon accessions come, that Mormonism has been declared a crime in the United States, and is to be hereafter prosecuted as such, and to warn all people of the law of Congress.

The Utah settlements have answered these movements on their dark system with defiance. On Friday, the 8th inst., the Deseret News, the organ of Mormondom, published a striking article which produced a deep impression. Its spirit may be known from the following paragraph:

"We are not here to bow down as serfs to Government appointees nor lick the bribe-stained hands of imported satraps. We are still in possession of certain inalienable rights, which we do not propose to surrender. We shall protect our lives as best we may from the murderous assaults of imported assassins. We shall contend for our liberties and resist the incarceration of honorable men in jails, while land-sharks, conspirators, murderers, seducers, and other vagabonds go at large. We propose to pursue happiness in our way, without the dictation of corrupt scoundrels, who while heaping abuse upon us are seeking to introduce here the foulest forms of vice and establish among us debauchery, infanticide, foeticide, and all the degrading adjuncts of modern Christian civilization with which they have been familiar. We want nothing to do with the foul brood, nor their loathsome, degrading, damnable influence; and if the issue is to have them and their practices fastened upon us or to endanger the financial prospects of the Territory, we say, let it come."

This was followed by others of like threatening tone. On the following Monday the foreign circular called out the following blast:

"There is another thing. The doctrine of 'gathering' which our missionaries preach is true. God has in very deed commenced to bring his people from east and west, north and south, preparatory to the coming of our Lord Jesus. He who attempts to stop 'gathering' fights against God. Pharaoh arrogated to himself more power than any republican or monarchical government pretends to hold. He undertook to say that the Lord's people should not go. Let his fate be a warning to modern autocrats. No power beneath the sun can stop the work of 'gathering' of the Latter Day Israel, for a mightier hand than that of emperor or president is engaged in it. When puny men in blindness attempt to thwart his purposes, they will only aid in the accomplishment of his will. He who sitteth in the heavens will hold them in derision. The fate of all nations that fight against Zion is inscribed on the pages of Holy Writ, and just as any government of this world array themselves in earnest against her, the Lord will smite them with fire and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

On the day before, apostle Joseph F. Smith delivered a furious speech in the Tabernacle charging persecution and malignity upon their enemies who had driven them from one settlement to another. It was time the Mormon policy of submission and peace was changed. He advised his hearers to procure arms without delay. At other meetings amid loud approbation the speakers called to arms—even to sell clothing if necessary to buy weapons. The gunshops are reported all busy and the people generally obedient to the fanatical demands of their leaders.

We have been thus particular, since, if the government persists in bringing polygamy to answer in the courts, a conflict is sure to follow. If it is pursued to the death its fangs will strike deep in its last agony. But we have a particular reason for following this history closely. Mormonism and Freemasonry are one in respect to the question of true and false worship; and the blow that kills it strikes at the root of the lodge.

But let no one imagine that this struggle is drawing to a speedy close. If our government is not turned from its course by the bribery of the lodge and the supremacy of law is maintained, the Mormon struggle will yet be only an introductory chapter. The nation is not ready yet to demand of the lodge what it may of Mormonism. The great work of informing American mind and awakening American conscience is well begun. But it is only begun. How long this work may continue depends upon our faith—for faith means energy in carrying forward reform, and faith means its final victory.

—The health of the editor of the Cynosure has continued to improve during the past week with very favorable indications that he will be pronounced well again in a few days. Gratitude to God for this result is the answer of our hearts. On Monday he started with Mrs. Blanchard for Peoria, where they will visit Dea. Moses Pettengill.

—After the Cynosure was printed last week word came by telegram that Elder Rathbun had arranged his work so as to fill the Illinois appointments. He is therefore at work this week in western Illinois. Next Tuesday he attends the county convention at Warren, Jo Daviess county. The week following he will attend the Wisconsin State Convention at Evansville, Wis.

—Especial attention is asked for the article on free missions by Bro. Hinman on another page and also to his report in the religious news column. Let every one pray that God may speed this work. Until the churches of Christ are brought to take hold of this work of lodge-uprooting as a very important part of their legitimate work we cannot expect great advancement. Bro. Hinman met a favorable response at Mt. Palatine last week and spent the Sabbath at Tonica.

—Another highly important communication is from Bro. Doesburg on the action of the Reformed church at Holland, Mich. These brethren have set the battle in array against anti-Christ in a new quarter of the field. May Heaven bless the work! Such efforts God demands of every church of Christ whatever its name or circumstances. Each with what power God has given should raise the standard and rally the battle against these powers of darkness whose strong tower is the lodge.

—The Peoria Journal thinks that "never, since the days of the Morgan excitement, has Masonry received so severe a blow as it did a short time since in the city of Chicago from the hand of Alexander White, Eminent Commander of Chicago Commandery." From this extravagant estimate, let us come to facts. White, after being well abused by the Voice of Masonry for his conduct in the Rounseville funeral, was censured by Peoria Masons, and has been suspended from his office among the Knights Templar by the dictator in that branch of the lodge in Illinois. He must stand trial at the next State meeting. What if the Chicago Masons had gone on with the funeral and then sent in the bills to the family, as is often the custom? The latter might have poured out their remonstrances in vain, for the lodge would have had the benefit of the advertisement, and the wishes of Mr. Rounseville would have been met. But how much more honorable to refuse from the first, than to turn the name of benevolence into falsehood! We shall be interested in reading the proceedings of the trial, —but will they be published?

—The prominence and activity of irreligion in California has always been deplored by those who have attempted to plant the standard of the Cross in that State. The inquiries of Rev. N. R. Johnston, the missionary of the Reformed Presbyterian churches among the Chinese in Oakland, Cal., respecting the religious standing of the convention which drew up the new State constitution, shows at a glance the alarming condition of public morals in the great Pacific State. He reported thus in the Christian Statesman:

"1. A majority of the members were born in the Southern States or in Europe. Of the seventy, twenty-nine were Southerners; eleven, foreigners.

2. Of the same seventy, fifty-five are members of secret societies, as Masons, Redmen, etc. Many are members of several secret orders.

3. Only thirteen are members of any church. Thirty-nine said they did not attend any church or place of worship. In reply to my questions as to church membership, a great variety of answers was given. Thus, one said he belonged to 'Christ's church.' Another said: 'I am a free-thinker.' Another said: 'I belong to Bob Ingersoll's church.' In reply to the question: 'At what church or place of worship, are you in the habit of attending on the Sabbath day?' One answer was, 'At the sand lot.' Another, 'God's first temples.' Another said, 'I worship nature.' "

The One Hundred and Fifty Thousand.

By request the most entertaining statistics we have been permitted to print for years is herewith again presented. Let every one read and be encouraged at the effect of our warfare on the strongest and best manned fortifications of the lodge system:

It will be seen that the total membership has fallen off again, the decrease being just about the same as the preceding year; some of the Grand Lodges have increased, however. Those which have increased are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Canada, Colorado, Dakota, Indian Territory, Iowa, Kansas, Manitoba, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Brunswick, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oregon, Quebec, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Those which have decreased are Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Nova Scotia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Prince Edwards Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia. The suspensions for non-payment of dues have increased about one thousand. The suspensions within the last ten years, aggregate the enormous amount of one hundred and fifty thousand. Our report in 1869 shows that forty Grand Lodges returned over fifty thousand initiates, against about 24,000 shown by our report of 1879, to be returned by fifty-three Grand Lodges. The Church of the Knights of the Temple.

Frequent references have been made in these columns to the aggressive movements of the Knights Templar and the evident supremacy of that military branch of Freemasonry in the councils of the lodge. A view of its religious pretensions is graphically given in a late Interocean in these words:

"The organization of the Knights of the Temple is a wonderful one. In this day of skepticism with regard to the value of revealed religion, when materialism is rampant and infidelity fashionable with all classes, learned and otherwise, Templar Masonry comes to the rescue, having for its emblem the sign of "the Son of man," and its motto "In hoc signo vinces," all they do, they claim, being done for the glory of God. The Templars think they have a right to infer and are entitled to consider themselves the descendants of the true Templar Order of mediæval days, revived and perpetuated by its adoption into the Masonic craft. The principles and teachings of the order harmonize with those of Freemasonry, which so nearly approaches Christianity in theory and spirit, having the Supreme Being for the object of its worship; mankind, without distinction of class, for its subject; and the universe for its temple, placing all men on the same footing of fraternity. Its success has been wonderful, and its membership of nearly 50,000 knights is constantly increasing. This great army of Christian warriors is enlisted from the best material in each community. In any commandery will be found men who are the peers, if not the superiors, of any men in the place in which the commandery is located. Every third year a grand encampment and conclave is held, which is always numerously attended. It is believed, however, that next August the Chicago conclave will eclipse everything of the kind ever held in this country. Indeed, in all history, there are but few instances where from 15,000 to 20,000 well-disciplined, drilled men assembled under one banner. It is expected by those well qualified to speak that there will be at least 15,000 Templars attending the Triennial Conclave, while enthusiastic individuals think the number will approximate 20,000 men.

The Wisconsin Convention at Evansville.

NOTICE. 1. Bills advertising the convention of the Wisconsin Anti-secret Christian Association at Evansville, Rock Co., on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 2, 3 and 4, may be had free by sending to EZRA A. COOK & Co., publishers of the Christian Cynosure, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Enclose stamps to pay postage on bills ordered. ☞Orders for bills must reach Mr. Cook before Aug. 28, so please order immediately as soon as you see this notice.☜

2. Free entertainment will be gladly furnished to friends from abroad, as far as possible.

3. Will friends in other places, who expect to attend the convention please send me their names at their earliest convenience, saying whether they will come by public or private conveyance.

4. There is now no stage between Janesville and Evansville. Friends from Waukesha, Racine and Walworth counties will come by Janesville, to Hanover and there change for Evansville, or come to Beloit and change there.

Let all who love justice, good government and pure Christianity come and help. Let churches and societies send delegates, and may there be an earnest "coming up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." The enemy has come in like a flood, but the Spirit of the Lord has lifted up a standard against him; come and be enrolled and fight under that standard. Come the first hour of the convention and stay through.

J. F. BROWNE.

—A correspondent of the Christian Statesman says: "Three things constitute an orthodox Mormon. 1. He must go through the endowment house and submit to secret rites and horrible oaths. 2. He must 'obey counsel.' 3. He must 'pay up his tithing.' If this is done he may violate every commandment in the Decalogue without being molested by the church, provided his victims are gentiles. Indeed, it has always been openly taught until quite recently that the gentiles have no right to live in Utah Territory; that they are ungodly Philistines whom it is perfectly right to rob and murder, if it is thought by so doing the interests of the church can be promoted. This acounts for the vast number of robberies and assassinations that formerly took place. The demoralizing influence of polygamy has brought about a state of things in connection with social morality that is simply unreportable. How could it be otherwise in connection with a system which allows a man to have for his two wives, at the same time, mother and daughter, or two sisters? I know many such cases.

—The early promoters of Christianity had the fiercest opposition to meet in attaining their great end, in the midst of a wicked and gainsaying world; yet the openness of their work was their great boast. "The king knoweth of these things," said Paul, "before whom I also speak freely; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him, for this thing was not done in a corner."

Our Saviour expressly declares, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret I have said nothing." Nowhere do we find an apostolic example of secrecy; Judas excepted. Hence all secret organizations are without Gospel foundation, and lead to strifes, divisions, and often to the downfall of things which they profess to build up. Frankness, openness and manliness are better than craft and guile and secrecy.—Gospel Preacher.

The Folded Leaf in the Sacred Book.

[The following beautiful lines were found after her death in the Bible of Mrs. L. J. Gleason of Wheaton, whose obituary appeared in these columns four weeks ago.]

Matthew 5: 4.

My table holds an ancient book—
So old, its leaves are brittle and brown;
And right in the midst—O solemn sign!
Is a fingered leaf that is folded down.
Long since, this book of the folded leaf
Lay open to eyes that read no more;
'Twas loved by a mother whose ancient grief
Is lost in the light of the shining shore.
And Christ, who speaks from that folded leaf,
Saith to us, "Blessed are ye that weep."

—Hours at Home.

An Expebience.

At the age of seventeen years I was converted, and continued to live an ordinary Christian life with the "ups and downs" that many professors are subject to. When nineteen I married a minister. The new duties and responsibilities that now rested upon me aroused me to a keener sense of my spiritual condition. I made a new covenant with God to be more devoted. A burning zeal for the prosperity of the church sprung up within me like a living fire. Nothing daunted my courage to make severe sacrifices for her sake, such as no human being can understand, except a feeble mother that has passed through the same furnace that is white with heat. Nineteen years of my married life I have thus lived with joys and sorrows intermingled, bearing the burdens and cares of my family, with the help of the divine Spirit, in Christian patience. However, I desired something in my experience that I did not possess—a desire to rise to a higher plane of spiritual progress—a settled peace; but I did not know how to obtain it.

Six years ago my health entirely failed with chronic hoarseness and a distressing cough, which continued five years; each year I became weaker, accompanied with intense suffering. I was like a wreck in mid-ocean, tossed about hither and thither by the merciless winds, finding no real sweet rest. My mind was also much distressed at the thought of leaving my children in their helplessness. Coming from a consumptive family, I felt that my doom was sealed and hope was vain. A terrible gloom settled upon me. I was on the verge of despair. The thick darkness that had gathered over me chilled the warmth and fervor of spirit that I had previously enjoyed in prayer. I was tempted to give it up in utter hopelessness. At this time Rev. D. Ecker sent me several tracts treating on holiness, which gave me light and filled my heart with new impulses to be all the Lord's. It was through his teaching that I was encouraged to seek on.

The disease had made such rapid progress within the last year that I abandoned medical treatment, and was urgently requested by sister Williams, of Colorado, to try the climate of that Territory as a last resort. I decided to do so and began to plan accordingly; but all my plans were frustrated in the first attempt. Everything which I put my hand to went wrong. One day I was walking wearily about the room, thinking of my utter helplessness and feeling convinced that the disease was too far advanced to be removed by the change, when suddenly a feeling of despair seized me. I sank down into the nearest chair, determined to meet death at my own home. An indescribable burden seemed to be crushing me into the earth. A struggle for life, and all hope vanished. Dear reader, the conflict was terrible. I wondered why I should be thus wrought upon. Many times during my illness have I watched the sun sinking in the west, and wished that I could so calmly and sweetly sink down into the saints' rest with it. O! how my soul was thrilled with joy as I beheld the great flood of golden light spreading over the western sky, and thought "the gates were left ajar" and the saints were entering into the portals of the New Jerusalem. O! the blessed rest of the weary, suffering pilgrim! How different my state of mind now. A clinging to life, such as I never had before. Sitting near the Bible, I took it up, and the first words my eyes fell upon were those where the woman touched the hem of Jesus' garment, and was made whole. A light flashed through my mind that awakened a hope that I might be saved by faith. Quickly I said, Lord help me to believe. After lying down and resting for a short time, again took up the Bible and opened to Mat. viii. 3. I read the entire chapter, which gave much strength. I went to my room, fell on my knees, believing there is nothing can save me but the power of Jesus. I wanted to be sanctified entirely to his service when he gave me health. This higher state of grace bore with as much weight upon my mind as the state of my health. After long and earnest prayer, my faith was so much strengthened, that I set apart three times a day for special prayer for my health and sanctification. Meanwhile reading the Scriptures, always opening to passages where persons were healed. This singular incident confirmed my faith.

Nearly two weeks had passed since I made my cure a specialty. My afflictions increased daily, but my mind was brighter. Bless the Lord for his goodness in leading me. My faith was on his promises. One morning I had an impression that I could never reach that exalted faith for which I was praying. I thought that others must pray with me and for me. The thought then came that I must write to the Fulton street prayer meeting and request their prayers in my behalf on a certain day, and I would be healed. Telling my husband of this, he replied that it must be an act of faith of my own, and it would not help me to write. This discouraged me somewhat; nevertheless, for two whole days I kept up my devotions in great fervor of spirit. The third morning after this I was very feeble and weary, but with a wonderful drawing towards the Lord. Still a heavy burden seemed to be crushing me into the earth. O, I thought if only some one would pray for me. Then came the idea of the Fulton street prayer meeting again. I immediately wrote to them the condition of my mind and body, saying that I firmly believed if they would pray for me on the next Wednesday, that I should be healed.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday I spent in deep meditation. On Tuesday I kept repeating, "to-morrow I will be well; what a surprise it will be to my family and friends?" My husband was away filling his appointments, and I did not expect him home until Wednesday evening. O! I thought how I would run out and meet him, filled with the Holy Spirit and new life, and tell him that I was healed. Tuesday night, when I knelt down for prayer, and indiscribable awe came over me. I thought Jesus was so near me that I could nearly touch his garment, but not quite. I arose from knees with the sweet and blessed assurance, that I would receive the blessing I desired. I thought it would be the next day noon, while I was upon my knees and they were praying for me in New Yord. I retired and immediately fell asleep. Sometime during the night I awoke as suddenly as if some one had touched me. The first thought was, it is after midnight, and I said, "Blessed Jesus, this is the day that I am to be made whole, soul and body." In a twinkle an indescribable thrill permeated every fiber of my being, especially my throat and left lung. It was just as sensible as a shock from a battery. I said, I am healed. Yes, blessed Saviour. As soon as I acknowledged this, a glorious light and joy filled my heart to overflowing. I felt that I was the Lord's entirely, thoroughly cleansed and sanctified. Glory be to his name. I sang, shouted and wept for joy for some length of time. I could scarcely realize that I was in the body, such an etherial lightness seemed to envelope my frame. The Lord came in great glory before I expected him. In the midst of my rejoicings, I stopped for a moment to think where I was. Satan then put in his plea. He said, "It may be you are not healed." This Scripture then came into my mind more forcibly than if spoken by a living voice, "Arise, take up thy bed and walk." But I said, I could walk before, and this only came to my mind because I had been reading it so often in the past few days. I am sorry I did not obey. He was trying my faith. I see it plainly now. I believe he had a greater blessing for me if I had obeyed his command. A doubt came into my mind for a moment that I was not healed, but this was sanctification. To test this I turned over upon my left side, to see if I could rest without coughing. I found I could do so easily. The soreness was all gone, and my throat, which had been very painful for many months—often preventing me from sleeping, was well. I again gave God all the glory for his matchless power and love, and the indescribable rapture that filled my soul when I claimed the blessing. After an hour or so, I again fell into a sweet sleep, which continued until the early dawn. I awoke feeling fresh and bright. I dressed and soon prepared the breakfast for the family, who were surprised at my strength and that I did not have my usual fit of coughing, which for two years attacked me every morning until my strength was exhausted.

Seventeen months have now expired, and I have done the work for a family of six persons ever since, rejoicing in the Lord every day, and the song of my heart is, "Rest in God, rest in God."

I have no motive in writing this experience, but to honor God, and show in my weak way to those who despair in the furnace of sore affliction, that Jesus is still the great Physician.—Mrs. W. H. Millar of Cortland, O., in Highway of Holiness.

The Advantages of Silence.

Ishael P. Inman, who died in Utica recently, had uttered scarcely a word for more than half a century. He was not dumb; he could talk well enough, but he became convinced, at an early stage of his life, that more harm than good was wrought by speech, and remained true to his principles ever after. When his first child was born he rode seven miles after a physician. He carried a slate and pencil, wrote a statement of the situation, returned with the medicine man, and received the announcement of his paternal responsibility in silence. His wife, who survives him, says no woman ever had a kinder husband. The relations between the couple were always pleasant, and Mrs. Inman has remarked to her neighbors: "If Ishael talked as much as I do, the Lord knows what might happen." Some of his written replies to the questions of acquaintances who were curious to know why he preferred silence to speech are worthy of mention. One retort was: "A good listener is preferred to a poor talker." Another was: "I want to prove that a man can be happy and hold his tongue." Another: "I am trying to think of something good enough to say out loud." A clergyman once asked Inman whether he didn't think the Lord gave him his tongue to be used. The pencil reply was: "The Lord gave me a mind that tells me when to use my tongue."

In 1842, while he was traveling with his wife in a stage between Syracuse and Rochester, the vehicle halted in front of a country tavern. A child was sleeping on the porch. Inman, looking out, saw a large black snake crawl to the side of the infant. Grasping his wife's arm he shouted, "See!" and, pointing to the snake, sprang from the stage, pursued the reptile some distance, and finally killed it.

He left a snug fortune, which his son inherits. His lest written message was: "Silence is golden." His oft-penciled admonition to his son was: "Keep your mouth shut."—Syracuse Standard.

Value of Small Things.

Though little I bring,
Said the tiny spring
As it burst from the mighty hill,
'Tis pleasant to know,
Wherever I flow,
The pastures grow greener still.

And the drops of rain,
As they fall on the plain,
When parched by the summer heat,
Refresh the sweet flowers
Which drooped in the bowers,
And hung down their heads at our feet.

Though the drops are small,
Yet taking them all,
Each one doing all that he can
To fulfill the design
Of its Maker Divine—
What lessons they give unto man!

May we strive to fulfill
All his righteous will,
Who formed the whole earth by his word!
Creator Divine!
We would ever be thine,
And serve thee, our God and our Lord,

A Child Voyager.

Children furnish more than one-half of the world's purest joys, their beautiful deeds breaking in upon us oftentimes as delightful surprises; and stupid would we be if we failed to be roused from life's torpor by their presence, their needs, and their expression of them. As we stepped upon the platform of the cars on our way West in the middle of the night, we heard a man say: "Here is a little girl all alone. Will not somebody take care of her?" Somebody responded, and we thought no more of it until next day when we had dropped our "sleeper," and entering one of the other cars, we saw the sweetest little child-form we ever looked upon fast asleep, so soundly sleeping as not to be heard in breathing. Such a head of dark brown hair, lying all loose over shoulders, back, and face, we never beheld; features as if the choice of an artist from a thousand beauties; her long, dark eye-lashes lay across the openings into a world of beauty, and her form was in beautiful adaptation to the ideal of her face. We could hardly wait for her to wake, for we felt sure that she was the lonely child of whom we had heard the night before, and were impatient for the history of this interesting but solitary voyager across the earth. After a while the conductor stood over her as if drawn by her beauty and innocence. He seemed to be shrinking from waking her, as if she was an angel, whose repose it would have been irreverent to disturb. Said he, "Whose child is this?" No one could tell. He turned away and went on gathering up his tickets. When he had finished he came back, and she was awake. He stooped and said:

"Whose little girl are you?"

"Mamma's," said she, looking up trustfully in his face.

"Where is your mamma? Show me who she is."

Said she gently, "Mamma is not on the cars; she is in heaven."

The gentlemanly conductor grew more intently anxious, and said:

"But you have a father aboard?"

"No sir; my father is in heaven a long time ago. When I was a little baby he was in the army. Mamma used to tell me about him. She called him her poor soldier boy."

"And where did your papa and mamma live?"

"In Ireland, sir," speaking more gently, as if not quite sure it was best to tell him.

"Where did you come from, my little darling?"

"From the same place, sir."

"Not from Ireland?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who came with you?"

"Nobody, sir, but God. He kept me on the sea when it was awful stormy, and I was so sick I thought I would die."

The conductor, in surprise said: "You did not come all the way from Ireland by yourself?"

"Yes, sir; God was with me; my auntie prayed for me, and told God to take care of me, on the forecastle of the ship; and she kissed me, and said: 'Precious pet, don't be afraid, for God has told me that he is going with you all the way;' and some people on the deck took me and made me sleep by them till I got to New York, and then they took me to the railroad station, and a nice old gentleman, with white beard, got my ticket. Here it is, sir" —opening a queer old-fashioned Irish carpet-sack, and pulling out a woolen petticoat and putting her little hand into the pocket, took out a little pocket-book, tied with a soiled piece of linen tape—"here it is; he gave it to me, and told me not to be afraid, because all the people would be kind to a little strange orphan girl. And he said when I wanted anything to ask the man with the band on his hat. Are you the man?"

"Yes; what do you want, my little pet?"

"I want you to take care of me, if you please."

"I will, indeed. I had a little girl about as large as you, but she died."

"She is in heaven, ain't she? She will see my papa and mamma, won't she?"

He said, "I hope so," and turned away.

By this time a half-dozen men had gathered about the child, no woman happening to be in the cars, else that woman's heart would have been broken. The men were all rough, good-hearted souls, and all seemed to be fidgety to do something for this strange, beautiful child. One turned up a tag which was fastened to a ribbon around her neck, and on it was written:

"Effie Mc——, of Ireland; aged seven years, is on her way to her aunt, Mrs. Mc——, Fort Kearney, United States of America. Kind friends, be good to this child. She was her mother's darling, who died the 11th day of December, 1878. This poor child is all that is left of the family, and her friends are sending her to her aunt's, at Fort Kearney."

One rough looking man asked her if she had anything to eat, to which she replied by showing him some little sweetcakes, and said: "Do you think these will be enough until I get to auntie's?" He replied, "Give me your reticule," and opening it, commenced filling it out of his well-stored basket. Others brought in their supplies, until there was more than the child could well carry. An old gentleman, about eighty years of age, said he would take care of her as far as Kansas City; a black man said he had nothing to give her to eat, so he gave her a half dollar. . . . . She became more and more a theme of interest for hundreds of miles, until we seemed to have forgotten the space, when the cry, "East St. Louis!" startled us, and revealed the fact that to some of us at least the journey had ended. We parted from this dear child in tenderness and with prayers, for she was fast asleep, with her little Testament, which she could read, in her pale hand. All were better for her presence; all regretted that she could not journey on with them along the way of life.—The Presbyterian.

Courtesy.

Little girls do you ever think about the meaning of words? This word courtesy has something about it which girls and women ought to care for very much indeed. You know that hundreds of years ago in Europe women were, and in many heathen countries are now not much better than slaves. In China, for instance, when company comes to a house, the parents present the boys very proudly, but they send the girls out of sight as fast as possible. They don't want anybody to know that they have a little daughter in the home.

Gradually, in the Middle Ages, women came up from a state of barbarism, and the poets and clergy together helped her to win her proper place. The lady of the castle kept the keys and presided at the feast, wore beautiful clothes of stuffs called samite and camelot, and gave medicine to the sick. She learned surgery, too, and when the soldiers and knights came home from battle, wounded and faint, she knew how to set the broken bones and bind up the bruised parts. So everybody treated her politely, and that sort of manners which then became popular, in place of the old roughness and rudeness, took the general name of courtesy.

The Bible bids us to be courteous. Do you want to know the highest and loveliest style of courtesy, which you can practice at home, at school, and in the street? It is all wrapped up in one golden phrase, "In honor preferring one another." Suppose you try to live with that for your motto, say for a whole week to come.—Standard.

A woman forgot to send home some work on Saturday. On Sabbath morning she told her little niece to put on her things and take the bundle under her shawl to the lady's house. "Nobody will see it," she said. "But is it not Sabbath under my shawl, aunt?" asked the child.

The Sun Cholera Medicine.

More than twenty years ago, when it was found that prevention of cholera was easier than cure, a prescription drawn up by eminent doctors was published in the New York Sun, and it took the name of The Sun cholera medicine.

Our contemporary never lent its name to a better article. We have seen it in constant use for nearly two score of years, and found it to be the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised.

No one who has this by him, and takes it in time, will ever have the cholera.

We commend it to all our friends. Even when no cholera is anticipated, it is an excellent remedy for ordinary complaints, colic, diarrhœa, dysentery, etc.

Take equal parts of the tincture of Cayenne pepper, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose, 15 to 30 drops in cold water, according to age and violence of symptoms, repeated every fifteen or twenty minutes until relief is obtained.—Journal of Commerce.

Snake Bites.

I had stopped for the night at a hotel in southern Missouri, when another traveler hastened in whose dog had been bitten when a mile away, and his throat was then swollen equal in size with its head, and the animal was in great agony. Its owner asked for spirits of turpentine, which, being furnished, he applied repeatedly to the bitten part, until the dog became quiet, and by morning it was well. This traveler resides in the Ozark mountain region of Arkansas, where he had, as he said, witnessed many such cures, not of animals only, but also of men, and he believed it an infallible remedy if soon applied. It quickly relieves the sting of a bee, and may cure the bite of a cobra if immediately applied outwardly and a little internally on sugar, as is done by the hunters among the Ozarks, who carry it in their pockets as they traverse that region where snakes do abound.—N. Y. Observer.

To Can Corn.—To every six quarts of corn take one ounce of tartaric acid dissolved in boiling water. Cut the corn from the cob and put in sufficient water to cook; put the acid in while the corn is cooking; when done, seal air-tight in tin cans or glass jars. To prepare for the table, pour off the sour water and save it; put in enough fresh water to cook it; for every quart of corn, add one small teaspoonful of soda and let it stand a few minutes before cooking; while cooking, put in a teaspoonful of sugar; if the corn turns yellow, there is too much soda; pour back some of the sour water until it turns white again; when nearly done, season with salt, cream and butter, the same as fresh corn. Tin quart cans are preferable to glass jars.

Remedy for Damp Walls.—Moisture may be kept from a brick wall by dissolving three-quarters of a pound of mottled soap in one gallon of boiling water, and spreading the hot solution steadily, with a large flat brush over the surface of the brickwork, taking care that it does not lather. This is to be allowed to dry for twenty-four hours, when a solution formed of a quarter of a pound of alum dissolved in two gallons of water, is to be applied in a similar manner over the coating of soap. The soap and alum, mutually decompose each other, and form an insoluble varnish, which the rain is unable to penetrate. The operation should be performed in dry, settled weather.—Medical Paper.

Poison!

Ten persons in the house of Daniel Dodson, Petersburg, and several others were poisoned by ice-cream. Copper poison is supposed by some to have been the cause. By others it is believed the fault is in the milk or seasoning. The condition of the sick was somewhat improved though several are still dangerously ill.

Miss Kate Moore, of Newark, a week ago ate freely of some pickles, and is dangerously ill, her intestines being almost entirely paralyzed by them. She has also lost the use of her limbs.

A family named Monette, of Port Vain, Quebec, consisting of seven persons, were poisoned from eating bread which had been standing in some place with paris green. Three of the family are dead.

To Make Apple Trees Bear.—We frequently see statements in the papers, says the Rural New Yorker of inquiries if there is any way of making apple trees bear fruit on alternate years or every year.

Many years ago a friend of mine had a dozen apple trees that were bearing heavy crops of apples every other year. He wished to have fruit every year, so he took a long pole—the trees were large—and gave them a heavy beating on the side, or half of the tree, just as the fruit was about the size of hickory nuts, knocking off every fruit on the south of the tree. The result was, as I saw for several years, that these trees bore heavy crops on one side one year, and the next year a heavy crop on the other side, so that for many years he had plenty of apples for home use every year. His trees stood in a rich soil that was annually cultivated—no grass sod to cover the roots.

Professor Nash gives the following directions for making chloride of lime, a very useful disinfectant and fertilizer: "Take one barrel of lime and one bushel of salt; dissolve the salt in as little water as will dissolve the whole; slack the lime with the water, putting on more water than will slack it, so much that it will form a very thick paste; this will not take all the water; put on, therefore, a little of the remainder daily until the lime has taken the whole. The result will be a very powerful deoderizer, equally good for all outdoor purposes with the article bought under the name at the apothecary's and costing not one twentieth part as much. This should be kept under a shed or some out-building; it should be kept moist, and it may be applied whenever offensive odors are generated, with the assurance that it will be effective to purify the air.

The Reformed Church Takes up the Great Work.

Holland, Mich., Aug. 15, 1879.

Editor Cynosure:—The reform wave is steadily rolling onward, and is assuming a shape that makes the Baal worshipers howl with madness, while others are stricken with fear. May the Lord prosper his cause, to the honor and glory of his name.

Since the exposition of Freemasonry here on June 3d, 4th, and 5th, several members of First Reformed church requested their consistory to call a meeting of male members, which took place on the evening of July 24th, when several addresses were made against secretism in general and Freemasonry in particular. On motion the chairman, Rev. R. Pieters, appointed a committee of five to draw up preamble and resolutions to be presented at an adjourned meeting on August 7th, when the following were reported and acted upon article by article, and the whole approved and adopted:

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS OF THE FIRST REFORMED CHURCH OF HOLLAND, MICHIGAN.

Whereas, It is the vocation of the church on earth to be active in the upbuilding and extension of God's kingdom, and to wage an irreconcilable conflict with sin and the works of darkness, and also to contend with evil existing within its own circle and to deal therewith according to the rule instituted by God; and

Whereas, Many members, office-bearers and clergymen in the Reformed Church of America, have joined the so-called Masonic order; and

Whereas, Said order claims to be a society for the promotion of religion, morality, charity, etc., etc.; and

Whereas, The works and ceremonies of the order belie this pretense, since they are contrary to the revealed will of God, as appears from the following, among other considerations, viz:

1. The ceremonies of initiation are unbecoming, degrading to man, non-edifying, and instead of leading unto light, as is pretended, drag into darkness.

2. Things of a sacred nature are employed and presented in a most irreverent manner, since parts of the Scripture are read, presented or used in various ways which serve not only as non-edifying but as positively sinful and blasphemous.

3. The members are required to take numerous and needless oaths, whereby they imprecate upon themselves the most fearful penalties and curses in case they shall reveal any of the trivial so-called secrets of the order. For while we acknowledge that an oath may be taken whenever the magistrates require it of us or consider it necessary, this is an unnecessary swearing, and a transgression of the commandment, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain."

4. It binds one by oath to help a brother also when, through the violation of law, he has exposed himself to the penalties thereof, murder and treason excepted in the lower degrees; while in the higher degrees he is bound by oath to a brother to lend this assistance under all circumstances; being thus placed under the most solemn obligations to weaken the hand of law which God has instituted as his servant—to let the guilty transgressor of the law go unpunished; and to frustrate justice. This is contrary to the laws of our land, as it is the duty of each and every citizen to give to the magistrate information of crimes committed, and to render aid in apprehending the offender that due punishment may be inflicted; and all withholding of information and assistance is viewed in the eye of the law as a participation in the crime itself. Moreover God's Word teaches us that all should be submissive to the powers placed over them by God.

5. Since said order pretends to be a religious society and yet the name of Jesus Christ is not allowed to be used in their so-called religion, not only unacknowledged, but shamefully rejected, and since Jesus Christ is our only hope for salvation, "for there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved;" since he is the cornerstone whereon the foundation and the building of our salvation resteth, it is improper for the confessor of his name to unite with such as dishonor and ignore that name which is the dearest to him, and teach another way by which to enter enter heaven than that of the redeeming and sacrificial blood of our mediator, Jesus given of God: therefore,

Resolved, That Freemasonry is an institution leading man to ruin; an instrumentality of the prince of darkness, rejecting the Triune God, the creator of all whom we confess and worship, profaning his name, making a deceitful use of his Word, and in the execution of the duties imposed upon the members, contrary to the revealed will of God.

Resolved, That a confessor of the name of Jesus may not, yea, cannot, agree with an order which rejects the hope of his salvation, which profanes the name of God, abuses his word and does not acknowledge the way of salvation as given of God.

Resolved, That we deplore the painful fact that there is a considerable number of clergymen, office-bearers, and members in the Reformed church who belong to the Masonic order, giving their support and approval to said society through their membership, while yet it is their duty to let their light shine before the world and show through their walk and conversation whom they serve.

Resolved, That we consider it to be the duty of our church to declare itself against Freemasonry, to regard the order as being in conflict with the true religion and seductive to man, and not to admit to its communion any who join secret societies. And that in order to obtain this object we will unitedly use our endeavors prayerfully and in brotherly love.

Resolved, That our consistory be hereby requested to instruct the representatives of our congregation to lay our wish as above expressed before the Classis of Holland at its next Fall session and to request of the Classis its co-operation and the necessary steps to be taken in the attainment of our object; viz: a declaration of our church against Freemasonry.

Resolved, That we deem it desirable to co-operate in this with our sister congregations in this colony and that the consistory of this church take this in due consideration and in case they deem it best that they take the necessary steps for the purpose.

Isaac Marsilje,
J. R. Kleyn,
T. Keppel,
B. Kruidenier,
B. Steketee,
Committee.

Since then the consistory of the First Reformed church here has had some 400 copies printed in the Dutch language, and forwarded them to the Holland congregations of the Reformed church and American churches in the West, with the brotherly request to co-operate with them in driving secretism out of the church. It is to be regretted that there are clergymen who are trying to oppose the reform movement, but they will learn to their shame that the Lord will overrule all Baal priests. Yours in Christ.

J. O. Doesburg,
P. M. Unity ☐ No. 191.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard preached last Sabbath in the College church, Wheaton, in the absence of Prof. Blanchard at Streator.

—The Chicago Avenue Sabbath school held a picnic on Tuesday at Prospect Park near Wheaton, and sent an invitation to the College school to participate, which was cordially accepted.

—Rev. George C. Needham, the evangelist, is expecting to begin pastoral work with the Chicago Avenue (Moody) church of this city on the last Sabbath in September. His health has suffered from the severe labors of the past few years, and he will rest from evangelistic work for a season, and release Major Whittle for a wider field. His term is for six months to be prolonged if agreeable mutually.

Free Missions.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman, who is now visiting some of our Illinois churches in the interest of free missions, is meeting much encouragement. At Lindenwood, Ogle county, he preached on Sabbath the 10th inst. and lectured, and from there he turned toward Tonica. From Rochelle, Aug. 11th, he wrote as follows:

Dear Bro. K.—I send you herewith a subscription for the cause of free missions which will show that a beginning has been made:

"The undersigned agree to pay to Henry L. Kellogg as Treasurer of the Board of Free Missions the several sums annexed to our names on the following conditions:

"First, Such Mission Board shall be strictly undenominational in character and shall have for its object to aid such ministers of the Gospel and such local churches only as are evangelical in doctrine, are not connected with or extend fellowship to any of the secret orders, but bear faithful testimony against them.

Second, All money paid into the treasury shall be expended according to the direction of the donors, or, if no direction is given at the discretion of the Board of Missions, and all directions and donations acknowledged in the Christian Cynosure.

Third, There shall be no expense connected with the receiving and disbursing of this mission fund, except the necessary cost of postage, stationery and transportation.

Fourth, The several subscriptions to become due only when one thousand dollars have been pledged, unless the donor shall otherwise direct.

H. H. Hinman.....	$10 00
Daniel Countryman (agrees to pay one-tenth of one thousand dollars to support a general missionary who shall bear faithful testimony against secretism, sectarianism and for other Christian reforms).....	$100 00
W. I. Phillips.....	5 00
John E. Countryman (to be paid in six months).....	5 00

WESLEYAN.

—Before his death Rev. N. W. Myers of Vineland, New Jersey, gave $1,000 to build a Wesleyan meeting house in that place. The church was but lately gathered and the gift is most opportune.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley of Wheaton, has again gone to Greene county, Missouri, to labor among the eight new preaching stations appointed by him on his first visit in May. He writes that there has been a precious harvest of souls on this work. Between thirty and forty have professed faith in Christ since his first visit. He asks that this work be remembered in the prayers of God's people.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—Bro. Woodruff Post of Gaines, Pa., still keeps overcoming by the word of his testimony. He writes that he has never preached more plainly against the iniquity of secretism than during the past two years. He has been under a gentlemanly presiding elder and a Freemason, who would prefer nothing said against the lodge. "Prudence," says Bro. Post, "as well as plainness is proper. Discretion is exceedingly essential in all things connected with reform. Love is absolutely essential. When the precept, 'Love your enemies' is overlooked then we are apt to do more harm than good. Our blessed Saviour is a good model."

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Rev. A. W. Geeslin, of Missouri, editor of the Exposition of the Grange is considering the matter of removing to Illinois within the bounds of the Rock River Conference. The Christian Radical speaks hopefully of the change and the prospective help he will be to the churches of this State.

—The Monthly Itinerant gloats over what it assumes to be a defeat of the Telescope respecting the opinions of Joseph Cook, the great lecturer, and insinuates that the Telescope editors "know more about secret societies than they know about the Lord Jesus." Mr. Cook's last statement is, "When a church requires a man to do what a secret society will not let him do, that society should be emphatically repudiated by the church." The position of the United Brethren in Christ against the whole lodge system is thus emphatically vindicated by Mr. Cook.

—Bishop Wright is now engaged in the annual conferences of his district. The other bishops begin their visitations very soon. In a business note Bro. Wright speaks of his fall work thus hopefully. "I have just held the three conferences in Kansas (Osage, Kansas and West Kansas). The net increase in membership the past year is 1,087. Our prohibitory law on secrecy is closely enforced, and our people and preachers in the State are almost unanimous in its favor, and most unwavering too."

—The Elmira church in West Kansas conference was dedicated July 27th by Bishop Wright.

—Neidig Hall, one of the buildings of Western College was entirely destroyed by fire a short time since. President Kephart and Treasurer Drury appeal for help to rebuild, and the trustees are determined to go forward and replace the loss. May their efforts be speedily successful.

—Through the agency of Dr. Davis of Dayton a brother within the bounds of the Rock River conference has recently made a gift to Union Biblical Seminary of $7,500, to be applied to the endowment fund. Half of the sum has been paid in cash, and the remainder is made into notes to be paid soon, and bearing eight per cent interest till paid.

GENERAL.

—The Old Testament is being printed in Aneityumese, the language of the most southerly of the New Hebrides group, the expense having been met by the natives. The British and Foreign Bible Society is doing the work.

—The colored Baptists of Alabama have for the last year sustained a theological and normal school at Selma, with 5 teachers and 252 students, without incurring any debt, and have paid also $1,000 on the debt on the ground and buildings.

—The Moravians in Bohemia started a Sunday-school, July 6th, 1875—the anniversary of the death of Huss—with five teachers and seventy children. They are only able to use the New Testament, and the congregation, though very favorably disposed, is too poor to help them. The Foreign Sunday School Association, of 130 State street, Brooklyn, N. Y., asks the American Sunday schools to send for a contribution-box to receive donations for the Bohemian school and other schools like it. Surrounded by a Roman Catholic population, the Bohemian Moravians are steadfast in the faith of their fathers, and keenly appreciate American aid and sympathy. The Moravians number, in all, 30,619; of whom 8,278 are in Europe, 5,705 in Great Britain, and 16,236 in this country, besides 400 missionaries and their families.

—The Christian Union notices an interesting work maintained by Miss Ada Leigh, an Englishwoman, among the English shop-girls of Paris. In 1868, having become interested in girls of this class, she started a Bible class for them, which soon had sixty-four attendants. The Franco-German war interrupted her projects, but at its close she returned to Paris; and, shortly after, a girl who had attended her meetings, gave her a franc wrapped up in a piece of paper upon which were written the words: "The gift of faith and love for a girls' home in Paris." This incident determined her to carry into execution a long cherished plan, and, on the 20th of December, 1872, she opened a Home with twelve beds. In five days the beds were all occupied, and the number was soon increased to thirty. At this point the French law, which forbade the carrying on of charitable work in apartments, compelled her to secure other accommodations. She selected a suitable building, and, before the time of payment arrived, secured the £10,000 necessary for its purchase. As a result of her efforts, there are now five separate Homes, with a sanitarium at the top of each for the sick. Provision is also made for the care of the young children of English mothers who are compelled to work during the day. Religious services are held morning and evening; ten mission meetings are conducted every Sunday in different parts of the city, besides a regular church service. Sixteen hundred girls have enjoyed the privileges of the Home; and, in connection with it, two establishments where food is supplied every Sunday to shop-girls, free of charge, are carried on. M. Galignani, a Roman Catholic, not only gave Miss Leigh a hospital built by him, but paid the heavy fees for conveyancing. There are now one hundred and thirty girls at the Home, and Miss Leigh has recently made an appeal for aid in carrying on her large and beneficent charity.

News of the Week.

—Fire broke out last Wednesday night in the rear portion of the roof of Tremont Temple, Boston. The flames got pretty good headway before the arrival of the fire department, and before the engines got fairly at work the roof was destroyed and a portion of the walls on the side and rear had fallen in, almost completely destroying the building. The fine organ, near which the fire broke out, is ruined, and the building very thoroughly gutted. The blaze soon assumed the proportions of an extensive conflagration, and the proximity to the Parker House caused great alarm among the guests, nearly all of whom had retired, but made rapidly ready for speedy exit. Beyond the slight scorching of the walls in the rear portion of the hotel, no material damage, however, was done. The loss on the temple is estimated at from $100,000 to $120,000. Several firemen were injured by falling walls, but none it is thought dangerously hurt. Tremont Temple was occupied by numerous Baptist associations, the most important being the Baptist Book Concern. It was also used for the meeting of the national temperance organizations, and various organizations of a similar character. There was great excitement during the fire.

—An ice manufactory is in successful operation at Little Rock, Ark., turning out about forty tons daily, in quarter ton blocks, of superior quality.

—The Permanent Exhibition at Philadelphia has received its deathblow. The Park Commissioners have ordered the Exhibition company to remove their building and its contents from the park within two years. The company had introduced a theatrical performance to draw visitors, and had become nearly demoralized.

—A whole family, consisting E. P. Lesueur, wife, and two children, were struck by lightning at Rochester, Minn., Sunday night, Aug. 3. The wife and children were dead, and Lesueur was not expected to live.

—A train ran into a team containing Pierre Gondreau and two ladies, Rose Martin, Celina Morin, all French, at the crossing in Lisbon, Me. All were instantly killed. They were returning from a wedding excursion.

—The most disastrous fire ever known in West Virginia occurred at Volcano, Wood county, on Monday morning, Aug. 4, at 4 o'clock. During the raging of the fire, men, women and children fled to the woods in perfect panic, dressed in their night clothes only. The town is in the oil region of West Virginia, and, as the buildings were not very secure, the flames raged as a tempest. The fire originated in the store of Thompson & Barnes, and it was but a few moments until the building was consumed, A heavy wind carried the flames to the oil tanks, which soon bursted, the oil flowing in rivers down the streets. The oil ignited, and in an incredible short space of time every building along the streets was fired, transferring the streets into a lake of fire.

—The severest storm for many years raged in England, on Saturday night, Aug. 2d. The storm was attended by a fall of hailstones, some of them being five inches in circumference. The damage to glass around London amounted to thousands of pounds sterling. In a great part of Bedfordshire the hay crop is completely swept away, and many cattle are drowned. Newmarket and the neighborhood are flooded, The rainfall in Buckinghamshire is estimated at seventy tons per acre. Damages by floods and lightning are also reported from Cambridge, Norfolk, Guilford, Leicester, Bath and Monmouth. The storm was terribly severe in the valley of the Thames. Immense injury was done to the growing crops. The damages by rain, hail, and inundations are irreparable this season. The loss of live stock is serious.

—A dispatch from Constantinople reports the financial situation of the Turks very bad. Paper is already unknown, and copper has lost 60 per cent of its nominal value. At a family council at the Sultan's palace on the 14th inst. attended by the Sultan and all the princes, the general opinion was that Mahmoud Nedil Pasha was the only man capable of saving the empire from destruction.

—The National Board of Health has the following dispatch from the United States Consul at Matamoras: "Reliable information from Tampico to Aug. 1st says: 'We have a yellow fever epidemic worse than New Orleans last year. People die like flies. The quarantine at Bagdad against Tampico is still efficient.'"

—Mr. Gladstone, speaking at the opening of the Art Exhibition, at Chester, England, last week, said that when America learned to trust entirely to her own splendid natural resources, the great genius of her people and their marvelous proficiency in the adaptation of labor-saving appliances, in which she was at the head of the world, she would be a formidable competitor with the English manufacturers.

—There are now in Thessaly, Epirus and Macedonia 90,000 Turkish troops, exclusive of artillery and cavalry. These, together with the forces at Adrianople and Constantinople, make an army of 160,000 men in European Turkey, more than would be required to deal with Greece in the event of war. But the probable consequences of a rupture are not to be estimated by the number of troops. Information from Macedonia shows that a Bulgarian rising may be easily produced there, which would cause a dangerous movement in Eastern Roumelia and Bulgaria.

—The death of Mrs. Sartoris, the daughter of ex-President Grant, occurred on the 16th inst., at Warsash House, Tichfield, in Hampshire, England. Her death was sudden and less than three days after the birth of her child. Familiarly known in this country as Nellie Grant her death is everywhere lamented. She was the only daughter of Gen. Grant, who will not learn the distressing news in remote China for some days yet.

Facts about Labor.

[From the Worker.]

—In Texas there are whole counties belonging to a few great cattle raisers.

—The farm lands of France are mortgaged to but 5 per cent of their value; in England to 58 per cent.

—In 1860 there were 1,311.246 hands engaged in manufacture; in 1870, 2,053,996; an increase of 60 per cent.

—The whole of the United States have but 3,000,000 proprietary agriculturists; one-half the number of France, with ten times the area.

—In the opening of the present century our cities numbered one twenty-fifth of our population; now they comprise one fifth of our population.

—Between 1860 and 1870 in every one hundred added to our population there were 18 farmers, 28 operatives and mechanics, 44 traders, 10 professional men and miscellaneous bread winners.

—In 1877 we exported $136,000,000 of agricultural products, each article of which ranged from $2,000,000 up. Of manufactures not chiefly natural products, petroleum, copper, etc., we exported $41,000,000 of articles, each of which ran above $1,000,000.

—Between 1860 and 1870 our farmers increased 18 per cent on the numbers of 1860. In that decade artificial flower makers increased 100 per cent; billiard and bowling saloon keepers increased 400 per cent; showmen increased 400 per cent. Manufacturing establishments increased in this same decade 80 per cent.

—Six million people find their living in France from agriculture, upon an area less than the State of Texas, of which about one-tenth was specially fertile by nature, another tenth absolutely sterile, the eight-tenths being land reclaimed and cultivated up to the present productiveness.

—Less than one-fifth of our added population during the last decade turned to the culture of the soil. One-fifth of the basic industry, and four-fifths to the occupations builded upon it. One-fifth of our workers laying the foundation of wealth, and four-fifths crowding on this slight groundwork and over-toppling superstructure. Is it any wonder that our wealth is insecure and panicky?

—Mr. Harris Gastell's recent report of labor gives the proportion of agricultural labor in Italy, 77 per cent; France, 51 per cent; Prussia, 45 per cent; England 12 per cent. That is over three-fourths in Italy, one-half in France, nearly one-half in Prussia, and a little over one-tenth in England. Our proportion is about 20 per cent or one-fifth.

—England has 250,000 land-holders; 12 per cent of its people only engaged in tilling the soil; about 1,000,000 of paupers. France has 6,000,000 land proprietors, 5,000,000 of whom are small farmers, and we hear little of French pauperism. The nation paid off $1,000,000,000 gold as a redemption price of its territory, the cost of the war besides being about $3,200,000,000.

—Macmillan's Magazine says: "More than half the soil of the United Kingdom is nominally owned by some two thousand persons. According to a valuable anaylsis of the very-ill arranged and incompleted parliamentary return of the land owners of the United Kingdom published in the Financial Reform Almanac for 1878, 421 persons are the owners of 22,880,755 acres, or nearly five million acres more than one-fourth of the total area of the United Kingdom. The mind is unable to grasp what such a monopoly costs the country, but certain features of it stand forth with a prominence sufficiently notable. In the most absolute sense the well-being of the entire population of some thirty-two million souls is placed in the power of a few thousands. For these thousands the multitude toils, and, it may be, on occasion starves. Hence it is that all through rural England we have continually before us that most saddening of all spectacles—two or three families living in great splendor, and hard by their gates the miserably poor, the abject slaves of the soil, whose sole hope in life is too often the workhouse—that famous device against revolution, paid for by the middle class—and the pauper's grave."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerfnl argument against the Lodge hy a truly great and good man who when a young man just before heginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this hook was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created snch excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

To Wisconsin readers:—Are you a friend to this reform? If so you cannot well afford to be absent from this meeting. You are needed to aid in planning, and starting the work of the year. Will you have a State Lecturer? If so, who? and how shall he be supported? Get your church or society to send delegates. If you cannot attend or get your church to send a delegate, direct a letter to the convention. Let the friends know in some way what you want and that you are a live anti-secret church or individual. Take a collection, send a contribution, or do something to help on the cause. Secretary Stoddard will deliver the opening address. Elders Barlow, Browne and Rathbun will be present, with others always able in council and eloquent in speech. Two or more degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry will be worked. This will be a favorable opportunity to subscribe for the Christian Cynosure and to obtain tracts and anti-secrecy publications on special terms. Don't fail to come yourself, but if you can't come yourself be sure "to send a hand."

Friends in Wisconsin who will distribute bills in their neighborhoods can obtain them at this office by sending postage at the rate of — cts per 100.

Topics of the Time.

Two political murders took place last week which startled the nation. On Wednesday Henry M. Dixon was shot in Yazoo City, Mississippi, by a prominent Democrat and nominee of that party for office. Dixon, three years ago was active and influential in the Democratic party. During the war he was a member of Mosely's guerrilla band, and since having come into possession of a large estate through his wife, he has been the largest planter in that part of the country. He was nominated a while since as an independent candidate in opposition to the regular Democratic nominee. In July he was visited by an armed mob and under threats of instant death compelled to sign a card of withdrawal. A few days before the final encounter, he determined to brave the mob and retracted the card. The only way to dispose of him was then taken, and he was shot openly in the streets of Yazoo City and no one dares do other than approve. This terrible proclamation of the Southern Democrats that they will control the elections under any circumstances has produced a profound sensation all over the North, and is a warning which will not be unheeded.

On Saturday San Francisco was thrown into a craze of excitement by the shooting of Rev. I. S. Kalloch, the candidate for Mayor of the Dennis Kearney party, by one of the editors of the San Francisco Chronicle. Kalloch has had a checkered career as Baptist preacher, lawyer and politician in Boston and Kansas, during which time charges of flagrant misconduct have been made. He was a man of attractive manners and appearance, and one of the most eloquent of speakers. Some two years since he went to California to take charge of a Baptist church, but his love for other things tempted him to take sides with the anti-Chinese or workingmen's party with whom his eloquent address was a great power. The Chronicle editors are represented as political desperadoes whose sole policy is rule or ruin. They attacked Kalloch for immorality and attempted to smirch the reputation of his father. He replied in the same style, and one of the editors drove up to his office, called him out and shot him down. The adherents of Kallock rushed upon the carriage, upset it, and were about to brain the would-be assassin, when he was rescued by a strong party of police. The city seemed about to fall into the power of the mob, but by strenuous efforts of the police and military quiet was maintained until Monday. Kearney advised his followers to be quiet, but their curses are deep and if Kalloch should die his murderer will hardly escape. Political capital will be made from this encounter and Kearneyism was never so powerful in California. What changes may result from these assassinations none can tell. In the one case attention will be called as never before to the misgoverned South, and new efforts will be made to check the rule of the lawless and blood-thirsty; in the other political principles almost as bad will be put forward by the popular fury to control and direct the immense interests of our western coast.

It is said that no year has been equally bad as this for crops in England and western Europe since 1806. Before July 12th forty out of forty-nine days were rainy in France, and the proportion was about the same in England, Scotland and Belgium. Last week England was visited by three severe storms. During the second the River Trent overflowed and swept everything movable away. More rain fell in two days than has fallen in an entire month since 1872. Matters have taken on a most serious aspect; some crops are rotting, while immense quantities of hay have gone with the floods, hundreds of cattle and sheep drowned, thousands of acres of corn are under water, and in many cases farm-houses cut off from the rest of the world by the floods. "This has been the severest summer ever experienced in these islands," say the dispatches. Well may the people so distressed turn to our favored land. While they can read of forty-two million bushels of wheat in Illinois, forty million in Minnesota, thirty-million in Indiana, and so on throughout the West, there is little fear of starvation. Already the vaults of Paris and London are disgorging their gold. Over $800,000 in bullion came over in one shipment last week, and it is estimated that Europe will send to this country nearly $100,000,000 this year for cereals alone. With the crop failure the manufacturing interests must also suffer, and reduction of the already low wages is the unhappy prospect of the laboring classes. With our prosperity we must be in readiness to receive a great increase of immigration. With the present means of communication between civilized nations great losses are distributed as well as great gains, and our people must not expect a selfish enjoyment from the proceeds of great harvests.

From Memphis comes the uniform daily report of death. From a dozen to twenty new cases of fever are daily reported, about one-third of which result fatally. About one-half the victims are colored. The opposition of this class to leaving the city continues, and last week meetings of a threatening character were held by them. The city authorites are determined to furnish no aid to those who remain within the limits. The Howard Association has decided not to call for aid until their funds are gone. The question is narrowed down to one of endurance until frost comes.

The secret trade societies which assume to represent the laboring men of Chicago have held another Sabbath picnic. The proclamations were to call out four or five thousand men and cause an immense demonstration. Less than one thousand were actually counted. The day was spent in the usual harangues against capital followed by dancing and other "amusements." Two weeks ago these men sent a protest to the Y. M. C. A. of this city against the religious meetings held Sabbath afternoons at the street railway barns, claiming that they were coercive, and "because we believe that by your association the religion of mammon, not Christ, is taught; and the intended effect of your teaching is to make the workmen more pliant, slavish tools of a heartless, grasping corporation." Such professions followed by the practice of last Sabbath show beyond question the character of the so-called working-men's council. Socialistic religion is no better than that of Freemasonry.

Ebenezer's Sermon.

ANON.

Good morning, brother Hathaway.
I'm glad you've come to-day, sir;
Since you was down the other day,
The mischief's been to pay here.
We had a sermon yesterday,
From Elder Ebenezer,
Abont the lodge of Masonry,
Which raised a perfect breezer.
Too bad you wasn't there to hear
The points he made agin it;
I'll tell you what, he's pretty clear,
For one who's ne'er been in it.

But then it's plain he's been to see
These expositions given
So full and clear of Masonry
(By some fellow for a livin').
The thing that gives to me such pain
He does it 'fore the women!
I do declare I felt like sin
While all the folks were grinnin,'
And casting sheep's eyes at my pew,
(For all knew I was Master);
In fact, 'twas all that I could do
To keep my jewel fast, sir,
As each true Mason, who is wise,
Will do before all cowans;
For in these days the people's eyes
Are opened to our doins'.
And fact is we'll get worsted, sure,
If we attempt a set-to
With those who read the Cynosure
And use the expose stilletto.

But then you'll want to know ere long,
What 'twas that made me wince so.
At first he showed up, as great wrong,
Our taking people in so,
By charging them such monstrous price
For secrets that are open!
And telling them so many lies
To keep our vows unbroken.
He then commenced to diagnose
The Mason's obligation;
But noticed first what we propose
To one in preparation;
Requiring him to cheerfully
Conform to ancient custom,
And usages which we obey,
Before we further trust him.
"This is," he said, "against the laws
Which are contained in Scripture."
And, turning to Leviticus,
He gave to us a clip, sir,
By reading what I never knew
Was in the Bible written.
In chapter five, fourth verse, you'll view,
That vow to do what's hidden—
Or good, or bad—is called a sin;
And when the vower sees it,
He must, if he'd be pure within,
Before the folks confess it.

And next, of vow to ne'er reveal
What's been already published.
To always hail, and e er conceal,
Or else by death be punished.
He said, "No man, to-day, can live,
And keep this obligation,
Unless he studies to deceive,
Whene'er in conversation
With those who've had a chance to know
About these expositions;
And all, to-day will find it so
Who're true to their convictions."
For instance, he himself one day,
A Mason high did question,
To see what he would have to say
About a frank confession
Made by a man (a preacher too)
Who felt a strong conviction
That he at least could never know
The depths of pure religion,
And still to lodge of Masons go;
And thinking more of Jesus,
Than all the rest in world below,
Concluded he would leave us.

The Mason sought, in his reply
To question thus propounded,
To make believe 'twas all a lie,
Or else some joke unbounded;
Such things were not in Masonry,
And tale was all unfounded.
But he ere long the truth did see
By proof he knew well grounded.
A friend of his was troubled so,
That nothing could relieve him,
Until he saw what he must do
Ere Jesus would receive him.

—The "Right Worthy Grand Lodge of the World, Independent Order of Good Templars," had lately some officers to elect, and met in Liverpool, England, to parcel out its magnificent titles to Canada, Scotland, the United States, England, Wales, Germany, India, New Zealand and Norway, which nations will be under so much obligation to keep the peace one with another. The order numbers about 400,000.

Knights Templar.

BY J. P. STODDARD.

This is a Masonized chivalric order which was introduced into this country in 1808.—Rebold's Hist., p. 226.

It is eminently Christian after the Masonic sort, and on that account so sectarian that it meets with no favor among the Jews.—Ib.

It is the ninth in a series of degrees and can only be reached by passing through the Blue Lodge and the Chapter.—Robt. Ramsay, Voice of Masonry, May, 1879, p. 186.

Of late this order has become quite popular in the United States, having a membership at this time of fifty thousand.—Inter-ocean, Chicago, July 29, 1879.

None are received into this order except men fit for military service, and they appear in public uniformed and armed as warriors prepared for battle.

They constitute an independent standing army under a regimen of their own, being neither organized, officered or controlled by any department of State.

Acting in concert with other secret orders, they are approaching that supremacy which Macauley ascribes to the Jesuits in the seventeenth century, when he says, "They guided the councils of kings."

Affiliating with other departments in the secret system they construct temples rivaling those famed castles of old English barons in magnificence and strength.

Within these strongholds are stored uniforms, banners, swords and whatever other munitions of war they possess, and it is behind bolted doors and within these guarded fortresses that they draw out their designs on the "trestle-board" and prepare for real work.

No officer of the law, or private citizen, is allowed to enter these night councils or to explore their mysterious caverns until he has put his life into the hands of the order by taking a stringent oath "ever to conceal and never to reveal" what is done of them in secret.

When not in secret session or on public parade the members of this body-guard of the Masonic system are dispersed through every department of society, in the government and in the church, where, like the Jesuits, they are ready to defeat the counsels of their opponents and further their own designs.

Near the close of his initiation into this order the candidate is required to take the "sealed obligation." He is presented with a cup made of the upper part of a human skull, which he takes in his hand and repeats after the Grand Commander the following obligation: "This pure wine I now take in testimony of my belief in the mortality of the body and the immortality of the soul; and may this libation appear as a witness against me both here and hereafter, and as the sins of the world were laid upon the head of the Saviour, so may all the sins committed by the person whose skull this was, be heaped upon my head in addition to my own, should I ever knowingly or wilfully violate or transgress any obligation that I have hitherto taken, take at this time, or shall at any future period take in relation to any degree of Masonry or order of Knighthood. So help me God."

Every feature of this secret alliance which comes to the public has a suspicious appearance, and it is not wise to trust altogether to professions. Conspiracies against constitutional government have always made secrecy their covering while plotting treason and professing patriotism, and we may yet be compelled to recognize, as as we were in the recent rebellion, an organized force which will require more lives and more money to put down than were consumed in the late Southern war.

It is surely fitting in these times that we should ponder well the designs of men who meet in secret and swear to conceal each other's crimes without exception, and that we should hesitate to join in or bestow honor upon any society for military order that can offer no better proof of its patriotism and usefulness than a suspicious record and doubtful professions of honesty.

Observations of an Ex-Mason.

ST. JOHN AS A PATRON OF MASONRY.

Masons in their obligations are sworn to do evil as well as good, and have evil done unto him or them, if he or they ever violate the same by exposing the craft. What was Paul doing? Was not he wrestling with those anti-Christian organizations of ceremonial law whose obligations were the same in nature? Was not Judas a member of a secret organization whose token was a kiss? Is it not disregarding the Old Testament teachings (Lev. 5:14) and Christ's Sermon on the Mount (Mat. 5:33, 45)? Is not St. John considered good authority amongst Masons? Does not the senion deacon answer to "Who comes there?" "A poor blind candidate who has long been desirous of having and receiving a part of the rights and benefits of this worshipful lodge, dedicated (some say erected) to God and held forth to the 'holy order of St. John,' as all true fellows and brothers have done who have gone this way before him?"

The Masonic Monitor, on page 310, under ceremonies and charges says, "From time immemorial it has been customary for the Masonic fraternity to dedicate the different departments of our institutions to different patrons. We dedicate our Lodge to St. John the Baptist, or the Evangelist; our Chapter to Zerubbabel, and our Encampment to St. John the Almoner. We do this not in that superstitious sense in which the brethren employ the term when they set apart their temples for the worship of their imaginary deities, nor in that high and solemn sense in which Christians dedicate their churches to the great Jehovah; but we (Masons) do it simply to testify our respect and esteem for the character of those who have been so eminently beneficial to our institution, and that their examples may stimulate us to imitate their exalted virtues."

Can this be true of John the Baptist and not of Christ? There was a man sent from God (John 1:7). He came for a witness of the light (John 1: 15). Does Masonry testify the same? If then he bore testimony of the light his teachings must harmonize with Paul's and Christ's, and if such is the case we must find him make an exposition of those anti-Christian organizations as they existed, which were compose of priests, scribes, high priest, and chief officers of government, as they are to to-day.

In speaking of Christ he confessed that Jesus was mightier than he, and whose shoes he was not worthy to bear (Mat. 3:11.) He sets forth a class of men intermingled with one another that show respect for the Divine law and whose teachings are in harmony with it, and another class in harmony with the Masonic obligations of to-day. If then, John who was a man of God, dare to boldly confess Christ and expose the obligations of the scribes and Pharisees, Jews, etc., why should not every Christian do the same? acknowledge Christ, expose the Masonic obligations and warn others against the evil thereof?

Masons admit the testimony of the disciple St. John to be true. This class of men he speaks of in his Gospel 18:31, as confessing that "It is not lawful for us to put any man to death." On the other hand in the 19th chapter 17th verse is another which boldly asserts that "We have a law (or Masonic obligation) and by our law (or Masonic obligation) he ought to die." Whom? He who goes about from place to place teaching and exposing their doings openly and in public. John did the same thing. Let us do it and fear not.

[From the Lutheran Standard.]

What is Masonry?

On the above question much might be written. Thousands of people claim, and men of the order often say, that no man can know what Masonry is, unless he belong to the order. But are these not strange assertions, when the secret society of Speculative Freemasonry itself tells us what it is? Just as Odd-fellowship publishes to the world its principles and objects through its books and journals, so does Masonry do the same.

We have before us a magazine, published in the interest of Masonry for the last seventeen years, called: Voice of Masonry and Family Magazine, published by John W. Brown, Chicago, Ill. This magazine, no doubt, has a wide circulation, and cannot be said to misrepresent Masonry. In the February number of 1879, on the 11th page, is an article headed, "Masonry a Universal Religion." The writer of this article is L. D. Lewelling, Grand Orator, Grand Lodge of Iowa

From this article we will give but a few quotations. You can clearly see from its whole drift, how Masonry sets itself up as the religion of all religions. You can clearly see from it, how the Christian religion is placed upon the same level with all the religions of the world, as being not a whit better than they.

The writer says: "I have no patience with any man's religion which assails the religion of another." "No religion has a right to say to another, in terms of reproach, Stand aside, I am holier than thou." Did the inspired Apostle Paul utter a falsehood when he said: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed?" Gal. 1: 8. Again: Does the Apostle Paul lie when he speaks of Christ and his religion as the only true religion in the following language: "For other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ?" 1 Cor. 3: 11. Did not Christ and the apostles assail all false religions? Is not their word to be the rule of faith and practice of every Christian and of the whole Christian church? It is not "intolerance," but a Christian duty to judge and condemn every doctrine and principle, which is contrary to the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The writer further says: "The fondest dream of my boyhood days was that I should live to establish a church whose creed should be no creed, whose foundation principles should be born of a charity so broad that not only the churches, but the citizens of every state, and the people of every nation under the blue dome of this earth temple, should meet upon common ground in unity and concord." Did the writer ever find such a religion and broad platform? He tells you on page 113 when he says: "We are told that Masonry is no religion. I deny it. We have too long taught that Masonry is no religion. No wonder we have sometimes failed to keep the craft in due bounds, when they are told that the sublimest principles of Masonry are but the doctrines of an insurance company." Further on the writer calls Masonry "a universal brotherhood, a universal religion, a great church of charity."

This magazine then proclaims to the world that Masonry is "a universal religion and a great church of charity." Is it not the flattest contradiction then for a person to profess the Christian religion, and at the same time profess to belong to a universal religion, to a "great church" which is to cover all creeds? And yet many will say, "I can't see it!" O what blindness! How can you expect to stand before the judgment seat of Christ, if you patronize such false principles? Will you yet longer listen to those who tell you that Masonry and Odd-fellowship are no religion? Will you willfully shut your eyes against the words of Christ, "Ye cannot serve two masters?" Will you wilifully shut your eyes to the clear doctrine of the gospel, which in the plainest language teaches you that any and every religion which has not got Christ for its corner-stone and foundation is false? May God yet open the eyes of thousands, ere it is too late!

Joseph Cook on Mormonism.

On Sabbath evening, June 1st, the Rev. Joseph Cook spoke in the Presbyterian church in Salt Lake City. The subject of his prelude was "Mormonism." In the very home of this "relic of barbarism," he arraigned it in terms which do not represent too strongly the detestation in which the domestic system of Utah is held by Christendom. His first sentence was, "The unscriptural, the loathsome and lawless thing in Mormonism is polygamy." The speaker then went on to show that the Jews were not a polygamous people, although the Mormons are constantly quoting the Old Testament for their authority. It might as well be said that they were a nation of adulterers because a few of them violated the seventh commandment, as to say that they were a polygamous nation because a few of them practiced polygamy contrary to Scriptural law. The Old Testament is very explicit against polygamy, even if men did engage in it then as now. The Old Testament says expressly in Leviticus 18:18: "Neither shalt thou take a wife to another to vex her," which is the literal translation.

The Old Testament also says, in that moral law given for the guidance of all men to the end of time: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife." It is an arrangement of God, which Mormon priests will hardly be able to set aside, even with all their pretended miraculous gifts, that the sexes are brought into the world in about equal numbers, the men outnumbering the women by about fourteen to thirteen, on account of being exposed to greater dangers destructive of life. "Now," said the speaker, "what are the rest of us going to do for homes, when you Mormons undertake to carry out your theory of taking five, fifteen, or twenty wives apiece? And how are you going to avoid coveting your neighbor's wife, and bringing down upon you, sooner or later, the retributive justice of Heaven, for violating the tenth commandment of the Decalogue, as you do when you enter polygamy. You must be a set of lunatics if you think you are thus going to trample under foot the arrangement of the supreme powers in regard to the equal number of the sexes in the world, and deprive large numbers of men of the privilege of pure homes, and then altogether escape the righteous wrath of man and the scathing thunderbolts of the Almighty.

Your theory of polygamy is altogether loathsome—an irrepressible stench in the nostrils of all decent and intelligent men and women throughout the land. The condition of things where polygamy prevails is simply unreportable to a mixed audience. And yet one woman has just as much right to have many husbands as one husband has to have many wives.

The error of Mormonism is that it arranges society as if human beings were poultry. Polygamy and Mormonism I call the poultry philosophy.

Woman has been so made that she cannot stand erect under any polygamous roof. A Mormon home has no room in it for Mrs. Browning's Aurora Leigh or Shakespeare's Portia or Imogen. Woman wants a home, not a harem or a hen-coop. Mormonism is the hen-coop hennery.

The speaker further illustrated the loathsomeness of the Mormon social system by stating on the best legal authority he had been able to consult in this Territory, that there are known no laws in Utah against adultery and seduction. Mormonism reaches out its foul head among the industrious peasantry of Germany, France, England and Scotland, plucks at the matrons and maidens, and then transports them to Utah, where there is no law on the statute book for the protection of pure womanhood, since the legislature is exclusively Mormon.

Now, what will happen if Mormonism has its way? Will Utah not be admitted as a State? Certainly if Mormonism has its way. And even if it accepts an anti-polygamy constitution, for the sake of admission, will that constitution not be amended afterward so as to favor polygamy? Will the laws not be made oppressive to the Gentiles so as to annoy them and force them to leave the State when everything is in the hands of the Mormons, who are taught by the priesthood to consider all anti-Mormons as legitimate subjects of plunder and oppression? If Mormonism has its way, will not colonization continue in Idaho, Wyoming and Arizona, until Mormons shall hold the balance of political power, if they do not already? If Mormonism has its way, will Mormon or United States law be supreme in Utah? Is it not fair to infer the future from the past?

There sits John D. Lee on his coffin. And there sits the incorruptible and chivalrous judge—the man whom Mormon gold could not bribe—Judge McKean. Hear the examination: Were you, John D. Lee, one of the perpetrators of the Mountain Meadow Massacre? And John D. Lee, on the borders of eternity, is obliged to say: I was. By whose orders were you acting? By the orders of the Mormon priesthood. And why did you obey those orders when you knew they required you to violate the sacred laws of the land for the protection of human life? And John D. Lee, on the borders of eternity, is obliged to answer: Because I considered the secret oaths of the Endowment House superior to the laws of the United States. And John D. Lee went into eternity with these words on his lips, having retained his high position in the Mormon priesthood for twenty years after the Mormon officials knew he was guilty of being a leader in that awful massacre, while the incorruptible judge, for attempting to maintain the laws of the land, was followed by Mormon vituperation and hostility until his death.

And do you really think the American people are going to let Mormonism have its way, when it continues to put the foul and blasphemous oaths of the Endowment House above the Constitution and laws of the land? If you do you do not know the American heart which beats along the Atlantic seaboard, in the valleys of the Alleghenies, and through the great Valley of the Mississippi.

Said the speaker: I dare not begin to express in words the burning indignation of the patriotic citizens throughout the entire East and West against this monstrous Mormon swindle on the part of the priesthood. Brigham Young is in his grave, and an immense slab of granite from the Wasatch Mountains is placed above his remains. But he is said to have left $3,000,000 to his heirs, and his estate had to deed back to the Mormon church nearly half a million of dollars, which, by some accident, had got into Brigham's pocket. Hence the American people have no difficulty in seeing through the stone. On yesterday I rode past the Eagle Gate, which seems to be the pride of all the priesthood. An immense eagle, with outspread wings, is perching upon a bee-hive, with his talons deep in the hive—rapacity preying upon industry. A most fitting symbol for this Territory under the rule of the Mormon priesthood, with its annual exaction of $500,000 in tithes. I have much sympathy with the bee-hive, and none at all with the eagle.

Now, it is not true that a set of adventurers wish to drive the Mormons out of this Territory and take possession of their property. Nor is it true that the Gentiles here are a set of penniless beggars, preying upon your property. They are abundantly able to look after themselves. The great railroad, coal and mining interests are almost exclusively in their hands. They want your industry. They want all the vegetables and grain and fruit and cattle you can raise, and will pay you cash for it.

Nor is it true that the American people want to drive you from this valley. All they want is that you shall obey the laws and be Americans.

You could not pursue a more suicidal policy than that of treating the courts and laws with contempt, as you did recently in the procession in honor of Wells. You cannot expect your Territory will prosper if you do not make life and property safe here. And when you allow murders, and thefts, and other violations of law to go without investigation and punishment, as you did in regard to the great massacre, the Aiken murder, the Robinson assassination, and other outrages, you are simply preparing the way for the manifestation of that conscientious wrath which caused the patriotic legions of the North to sweep with conquering wings through the Mississippi Valley, and drive all before them from the mountains to the sea. Look out that you do not by your disloyalty and opposition to the laws bring down upon you the resistless justice of national authority. Fifteen years ago it would not have been safe for me to speak thus. But now the protecting arm of the nation is beginning to be felt here, and I speak freely, as an American citizen ought to speak—as I would wish to be spoken to if in error.

There are three remedies for the evils that prevail in this Territory.

1. Thorough execution of the United States laws.

2. Education. These Mission schools are the harbingers of a better day. The Episcopalians, and Presbyterians, and Methodists, and Congregationalists are doing a grand work in this way. It is cause for for rejoicing that Colorado College has established a branch here.

An outspoken newspaper press here is a most hopeful sign. Let it speak so that it shall be heard across the land.

3. The preaching of the pure Gospel of Christ, in no craven or apologetic way, and backed by a lofty example. With these agencies at work, the day is not distant when we may see your granite Endowment House transformed into an American State house.—Rochester Exponent.

Sources of Mormon Strength.

BY THE REV. R. G. M'NEICE.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 23, 1879.

Before undertaking to account for the strength of Mormonism, I want to say a few words more in reference to the spirit of vindictiveness manifested against outsiders, wherever the Mormons have the power, and think it will be safe. I was mentioning the case of the Rev. S. L. Gillespie, a Presbyterian missionary at Brigham City, a place of about 3,000 inhabitants, eighteen miles northwest of Ogden. It has the reputation of being the best organized Mormon town in Utah, being entirely free from Gentiles and apostates. By the aid of the Home Mission Board, property was purchased there, and Mr. Gillespie was sent to take charge of the field. He had previously been located at Corinne, a place under Gentile control, six miles farther west. No sooner did Mr. Gillespie go over to take charge of the Presbyterian property, than Mormon vindictiveness began to manifest itself.

ILLUSTRATION OF MORMON OSTRACISM.

One of the Mormons who assisted in moving his goods was cut off from the church, and the other barely saved himself by obsequious confessions of wrong-doing, and a promise not to allow any more Gentiles to employ his services for a similar purpose. Then the priestly edict was issued forbidding any grocer, butcher, shoemaker or general trader to sell anything to this Christian missionary. And so for several months he had to go to Corinne, six miles distant, to obtain all his supplies for his household.

Then they proceeded to shut off the water which irrigated his garden; to tear down the fence around the lot where his cow was kept, and to overturn the out-houses. Finding that none of these things disturbed the missionary's equanimity, with the barbarism of Indians, they began to stone his house at night, not only breaking out all the glass, but endangering life. This was done three times in one week. Then the Mormons sent their special police to stand at the door on the Sabbath to intimidate those who went to the Sabbath-school and church services. These persecutions were kept up until they were published in the Daily Tribune of this city. But the miserable cowards could not stand the exposure of their deeds, and for the most part abruptly desisted. There is one thing that Mormonism hates above all, and that is the light. As long as Utah was not connected with the outside world by railroads, and was hemmed in by these mountain ranges, so that the Danites could carry out unhindered the barbarous edicts of the Mormon hierarchy, the list of mutilations, cruel outrages, robberies and assassinations was simply appalling. It is estimated on good authority that no less than 600 Gentiles have been murdered in this Territory by the Mormons. The Mormon leaders have taught the people that it is not wrong to take the lives of outsiders when they think the interests of the church can be thereby promoted.

But now Utah, through railroads, telegraphs, commercial enterprises of various kinds, mission churches and schools is in a blaze of light. And while the spirit of vindictiveness seems as bitter as ever, the power to execute it is gone, and the Gentiles live here in perfect safety under the protection of the Federal Government.

ELEMENTS OF MORMON STRENGTH.

Now, although Mormonism is a swindle from beginning to end, and is repulsive to all moral and educated people, it nevertheless possesses enormous strength. For fifty years it has had its own way, in spite of the restraints of the government. And to-day, instead of being confined to Utah, it may be said to hold the balance of power between Wyoming and Idaho on the north and Arizona on the south. In this Territory it has a population of 109,000 which is steadily increasing. Now where does the strength of this system lie?

1. In its organization. I doubt if there is another organization on top of the earth which equals it for compactiveness, strength and diabolical ingenuity. The whole Territory is divided into twenty stakes (see Isaiah liv. 2), and these subdivided into about 230 wards, twenty-one of which are in this city. Each stake has a president, and ward a bishop and two counsellors, who look after the secular interests. Under these latter are teachers and deacons whose business it is to visit every Mormon in the ward, and report to the bishop. Hence the condition of every man, woman and child is known at headquarters every month.

VAST NUMBER OF OFFICE-HOLDERS.

All over eight years of age are considered members of the Mormon church. And according to their own figures at the April conference, they have 75,557 members. Of these 23,002, or about one in three are office-holders. Hence every bright man among the Mormons is bribed, with an office and the prospect of promotion, into upholding and defending the system. At the head of this powerful hierarchy are the twelve apostles, and supreme over all President Taylor and his two counsellors. Whatever these fifteen men command has to be done, even if requires the butchery of 120 unoffending Arkansas emigrants.

2. The financial system. This is based on the tithing plan which requires that one-tenth of what each one raises, earns or makes shall be handed over to the priesthood. Opposite Temple Square in this city, is a large two and a half story building, with long wings—located in a spacious lot which is divided up into enclosures for cattle, horses, sheep, etc.,—the whole surrounded by a high stone wall. This is known as the "Tithing House," where the tenth of everything is carried. Here, almost every day in the week may be seen the poor farmer driving in with the tenth of his produce, and old ladies with their baskets containing the tenth of the products of their little gardens. According to the reports at the April conferences, the net proceeds of the tithing, for the year then ending, reached the enormous aggregate of $493,946. And those who ought to know say as much more is paid which is not reported. Then, in addition, is the temple fund, the poor fund and the perpetual emigration fund—ingenious devices for extorting money from the deluded and priest-ridden people. I cannot find that any report is made in regard to the use of these funds, any farther than that they are used for the general interests of the church. And that phrase is broad enough to cover the purchase of a Congressman or the fees of the conscienless attorney who does the bidding of the priesthood, by keeping from the penitentiary or gallows, through legal tricks and quibbles, the men who have robbed or murdered Gentile travelers.

3. Another source of Mormon strength is their missionary policy. Every spring a list is published of those who have been appointed "to go on a mission." So far as I can learn, more than two hundred of these missionaries are abroad all the time. They go at their own expense and receive no salary. They know if they do not go the wrath of the leaders will fall upon them. They go not only into all parts of their own country, but into all parts of the earth. Into the ears of the burdened, discontented, disaffected, illiterate classes, they pour the plausible tale of Mormonism, promising to the homeless laborers in the old countries houses and lands in Utah, the Paradise of the world. Alas! that the poor deluded convert arrives here only to find Utah cursed with the worst ecclesiastical despotism and the worst social system on the earth. But what can the poor victim do? His means are gone and he cannot endure the thought of going back to meet the reproaches of the friends left behind. And then, prior to the last eight years, if these disappointed ones undertook to leave they knew the murderous Danites would be on their track. And so they resolve to make the best of it, and settle down to their hard lot, with crushed hopes and stifled consciences.

Nor let it be supposed that these missionaries go to foreign lands in vain. They bring back their converts by the thousand. The newspaper dispatches announced this morning that the steamer Wyoming had just arrived in New York with 600 Mormon converts—English, Scotch and Scandinavian—mostly women. This will make 1050 that have arrived here since the first of April. Last year, between June and December, they brought into this city over 2100.

4. Another source of strength is the organized ignorance of the masses. The Mormon leaders pretend to be in favor of education. But they have had control of this Territory thirty-two years, and they havn't the sign of a graded public school. In eight years the people of Colorado have organized one of the finest public school systems in the country. Indeed, the city of Denver may be said to have model schools and school buildings By depriving the people here of the advantages of public schools, the leaders are able to lead them about b the nose, and do what they please with them.

5. Polygamy. This, instead of being an element of weakness, is the key-stone of Mormon strength. It is one of the shrewdest things connected with Mormonism. It adds strength in three ways: (1) They back it up by the Bible. (2) It appeals to a certain class of men all over the world who are very ready, under the garb of religion, to maintain social relations which their consciences would hardly allow them to do otherwise. (3) When once mixed up in polygamy, it is very hard to get out of it. There are the children to fasten the parents. And if one leaves it the disgrace still attaches to him.

6. The last source of strength I shall mention is the political unity of the Mormons. They vote and act in one solid mass If their leaders say: "Thumbs up," every Mormon thumb goes up at once, and stays there until the leaders make a new motion.

Now, if anybody thinks such a system is going "to dry up and blow away" of its own accord, he simply advertises his utter lack of information, not to say a very childish judgment.

Reform News.

The Last Call.

Men and Women of Wisconsin opposed to Masonry:—We cannot speak to you again through the Cynosure until after our convention at Evansville, and now we speak to stir you up if possible to make all needful effort and sacrifice to attend our annual meeting.

There is work to be done for the coming year—grand work for God and humanity lying at our very doors; work which cannot be done without workers; work which will be undone unless you do it; work for which God may hold us responsible if it is not done.

Now is the time for professed Anti-masons to prove their right to the name by the willingness they show—not to let somebody else do the work and pay all the money—to lay hold and help on the work, by their presence, prayers, toil and MONEY at Evansville next week.

We want to take you by the hand. We want to look into your eyes and gather inspiration from their light. We desire to touch the pulse of your zeal, to test your courage and measure the strength of your hatred for false worships that are elbowing true piety out of our churches and robbing Christ of his revenue of souls.

Come from the north—let not the south hold back. From toward the sun-rising let us hear the sturdy tread of a dauntless host. Let the occident send up her faithful ones and true. Since our organization we have never yet met with so much to encourage us. A strong blow at the right time will effect more than a hundred at a less auspicious moment. Let us have that stroke next week at Evansville, and you, and YOU, and YOU, all along the line, be there to make it tell; and so farewell till then. J. L. BARLOW.

Act. Secretary, etc.

To Friends in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug., 1879.

Dear Friends of Reform:—Those of you who are interested in the reform movement in this State. We hope soon to have a lecturer in the field. Can an appointment be made in your neighborhood for one or two lectures? We want to get ready for the next annual meeting, and we need your co-operation. Can you suggest anything that will help advance the reform movement against secret societies for the Lord Jesus' sake, or for your country's sake? Please write to me, or to Prof. E. G. Paine of Wasioja, who is the president of the State Association; and let us know something of the state of your community in regard to the reform.

Yours truly and heartily in this cause. WILLIAM FENTON,

Cor. Secretary.

Where Shall we Meet in Michigan?

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 18, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I wish to say to the friends of the cause in Michigan, that the time appointed for our State meeting, is fast approaching and no place has yet been decided upon at which it shall be held.

We should like to hear from the friends at once as to where they would like to have it held and who can be depended on to work up an interest at any point that may be suggested. There is of necessity a good deal of work to be done if we want our meeting to be successful and the time to work is short, so send on your suggestions at once.

I would also request every reader of the Cynosure who is interested to see this work go on to send me a postal card at once giving their name and address. I would like to make out a list of all the lovers of reform in Michigan, who are not ashamed to have it known that they are opposed to the secret orders. So send on your names with any suggestions you may wish to make in reference to the furtherance of our cause. W. H. Ross,

Cor. Sec. M. S. C. A.

An Appeal for Iowa.

Dear Friends of Reform in Iowa:—The time for our State meeting is fast approaching. Are we preparing to make it a success? Does each individual friend of the cause intend to do his whole duty? Come brethren and sisters, let us arouse ourselves and be ready for action, ready for sacrifice or for service. Our enemies are at work, and like the great enemy of souls they choose the dark recesses of the lodge, and there concoct their devilish schemes for the injury of business, and destruction of the character of those (both men and women) who have the moral courage to denounce lodgery. We have a tremendous battle before us, but let us first count the cost and then in the name of Elijah's God go forth to meet the foe, realizing that our great Commander never lost a battle. Men and women of Iowa, we appeal to you to come and make this our annual gathering a success. Come and learn what has been done and what is to do in our reform. Come that we may get acquainted with each other, so that we may work together better in the future. Come and hear some of the best speakers in the Northwest. Come! Rally for the defense of all we hold near and dear, and may Heaven bless the effort. J. M. KENT.

President State Ass'n.

P. S.—All papers friendly to the anti-secrecy reform, are earnestly requested to publish the call for our State meeting, with this appeal.

The first and third degrees in Masonry will be worked if desired on that occasion. J. M. K.

OBITUARY.

All who attended the National Convention at Dayton in 1877, will remember Bro. Grosvenor, a retired minister, then living at Troy. He was present with his wife and took a deep interest in the meeting and especially the Publishing House fund, for which he made two subscriptions. This aged servant of God has gone home. The Worcester, Mass., Spy of July 26, ult., contains the following notice:

Rev. Moses G. Grosvenor, who died suddenly on Thursday at his house in this city, was born in 1796, and was consequently 83 years old at the time of his death. He was a son of Rev. Daniel Grosvenor of Grafton, and a graduate of Dartmouth College, of the class of 1818. His ministerial life was spent as pastor of Congregational churches in Haverhill, Clarendon, Vt,, Barre, Marlboro, N. H., and Guilford, Vt. The past fifteen years he has lived at Troy, O., in retirement from the active work of the ministry. A few months since he removed to this city, expecting to find here an evening home, as he expressed it, among the scenes and acquaintances of earlier days. He had no children, and after the death of his second wife made a home with a niece. The death summons came suddenly to this veteran servant of God, but it found him ready.

"A mortal arrow pierced his frame;
He fell, but felt no fear."

His oft repeated prayer, that his end might be peaceful, was granted. The funeral is to be attended today, after prayer at his late residence, at Petersham, where his father died many years since at the age of 84. Mr. Grosvenor was a man of strong individuality and earnest piety. He was in many respects a clergyman of the old school, and commanded by his dignified bearing and high personal character, the respect of all who knew him. He had a brother, Rev, Cyrus P. Grosvenor, who died a few months since, a Baptist clergyman, once pastor at Southbridge and also in Boston, and who was one of the anti-slavery champions of the days of Garrison, and a man of strong character.

Correspondence.

For the Benefit of a St. Paul Pastor.

ST. PAUL, Minn.

One of the city pastors tells me that he is a Royal Arch Mason and that he can orate on Freemasonry. As he forbids me speaking to him on the subject, I propose to preface his oration and introduce him to his audience with an object lesson, showing to his audience a man taking the obligation of a Master Mason. The Masonic fraternity, according to their ancient and honorable custom (see article "Joabert," Lexicon of F. M.), assassinated Captain William Morgan for revealing how it is done; and after they had assassinated him they bid defiance to, and successfully held at bay for five years the whole State of New York, in its legal efforts to bring the assassins to justice, so that the State was compelled to leave the blood of Captain William Morgan in the ground, where it still remains crying unto God for vengeance upon the fraternity of Freemasons for assassinating their innocent victim. I say innocent, because I maintain that it was no crime, but, on the contrary, a praiseworthy act on the part of Captain Morgan to reveal the secrets of Freemasonry; and, furthermore, his revelation was confirmed and endorsed by one hundred and three ex-Masons in a convention of eight thousand persons held in Le Roy, New York. Also confirmed by multitudes who have left and are continually leaving the fraternity at the peril of their lives, certain that they will be hunted as long as they live as so-called perjured wretches.

Look at the man taking the obligation that makes him a Master Mason; and to increase your loathing and disgust, imagine the man to be a learned doctor of divinity, divested of all his clothing except his shirt. The old lodge drawers are put on him and the legs rolled up above the knees. A rope called a cable tow, three time around his body, and a hoodwink over his eyes. Thus, with both breasts, arms, legs and feet naked, he is led to the altar; there he is made to kneel and place both hands on the square and compasses which rest upon the Holy Bible. Now hear him swear in his obligation that is to make him a Master Mason:

"Furthermore, that I will keep the secrets of a worthy brother Master Mason as inviolable as my own when communicated to and received by me as such, murder and treason excepted, and then only at my option."

"Furthermore, that I will not have illicit carnal intercourse with a Master Mason's wife, mother, sister or daughter, I knowing them to be such, nor suffer it to be done by others if in my power to prevent it."

"Furthermore that I will not give the grand hailing sign or sign of distress of a Master Mason except in real distress, in case of the most imminent danger, within a regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons, or in some secure place for Masonic instruction; and should I see the sign given or hear the words accompanying it, I will immediately repair to the relief of the person so giving it, should there be a greater probability of saving his life than of losing my own."

"Furthermore, that I will not give the grand Masonic word in any other manner than that in which I shall hereafter receive it and then only in a low breath." (The grand Masonic word is Ma-ha-bone.)

"To all of this I most solemnly promise and swear with a firm and steadfast resolution to keep and perform the same without any equivocation, mental reservation, or secret evasion of mind whatever, binding myself under no less penalty than that of having my body severed in twain, my bowels taken from thence and burned to ashes and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven, so that no more trace or remembrance may be had of so vile and perjured a wretch as I, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn obligation as a Master Mason. So help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same."

On his hands being removed from the Bible he stoops his head and kisses it. The Worshipful Master orders him released from the cable tow and declares, "He is bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose."

I would particularly call the attention of the ladies of his audience who are relations of Master Masons to that part of the obligation in which they are mentioned, and more particularly to the words, "I knowing them to be such," and they will at once see the propriety of making themselves known among Master Masons.

Of course those ladies in the audience who have no relations who are Master Masons will feel different from the others. And will not all good men in the audience at once see it to be their duty to join this "ancient and honorable fraternity" and become Master Masons as soon as possible in order to save their female relatives from — from — why from Master Masons!

Our Masonic orator could not impart this beautiful feature of the fraternity to his audience without incurring the penalty of having his bowels taken out and burned to ashes. Therefore, perhaps it was not without good reason that a Masonic preacher told me that these expositions helped the order to increase its numbers. But suppose a a good man in the audience has not "all the limbs whole and sound," then alas he cannot avail himself of that shield to defend his female relatives from Masons that the orator has to defend his own female relatives with from the same.

Filled with indignation that the Masons had snared an old friend of mine into their trap I mentioned this clause of his obligation to him, and asked him what he thought of preachers taking such an obligation as that. He said "There are thousands of preachers who have taken that obligation."

If there is a judge in the audience who is ignorant of the beauties of Freemasonry he may see how the Masonic juryman's obligation requires him to "hang the jury," or in some way defeat the ends of justice toward his worthy brother criminal at the bar. And if the judge be an honest man, what must he think of leaving it optional with the Master Mason to conceal the murder and treason of worthy Master Masons, and binding a man, under penalty of having his bowels burned to ashes, to conceal all the crimes of his worthy brethren except murder and treason.

But it may be said, he is told by the fraternity before he takes the obligation that there is nothing in the obligation to conflict with his duty to God or man. I think it is ex President John Quincy Adams who says that he has read of a pirate who instructed his men under oath and penalty to seize all the ships they could on the high seas, take all its valuables out, murder all the crew, leaving not one to tell the tale; scuttle and sink the ship. And at the same time told them to be sure they did nothing to violate the laws of God or nations.

But our Masonic orator and pastor is a Royal Arch Mason. And as testified by the Le Roy convention and every ex-Royal Arch Mason I know, he is bound as follows:

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will aid and assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty, and espouse his cause, so far as to extricate him from the same, if in my power WHETHER HE BE RIGHT OR WRONG."

"Furthermore do I promise and swear, that a companion Royal Arch Mason's secrets, given me in charge as such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason not excepted (or without exception) binding myself under no less penalty than that of having my skull smote off and my brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun should I ever knowingly or wilfully violate or transgress any part of this my solemn oath or obligation of a Royal Arch Mason. So help me God and keep me steadfast in the performance of the same."—Bernard's Light on Masonry page 130.

If the above stated principles of Freemasonry do not break down any oration on the beauties of Freemasonry in a Christian community then there is no real and proper distinction between right and wrong; and the sentiment that might is right does indeed prevail. And that selfish monster, Freemasonry, must be met on other grounds than righteousness. But there is a real and proper distinction between right and wrong, and there are men in every civilized Christian community capable of appreciating that distinction and conscious that however weak the right may seem to be as against the wrong, God is with the right.

WILLIAM FENTON.

SAVE THE YOUNG MEN.

Fellow citizens! Wake up. A national stupor is upon you. The Pharisees and even the populace of our land, when they dare speak at all of that sly empire now nestling in our midst, do it with bated breath and apparently in fear. Your noble sons, too, throughout America are being wheedled into sly garrets, and while there (stripped and in shameful duress) they are bound in death penalties by slavish oaths, forced on them by clannish masters to serve in those dens as waiters and lackeys for life. Will you any longer intentionally hold your sons in ignorance of such danger? Again I say, in the name of honor and of humanity, wake up from this world-wide torpor and show our sons their danger. Tell them just what is done in the lodge, and they, as is already proven in various places, will protect their own freedom. But if we wilfully keep them in ignorance, whether to please clansmen or to escape their vengeance, Heaven will force us to trial and perhaps to bitter condemnation.

ENOCH HONEYWELL.

WALKS AND TALKS.

Comfortably seated at his desk a muscular man looked up as the stranger approached him. After other matters had been referred to, a trinket on the vest attracted the stranger's notice and he said, "What's that?"

I'm a Mason.

How far have you got?

Master Mason.

Are you a church member?

No. I don't go to any church.

Brought up to none?

O, yes! Presbyterian.

And now you think Masonry a good enough religion, do you?

If a man's a good Mason he is a good Christian.

He need not be a Christian at all to be a Mason.

Masons believe the Bible, you know. Masonry begun in the time of King Solomon.

But the Koran is as good as the Bible for the trestle-board, and Mohammedans may be as good Masons as Christians can be. Every Mason must believe in the true God.

Do you believe in Christ?

I think he was only a man.

He was the Son of God. In him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhaed. He manifested God to man, and showed man what he ought to be, and how he should live. No Mason ever lived so pure a life as he.

This was too much for the hearer, who arose, exclaiming as he walked off, "Pshaw! There's no use talking so to me. I don't believe anything of that sort."

If the Masonic lodge thus makes men prefer it to their church how can Christians, how dare they as Christians attempt to worship God as Masons—or in two different ways when one only is the right one—and that is only through Christ, whose name is ignored by Blue Lodge Masonry. H.

TWO WAYS TO HEAVEN.

WHEATON, Ill., Aug. 15, 1879.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CYNOSURE:—The unchristian and disloyal character of the Masonic lodge is too well known to need additional proofs. But if my testimony or opinion on the subject will be valuable to any of the readers of your paper, I will be glad to benefit such by expressing my thoughts on the subject.

If Freemasonry is not a religion what evil can be greater than an institution whose own members testify that most Masons would give up their Christianity before they would their Masonry. I know of a county school superintendent who is a Mason, and thus testifies, also others. But if Freemasonry is a religion, the lodge is full of hypocrites; for Masons who are members of Christian churches say, as Christians, that there is but one road to heaven, but as Masons that they have found another.

Those who find in Masonry the only road to heaven, are associated with these men and worship an unknown god. "He that hateth me, hateth my Father also." (John 15: 23) S.

NOT THE AMOUNT OF WATER.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The sermons give a new interest to your paper. The last on Christians not being called by the names of Paul or Apollos, etc., was generally excellent, as they all are; but would you allow me a word or two on one point, viz., baptism?

I have read a good deal on this subject, and in this sermon for the first time have seen it put as a question on the quantity of water! No, sir; but rather I fancy it is as Prof. Francis L Patton, the distinguished Presbyterian victor over Swing, in effect puts it; whether as sprinklers say, it is a symbol of the descent of the Holy Spirit; or, as immersers say it is the symbol of the burial and resurrection of Christ and the believer's act of faith in the fact. I don't discuss the point, but think with the Apostle Paul in Rom. 6: 4 and Col. 2: 12. Yours, T. H.

OUR MAIL.

A. W. Johnston, Bloomington, Ind., writes:

"I have given out a great many copies of the Cynosure. I think we are gaining ground."

J. H. Crumrine, Moscow, Idaho Ter., writes:

"I know the sinfulness of secret societies. I must inform others on the subject."

Thos. Gibb, Dora, Ind, writes:

"I will be obliged to lay in another stock of anti-secrecy books. Some four or five of mine have disappeared lately. I have them loaned out nearly all the time. When in I keep them on the shelves of the store very carefully. Have done so for years. * * We want them in constant circulation among the reading public."

A gentleman at Eagle, Cass county, Neb., seeing a notice of "Freemasonry Illustrated" with an analysis by Pres. J. Blanchard, in a cotemporary journal, sends for it and writes:

"Have read many publications on Freemasonry and am very anxious to read this as he (Pres. Blanchard) is a forcible and terse writer."

L. L. Thompson, DeRuyter, N. Y., sends for some anti-secret publications and writes:

"Our people here, many of them, are really ignorant on the subject of Masonry and many more are wilfully ignorant. I want to enlighten them."

Mrs. A. A. Johnson, Chicopee Falls, Mass., writes:

"We like your paper very much. We read and lend it. Intend to keep it moving. We thank the Lord that he has sent us a free minister this year. One who dares to preach the Gospel in all its purity. He condemns sin in all forms, Masonry not excepted."

Simeon Brink, Le Raysville, Iowa, writes:

"I large bundle of tracts I received while visiting in Belvidere, Ill., I distributed there and on my way home. Afterwards on Decoration days distributed them through the cemetery. The secret fraternity felt indignant and very much imposed upon. But truth was not born to die. It will surely be victorious. I would like to have the appeal of Father Preston published in every issue for three months. I am an old man in my eighty-first year and know that what I do must be done quickly. By the assisting grace of God I mean to do all I can to make known the pernicious effects of Masonry."

Thos. C. Haines, Glencoe, Oregon, who has been distributing tracts, writes:

"I have tried to do the best I could and have sent some by mail, they have been scattered near and far. I find the work a real pleasure as well as a source of practical and experimental knowledge and a spiritual good to my own soul as I do it for the Lord and the good of my fellowmen. I am not able to be away from home much but it seemed as if the Lord just worked everything to my hand so I met and gave tracts to county judge, assessor, preachers and many more beside my near neighbors. * * The Cynosure I like much. We take nine papers and I would rather give up any other one although we have aimed to take only the best of papers. I hope if the Lord gives me health sufficient to some day do some public speaking."

We trust that you will go on from strength to strength.

D. D. Hayden, Watkins, Iowa, writes:

"I am going to travel and attend conferences and do some lecture work in this and other counties of this and other States, and would be glad to have a lot of reform tracts to distribute. I will also try and send a club for the invincible Cynosure. * * I hope to aid the tract work soon and renew my efforts in this reform."

Obed Brooks, Harwich, Mass., writes:

"I rejoice in your cause and approve of your course."

John D. Nutting, of the American Freeman, Albany, Mo., writes:

"Prospects for a good fall's work in the cause are exceedingly gratifying."

A brother at Sandwich, Ill., sends for "Freemasonry Illustrated" and writes:

"I am a Baptist minister out of a pastorate and an uncompromising Anti-mason. I wish this book for the sole purpose of using it to spread light and oppose Masonry, in the Baptist church and out of it."

LESSON XXXVI. — Sept. 7, 1879.— THE COMING OF THE LORD.

SCRIPTURE.—1 Thess. 4: 13-18.

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. |
14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with
15 him. | For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which
16 are asleep. | For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead
17 in Christ shall rise first: | then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.
18 Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 17.

INTRODUCTORY.

When Paul was at Thessalonica he preached of Jesus and his kingdom, Acts 17: 1-7. Some believers seem to have so misunderstood him as to fear that their dead friends might fail of receiving the blessings of the coming kingdom as those would who remained alive. Paul corrects this error, and shows how the dead in Christ and believers alive at his coming, shall share alike in the glory of his kingdom.

GENERAL NOTES.

13. "Not have you to be ignorant." We are to remember that those to whom the apostle now wrote had been recently converted from heathenism; that they had enjoyed his teachings but a short time; that they had few or no books on the subject of religion; and that they were surrounded by those who had no faith in the doctrine of the resurrection.—Barnes.

"Concerning them which are asleep." Concerning those who have died in Christ and who are resting in a long, sweet sleep, from which they shall surely be awakened by their Saviour.

"Which have no hope"—in the resurrection of the dead, but think them dead forever.

15. "Shall not prevent them." Shall not hinder them from going first.

16. "The dead in Christ." Those who die believing in Christ.

"Archangel." The chief angel.

17. "We which are alive and remain." Those Christians who are alive at the time of Christ's coming.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

Where in the Bible is the earliest mention of death under the figure of sleep? When death came upon mankind, how long was it declared that man's sorrow should continue? What passage mentions Jesus' resurrection as proof that he was the Son of God? In what sense are Christians before their death risen with Christ? and what passage shows their duty? What is to be destroyed at the coming of the Lord? and how is its coming declared a counterfeit? Upon whom shall the Lord take vengeance at his coming? In what passage did an apostle warn his hearers not to be troubled by an immediate expectation of the day of the Lord?

[Notes from Jamieson, Fausset and Brown.]

13. The leading topic of Paul's preaching at Thessalonica having been the coming kingdom (Acts 17: 7), some perverted it into a cause for fear in respect to friends lately deceased, as if those would be excluded from the glory which those found alive alone should share. This error St. Paul here corrects (cf. ch. 5: 10).

"Them which are asleep."—The oldest MSS. read (present), "them which are sleeping:" the same as "the dead in Christ" (v. 16), to whose bodies (Daniel 12: 2, not their souls; Ecclesiastes, 12: 7; 2 Corinthians 5: 8) death is a calm and holy sleep, from which the resurrection shall awake them to glory. The word "cemetery" means a sleeping place. Observe, the glory and chief hope of the church are not to be realized at death, but at the Lord's coming; one is not to anticipate the other, but all are to be glorified together at Christ's coming (Colossians, 3: 4; Hebrews 11: 40). Death affects the mere individual; but the coming of Jesus the whole church; at death our souls are invisibly and individually with the Lord; at Christ's coming the whole church, with all its members, in body and soul, shall be visibly and collectively with him. As this is offered as a consolation to mourning relatives the mutual recognition of the saints at Christ's coming is hereby implied.

"That ye sorrow not, even as others"—Greek, "the rest;" all the rest of the world besides Christians. Not all natural mourning for dead friends is forbidden; for the Lord Jesus and Paul sinlessly gave way to it (John 11: 31, 33, 35; Philippians 2: 27). But sorrow as though there were "no hope," which indeed the heathen had not (Ephesians 2: 12); the Christian hope here meant is that of the resurrection. Cf. Psalm 16: 9, 11; 17: 15; 73: 24; Proverbs 14: 32, show that the Old Testament church though not having the hope so bright (Isaiah 38: 18, 19), yet had this hope. Contrast Catullus, 5: 4, "When once our brief day is set, we must sleep one everlasting night." The sepulchral inscriptions of heathen Thessalonica express the hopeless view taken as to those once dead; as Æschylus writes, "Of one once dead there is no resurrection." Whatever glimpses some heathen philosophers had of the existence of the soul after death, they had none whatever of the body (Acts 17: 18, 20, 32).

"Prevent"—i. e., anticipate. So far were the early Christians from regarding their departed brethren as anticipating them in entering glory that they needed to be assured that those who remain to the coming of the Lord "will not anticipate them that are asleep." The "we" means whichever of us are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord. The Spirit designed that believers in each successive age should live in continued expectation of the Lord's coming, not knowing but that they should be among those found alive at his coming (Matthew 24: 42). It is a sad fall from this blessed hope, that death is looked for by most men, rather than the coming of our Lord. Each successive generation in its time and place represents the generation which shall actually survive till his coming (Matthew 25: 13; Romans 13: 11; 1 Corinthians 15: 51; James 5: 9; 1 Peter 4: 5, 6). The Spirit subsequently revealed by Paul that which is not inconsistent with the expectation here taught of the Lord's coming at any time, namely, that his coming would not be until there should be a "falling away first" (2 Thessalonians 2: 2, 3); but as symptoms of this soon appeared, none could say but that still this precursory event might be realized, and so the Lord come in his day. Each successive revelation fills in the details of the general outline first given. So Paul subsequently, whilst still looking mainly for the Lord's coming to clothe him with his body from heaven, looks for going to be with Christ in the meanwhile (2 Corinthians 5: 1-10; Philippians 1: 6, 23; 3: 20, 21; 4: 5.) Edmunds well says, The "we" is an affectionate identifying of ourselves with our fellows of all ages, as members of the same body, under the same Head, Christ Jesus. So Hosea, 12: 4, "God spake with us in Bethel," i. e., with Israel. "We did rejoice," i. e., Israel at the Red Sea (Psalm 66: 6). Though neither Hosea nor David were alive at the times referred to, yet each identifies himself with those that were present.

He who preaches most of Christ to sinners may expect to preach most sinners to Christ.

Teach a man what he is, and he will be what he ought to be.—Schelling.

Sleeping in Church in the Olden Time.

It was more than two hundred years ago, in the year 1646, that the Rev. Dr. Samuel Whiting was a minister in Lynn, Mass. At that time one Obadiah Turner kept a journal, and wrote therein as follows: "1646, June ye 3d: Allen Brydges hath bin chosen to wake ye sleepers in meeting, and being much proud of his place must need have a fox taile fixed to ye end of a long staff wherewith he may brush the face of them yt will have naps in time of discourse; likewise a sharp thorn wherewith he may prick such as be moste sounde. On ye last Lord his day, as he strutted about ye meeting house, he did spy Mr. Tomlins sleeping with much comforte, his head kept steadie by being in ye corner, and hand grasping ye rail. And soe spying, Allen did quicklie thrust his staff behind Dame Ballond and gave him a grievous prick upon ye hand. Whereupon Mr. Tomlins did spring upp much above ye floor, and with terrible force strike his hand against ye wall, and also to ye great wonder of all, prophanlie exclaim in a loud voice, 'Cuss the woodchuck,' he dreaming, as it seemed, yt a woodchuck had seized and bit his hand, But on coming to know where he was, and ye great scandal he had committed, he seemed much abashed, but did not speake. And I think he will not soon againe go to sleepie in meeting. Ye women may sometimes sleepie and none know it by reason of their enormous bonnets. Mr. Whiting doth pleasantlie say yt from ye pulpit he doth seem to be preaching to stacks of straw, with men jotting here and there among them."

Be Honest.

I tell you, brethren, be honest in your dealings; take no advantage, even of a child. Be conscientious in your bargains. Have a single eye and a single heart. Seek not to be shrewd. Be not ashamed to be called simple. And let me tell you a secret, which ought not to be a secret, seeing it is written in the Scriptures, that your whole body will then be full of light; and this in every kind; you will actually see further, and see clearer, than shrewd and cunning men; and you will be less liable to be duped than they, provided you add to this another part of character which is proper to an honest man—namely a resolution to protect honesty and to discountenance every kind of fraud. A cunning man is never a firm man; but an honest man is; a double-minded man is always unstable; a man of faith is firm as a rock. I tell you there is a sacred connection between honesty and faith: honesty is faith applied to worldly things, and faith is honesty quickened by the Spirit to the use of heavenly things.—Edward Irving.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUG. 28, 1879.

"THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS."

If the Religious Telescope had never printed more than the single paragraph in condemnation of lodgery here quoted, the churches of America would owe it profound gratitude for thus clearly pointing out the great danger to their peace and obstacle to the reign of Christ:

ROME AND SECRECY.—The Roman Catholic church has long pretended to be carrying on a war against all secret societies. But within the past few years there have been evidences that it is not sincere in this opposition. In one case a prominent authority of that church decided that members of secret societies might join his church if they would not withhold their secrets in the confessional. Now Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore, through his organ, the Catholic Mirror, makes the following surprising concession: "What keeps some Freemasons from joining the Catholic church is an idea that they will have to disclose the grips, signs and other secrets of the craft to the priest in confession. Their fear is unfounded—the confessor will ask them nothing about things which are not sinful, and will give way to no curiosity about irrelevant matters." It is no longer to be doubted that the Romish church will take the lead in all systematic secret doings, and will unite in itself every element of the same kind. The combined powers thus brought into one will be the "beast" which will afflict the true people of God.

Again we thank Prof. Tobey in the name of all who follow our Lord in sincerity for these words which read like a divine inspiration. For years the Cynosure has been besought by good brethren to deal gently with Romanism, since that system was equally with us opposing the lodge. This mistake will seem the greater as time develops the character of the false worships of earth. Many individual Catholics oppose the lodges, believing this to be the teaching of their priests; but the papal system is none other than "the mother of [spiritual] harlots and the abominations of the earth's as named by the Holy Spirit. A valued exchange before us repeats this mistaken idea: "The Roman Catholic church condemns all secret orders and excludes their members from her communion." For years the Ancient Order of Hibernians have enjoyed the favor of the priests and bishops of Rome. This was the Molly Maguire order in Pennsylvania. Archbishop Purcell gave them his benediction at a late meeting in Cincinnati. There are other secret orders existing under the patronage of the priesthood, and in a sense controlled by them, and there is no objection to Masonry when it ceases to be under the control of atheists as in France, Italy, and Brazil. The lodge in these lands is as little pleased with Protestantism as with the Pope, and would as quickly make war upon one as the other. The long ascendancy of Romanism in these countries, with its characteristic abuses has given the lodge the advantage of a popular attack; but essentially the two are but parts of the one great system of strange worships, which must unite so soon as the power of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus shall make manifest their dark natures, for that which doth make them manifest is the light which is the life of men.

The proffer of Archbishop Gibbons is in the very spirit of Jesuitry. That which has always been understood to be the point of difficulty between Romanism and Freemasonry is apparently yielded, but it is a concession to bring all under the control of a false priesthood. The words of the Telescope deserve to be repeated with emphasis: "It is no longer to be doubted that the Romish church will take the lead in all systematic secret doings, and will unite in itself every element of the same kind. THE COMBINED POWERS THUS BROUGHT INTO ONE WILL BE THE 'BEAST' WHICH WILL AFFLICT THE TRUE PEOPLE OF GOD."

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES.

The Religious Telescope had a late instructive editorial on the Phi Beta Kappa and skepticism. Edward E. Hale in the Atlantic Monthly sketches the history of this college order whose charter is of much the same stuff with the constitution of the "Illuminati" of France whose dreadful doctrines opened the way for the no less dreadful scenes of the Revolution. Tom Paine was a prominent member of this college society. Mr. Hale tells how this student lodge went down with the rest in the Morgan times:

"Half a century after this union of the wise and virtuous of the American colleges, William Morgan was killed in 1826, and his body thrown into the river at Niagara. You would say at first that this had nothing to do with Phi Beta Kappa. But that is your mistake. The storm of indignation which Morgan's death aroused created the Anti-masonic party and the general crusade against secret societies. Poor Phi Beta Kappa was called on to give up such secrets as she had, and did so. After a series of exciting meetings held in Boston, under the eager pressure of John Quincy Adams,—from whose diary most of the history of the transaction can be learned,—the Harvard Alpha [of the Phi Beta] voted to remit all obligations to secrecy."

The peculiar religious views of the young divinity student who carried this fraternity from William and Mary College in Virginia to Yale and Harvard in New England are brought forward for criticism, and give the Telescope just occasion to remark on these orders as a fruitful source of scepticism, thus:

"There is much speculation now with regard to the skepticism of the times, which is especially found among the literary and cultured; but when we examine into the history, teachings, and membership of leading and influential societies to which men belong—societies embracing "the wise and virtuous of every degree and of whatever country"—the skepticism so much lamented is not a matter of wonder. We see how the Christian doctrines are all tainted, corrupted, and rendered worthless by contact with the blighting atmosphere of these societies. These doctrines thus corrupted become the standard teaching of popular pulpits and the beliefs of the pews. These societies creep into the colleges of the land, and from such atmosphere come the preachers and the educated laymen of most churches. Can we wonder at skepticism and powerless Christianity?"

THE COLORED LODGES.

No fact or argument can be more convincing of the necessity of immediate and faithful work among the colored people than the evidence that the lodge is rapidly absorbing the more intelligent and influential blacks, North and South. The letters we have lately published give glimpses of the South. Here we read reports of a meeting of colored Knights Templar for the jurisdiction of the Ohio valley meeting at Indianapolis, August 14th, with its parade of grandiloquent titles in servile imitation of the folly of the whites. This meeting represented sixteen commanderies with about 400 members, an increase of fifty during the year past. These black Knights have also their manual of arms and held a prize drill to close their meeting.

A week or two since a convention was held at the Olivet Baptist church in this city, R. DeBaptiste, pastor, with the strange title of "Grand Congress of the Knights of Tabor and Daughters of the Tabernacle." this was their seventh annual session, although the society claims to have originated in 1855, which may be accepted as somewhat traditional. This secret order numbers some 1,500 colored people of both sexes, who think themselves happy in being able to call each other by such names as "Grand Chief Mentor," "Grand Chief Drillmaster," Scribe, etc.; and on the female side of the house, "Grand Chief Preceptress," "Chief Grand Priestess," etc.—think of a Chicago lady calling up her cook in the morning, "Grand Chief Outer Sentinel Dinah, put the kettle on!" About one hundred persons were at this meeting from Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas. Three days were spent in looking after the silly lodge details, which closed with a street march and a public installation in which the men were arrayed in broad collars of green silk studded with silver stars, the women were clad in white with pink sashes and tippets and were topped out with gilt mitres! After all this fantastic display, what is the outcome? what good is proposed for their suffering race? Nothing, so far as their proceedings are permitted to see the light. The spirit of the lodge is marked in the utter selfishness of the order. It professes to be a "secret benevolent society"—like all the rest, burying the dead, providing for the sick, etc. How shallow the pretence! When so many hundreds of their kin are suffering and dying at the South, their self-centered benevolence embraces the 1500 who have taken their lodge oath and paid their lodge fee.

These facts appeal to every friend of the black man to use every effort to enlighten them on these great questions respecting the lodge and its false systems of benevolence and religion. Every volunteer missionary like Bro. Tapley should be sustained, as well as the other agencies which maintain the Gospel in its integrity against these strange Jeroboam worships in which this devout but ignorant people are being entangled.

—Secretary Stoddard started Monday morning for Warren, Illinois, where he assisted Elders Rathbun and Browne in the expositions and in organizing a county association. He expects also to be at Nora, the next station east of Warren, with the same brethren. Next week the Wisconsin State meeting opens the fall campaign in earnest, and from thence his headquarters will be "on horseback" until January. Do the brethren remember to pray for these State conventions now opening?—do they prevail in prayer? There can be no success without such calling upon God.

—Bro. J. T. Michael of Milford, N. J., lectured at Everettstown in that State on Friday evening of last week on the anti-Christian character of Freemasonry. This is the home of A. G. Miller, the local preacher lately suspended by his quarterly conference for opposition to the lodge.

—Elder Parker Hurless of the Rock River conference of the United Brethren church is deeply realizing how thoroughly the god of this world blindeth the minds of even good men. The account of the attempted excommunication of himself and his colleague, Elder Grimm, which is reprinted from the Christian Radical in our religious news columns, shows a strange and perverse folly on the part of some members of the United Brethren church at Polo, hardly surpassed by the adherents of the Wheaton ex parte council. This case and that of the Chambersburg, Pa., church ought to be enough to show to the whole body of U. B. churches whither the policy of the Itinerant and its "nullification" party is drifting. None rejoice in any of their apparent successes but wicked men and Masons; and the churches and conferences can hope for no peace or rest until these efforts to dethrone Christ in his church, to rend his body, to despoil his Bride, entirely cease, and the zeal of the people of God be given to putting down Satan's revolt against the kingdom of Christ.

—We are accustomed to read with astonishment and indignation the stories of Huss, of the Covenanters and of the Non-conformists, while we wonder if men could ever have really been so blinded and vindictive. But the curse of persecution is inherent in every religious organization given over to ecclesiasticism or to devil worship. The New Jersey Methodist Episcopal conferences seem to be as much devoted to the former as the lodge is to the strange worship. Bro. J. T. Michael's letter came just at the last moment to secure insertion this week. It deserves special attention and will suggest several questions to every reader, and among them whether the animating spirit of these conferences is not as near as second cousin to the inqusition at Madrid? Let Bro. Michael's pamphlet circulate by the thousand.

—Notice of the decease of Rev. Isaac Norton, and old friend of our reform, has just been received. Secretary Stoddard has promised a more full notice for next week.

—Rev. J. M. Kent, president of the Iowa Christian Association, has been confined to his bed with fever for some two weeks. He is convalescent and hopes to be in good strength to open the State meeting at Morning Sun, September 16th.

—The Anti-masons of Carroll county, Ill., lately nominated a candidate for clerk of the circuit court. The Christian Radical is justly dissatisfied that he received but 146 votes. In his own township, however, he received a majority, which is a good recommendation. The Radical has a word of rebuke for many voters who are professed opponents of the lodge, yet voted for an avowed Mason.

—We had the pleasure last Thursday of a short call from Bro. Alexander Thompson, a poetical contributor to our columns of genuine merit. Bro. Thompson is an old resident of Wheaton, where he retains his relation with the College church, but has been living for a year in Manitoulin Island in Lake Huron for his health. He represents the Orange society strong there and through all Canada, being as prominent among the lodges as Freemasonry is with us. He has maintained a firm testimony against secretism and has met much opposition.

—The Gospel Preacher of Ashland, Ohio, is one of the organs of the German Baptist or Tunker church, started during the past year. It is conducted with ability and discretion and with a commendable fearlessness for the truth, as several quotations from it in these columns has shown. From such a source we are always glad to receive such commendatory notices as this:

"The Christian Cynosure, published in Chicago, Illinois, comes to our table this week filled with excellent matter. It is the leading anti-secret journal of America, ha an extensive circulation and is ably edited. Its attacks on Masonry are evidently intended to fulfill the Scriptural injunction: 'What thy hand findeth to do, do with all thy might.' Its stinging blows are having their effect and we trust will be the means of shedding light in all the dark places of our land."

—Rev. C. C. Kellogg of the U. B. church, Juniata, Neb., has given to the readers of the Telescope the valuable testimony of Dr. I. Wayne Snowden of San Jose, Cal., which is in these words: "I am decidedly of the opinion that secret societies are a detriment to pure-minded Christians, and they should abstain from them. I speak understandingly, for I have been through nearly all, from a Son of Temperance up to Odd-fellowship and Royal Arch Masonry. The church will amply cover the ground, and more too, if it is lived up to as it should be." Dr. Snowden is mentioned as a wise man and eminent Christian worker.

—One of the strange and most unfortunate mistakes of the press telegrams last week, was the report of the death of Mrs. Sartoris, daughter of ex-President Grant. It was another Mrs. Sartoris; but the dispatches for two days told a doleful story, giving all the particulars and deceiving the editors into leaders full of grief and condolence.

The Work for Free Missions.

TONICA, Ill., Aug. 18, 1879.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—Putnam county and the Western part of Lasalle county, Illinois, were settled by a people embued with a spirit of radical Christianity. It was here that Benjamin Lundy started his Genius of Universal Emancipation, which was printed at Hennepin and published at Lowell. Here Z Eastman, formerly of the Western Citizen, commenced his work as the assistant and co-laborer of Lundy, and here some of the first victories in the cause of reform were achieved. The old Abolitionists, true to their instinctive love of freedom are all Anti-masons, and though some of them have emigrated, and some gone "over the river," still there are many who in their old age are doing battle for the right.

Five years ago I was privileged to speak in this place in the Congregational church then under the care of Bro. Avery, now of College Springs, Iowa, and a year later I made a canvass of Putnam county. On returning here I am surprised and rejoiced at the progress of the brethren and of public opinion in the right direction. It reminded me of a similar change on the slavery question. I went to Africa in 1860, and my neighbors then would have been quite unwilling to be called Abolitionists. When I came back in 1866 they gloried in the name. I had the privilege of preaching in the Congregational church at Mt. Palatine on Sabbath morning and in the evening for Prof. Bailey in the Congregational church here. In each case the people expected as a matter of course to hear some condemnation of the lodge.

On Saturday, the 16th, there was a meeting here of the Hope Township Christian Association opposed to secret societies. The special object of the meeting was to make arrangements for the employment of a missionary who should labor in this vicinity as a lecturer and preacher of the Gospel of reform. It was agreed to employ such a missionary and to undertake to raise for his support $400. About $300 were conditionally pledged at the meeting. There is a wide and promising field for such a mission work and my prayer is that the Lord will send the right man to reap the rich harvest.

Prof. Bailey is highly prized as preacher and pastor by all the people, notwithstanding he is an outspoken and earnest reformer. He came here with his good wife to spend his college vacation and to work for the Lord. May he and the people be abundantly blessed.

Yours in the Lord,
H. H. HINMAN.

A Word to Lovers of Truth.

In St. Paul's M. E. church, Jersey City, N. J., on August 12th, before a committee composed of members of the Newark conference, I was tried for "disloyalty to the forms and usages of the M. E. church." The three specifications that accompanied this charge were declared sustained and that these sustained the charge.

As considerable space has already been given to a report of Bro. Miller's trial, and as I hope to publish mine in a more permanent form, I will only ask for room to notice a single act of this ecclesiastical farce, and to make a proposition which, I trust, will be interesting to all lovers of our reform.

The second specification was as follows:

"By sowing dissension and creating dissatisfaction within the church by issuing a printed tract entitled, 'Some Differences between the Discipline and Practices of the M. E. church,' and by the public announcement and delivery of a lecture in the town hall at Frenchtown, on Tuesday evening, June 10, in which the M. E. church was arraigned and its Discipline criticised."

The fact that my tract was used to prove that I was disloyal "to the forms and usages of the M. E. church," shows to what extremes the devil will go in order to accomplish his purpose, and how completely he can blind those who submit to his sway. If that tract is evidence of disloyalty then I am disloyal, and I thank God that I am. The only witness introduced by the prosecution in reference to the lecture was Rev. Mr. Runyan. He testified that I spoke in the highest terms of the doctrines and Discipline, and that it was not the rules but the violation of them of which I complained. When cross-examined by me he expressly stated that I did not criticise the Discipline. So apparent was this that my accuser offered, with my consent, to change the last part of the specification. Of course I objected. Notwithstanding all this the committee declared that the entire specification was sustained, only one vote being cast in the negative. This action is so outrageous that I suppose many who read the statement will doubt its truthfulness.

A PROPOSITION.

I want to publish a pamphlet entitled "Report of the Trials of Rev. A. G. Miller and Rev. J. T. Michael, with an Account of their Work in the Ministry of the M. E. Church." It will be a valuable book to put into the hands of those who are seeking for the truth, and will make revelations which the devil hopes will never see the light. It will contain about one hundred pages, and will be bound in neat paper covers. To insure its issue I must get a requisite number of subscribers. I want your names now, and your money when the book is ready for delivery. Persons ordering before publication, will be supplied at the rate of ten copies for one dollar, or two copies for 25 cents, postage or expressage extra. Please send your names at once. Address

Literary Notices.

The Library Magazine has republished a number of valuable review articles in its late issues. Such papers as that of Gladstone on "Greece and the Treaty of Berlin"; "Benjamin Franklin" by Thomas Hughes; "Drunkenenness in England" by John B. Gough, and others are popular and interesting. The American Book Exchange, publishers, 55 Beekman street, New York.

The popular articles in the North American Review for September are "Intrigues at the Paris Canal Congress" and "The Diary of a Public Man." The first is an exposure of the intrigues of the adventurers who used DeLesseps influence and called the Congress for the purpose of filling their own pockets. The article is timely and will be widely read on this side of the water. The second opens to the excitement, planning and interviewing that surrounded Lincoln during the week before his first inaugural in 1861. The Diary deals freely with the names of public men now dead, and in fairness the name of the author should accompany his opinions. Other articles are a critical paper by Anthony Trollope on "The Genius of Nathaniel Hawthorne;" "The Standard of Value," by Prof. Newcomb; the conclusion of Wagner's "Mission of My Life;" "The Confession of an Agnostic," in which the Evolutionists are attacked in a vein of subtle irony.

—The catalogue of the thirteenth annual fair of Gentry county, Missouri, is before us. Our thanks are due to Needles & Nutting of the American Freeman for the compliment. The printing done on their press, shows a proficiency seldom obtained in a country office where facilities are few. For taste and execution we say, Well done!

An Evening Hymn.

BY J. G. MATTOON.

Another day is passed and gone,
Another evening's come;
The wheels of time still bear me on
To my eternal home.

The twilight of each dying day
Still whispers in my ear,
Thou too, O man, must pass away;
Why lay up treasures here?

Another station now is passed,
Another warning given;
Prepare to meet thy God at last,
Prepare, prepare for heaven.

So when death's shades around me fall
From out the gathering gloom,
O may I hear my Saviour's call,
Servant, well done, come home.

West Unity, O., July 30, 1879.

Why was not Aaron Burr Converted.

Prof. Phelps of Andover Seminary, has recently referred to this matter in the Congregationalist. He says:

A revival of great power occurred while Aaron Burr was in Princeton college. It was in his senior year—the period in which the approach of the responsibilities of manhood has become blessed of God to the conversion of so many educated men. Burr acknowledged his interest in the movement which had aroused his companions. He confessed that he felt the weight of his godly ancestry upon his conscience. As the son of parents of illustrious piety, he was appealed to by the friends of the revival to give his heart to Christ.

With what degree of wisdom he was approached, can not now be known. The revival, like others of that age was, doubtless, not free from some objectionable features. The theology of the age was not a well balanced theology. The usages of the pulpit were not well rounded. Appeals to the fears of men were disproportionate to the preaching of the milder aspect of the Gospel. It was an age, also, of revolutionary awakenings. The political eloquence of those times, shows that profound passions were stirring in the popular heart. They were soon to break out in bloodshed. It is not unphilosophical that religious awakenings should have taken some coloring from the political indignation underneath. Yet those awakenings may have been none the less the work of God, for that.

Dr. Witherspoon, the president of Princeton College, unqualifiedly condemned the excitement which he said was then "raging" in the college. He told Burr that it was all "fanaticism," that it was "wildfire," and that it would soon die out. Specially he taught his trusting pupil that an educated man should not permit his mind to be agitated by such scenes. We can readily imagine the positive and severe terms in which a man like Dr. Witherspoon, the lineal descendant of John Knox, and as honest as he was in his life-long convictions, would be likely to heap upon the movement his denunciations and his scorn.

Burr's biographer tells us the result of the interview in a few words—"he went away relieved." Relieved of what? As the event proved, he was relieved of his wakened conscience; relieved of his convictions of sin; relieved of his aspirations after a higher life; relieved of the strivings of God's Spirit. It is not known that he ever again was profoundly awakened to the worth and peril of his soul. On that subject he became a very silent man. So far as his life discovered to observers the secret workings of his mind, he never again approached so near to heaven. Then began the downward career, in which he abandoned the faith of his youth, alienated himself from the church of his fathers, deliberately stepped out of the line of a godly inheritance, and gave up a spiritual birthright such as few other men ever had. In a little more than thirty years from that time he was a murderer.

Who can say that the catastrophe of that ruined life was not due, in part, to those sweeping denunciations by Dr. Witherspoon of that religious awakening? In that revival, whatever else was true of it, some men of intelligence and culture were converted, who became shining lights in the church, and ornaments to her ministry. Who shall in the last day give answer to the question, "Why was not Aaron Burr one of them?".—Baptist Weekly.

Daniel Quorm on Preaching.

Well, Cap'n Joe, my advice to everybody is this: Don't you preach if you can help it. 'Tisn't enough for a man to want to preach. Nor yet for a man to fancy that he could preach. If that was all, good preachers would be as common as blackberries. An' 'tisn't enough for other folks to think that a man's got a call to preach either; though there is something in that. No; afore ever a man have got any business in the pulpit, he must feel like it was 'long with Jeremiah the prophet. You know, he thought he'd give up preachin', and take his name off the plan. 'I will not make mention of Him, nor speak any more His name;' that is what he said. An' if a man can hold his tongue an' be comfortable about it, 'tis the best thing he can do; there's gabble an' cackle enough in the world a'ready, with what geese an' other folks. But, bless 'ee! Jeremiah could no more hold his tongue than he could fly. 'His word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay.' There, when a man do feel like that, he'll preach somehow, he must. An' if a man have never felt like that, well, the heavenly Father may have meant him for a decent shoemaker, Cap'n Joe, or a carpenter, or somethin' o' that sort; but he never was meant for a preacher 't all, an' nobody could make a preacher out of him either.

"Why, you can tell 'em in a minute—a'most before they open their their mouths; for there's nothing in this world that's further off from each other than them two,—the preacher that men do make and the preacher that is sent by God. I've noticed that the old prophets always had 'a burden' afore they spoke. Like as if the message o' the Lord laid heavy upon 'em, an' pressed 'em day an' night. That's the difference, Cap'n Joe, between men that can preach an' men that can't. The prophet that is come from the Lord do feel the truth all over him. It do take up all his thoughts, an' do press upon his heart, givin' him a thrill o' joy in it his own self, or else making him tremble at it with very fear. It'll be ringin' in his ears day an' night, a' followin' him wherever he goes, an' whatever he's a-doin' of. Why, when the Word o' the Lord comes 'pon me like that, I can't help hammerin' my shoes to the text that I got runnin' in my mind, an' stitchin' 'em with it, like as if it was the application. The very clock will keep tickin' it in my ears, an' a'most everything that I see do come to be mixed up with it. There 'tis, seemin' to me, the Word must be a burnin' fire shut up in a man's bones; an' then he'll preach, then he'll preach."—M. G. Pearse.

Let Them go Down.

Coaxing the devil to support the Gospel is a modern device. The primitive church knew nothing of it. When Paul was collecting funds to aid poor saints at Jerusalem, he used no fairs, festivals, "mum sociables," kissing games, or other sanctified snares, to accomplish his object. The Christians paid their own bills, and did not expect Satan to pay for the weapons which they used in warfare against him. When the devil does support a church, he does so in his own interest. He carries on his operations with a full knowledge of the fact that "a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand." For every dollar paid out of his coffers to the church, he receives full value. Church partnerships with the evil one never benefit the former, but always the latter. Hands off!

Untold harm comes to the church by the use of even questionable measures to raise money for the support of God's work. It creates the impression, in the minds of the worldly, that the church is a kind of parasite, dependent for its existence on the community, that it is a sort of genteel beggar, which it is proper and fashionable to support; that it is an object of charity, or even pity and contempt, which is grateful for the tolerance of the people that let it live. The ungodly regard such churches as engaged in seeking money rather than souls, and valuing wealthy members more than poor saints. To stand before the world in this light is humiliating and degrading beyond expression. Such churches ought to be cleansed or closed, cured or killed.

Churches that are doing the Lord's work, and are worth supporting, can be supported without the use of questionable means. Others deserve no support. Let them go down.—Evangelical Messenger.

Sayings by Josh Billings.

Inspiration always waits upon the busy. I have seen men sit down all day under a shade tree with a hoe in their hand, close to the edge of a corn-field, waiting to be inspired; but the weeds in that corn-field didn't wait for any inspiration.

Many people have no other way to succeed in this world but to pull others back, but the true way is to elevate others as high as we can, and then put ourselves above them.

The man whom praise always makes humble, is an ironclad.

If a man will tell me what he thinks of his neighbors, I can tell him what his neighbors think of him.

The more intelligent a man becomes the less he thinks of himself, and the more he thinks of others.

How many thousands there are who live out a whole life, and have nothing to prove it by, only that they have had the mumps, the measles, and perhaps the chicken-pox.

After all, there is very much which is called courage, which is nothing more than fear; we are afraid of being called cowards, and so we are very brave.

This world is full of heroes. I know thousands of them to-day, who are working hard for twelve dollars a week, to feed and clothe their wives and children.

An honest man is satisfied with the approval of his own conscience, while a simply honorable man often only looks to the world for his approval.

The man who can be familiar with every one he meets, and preserves their respect, and does not lose his own is a very uncommon character.

The man who has got so low down that he can't be flattered, has got so low down that he can't be abused.

A Scotchman has been counting the promises in the Bible, and reports that there are over 31,000 of them. That ought to be enough to meet all possible wants.—Ex.

Of Judge Grier this "personal" is related, of how he set aside the unjust verdict of a jury against an unpopular man. Said he: "Enter the verdict, Mr. Clerk. Enter, also, Set aside by the court. I want it understood that it takes thirteen men to steal a man's farm in this court."

What to Drink.

The lily drinks the sunlight,
The primrose drinks the dew,
The cowslip sips the running brook,
The hyacinth heaven's blue;
The peaches quaff the dawnlight,
The pears the autumn noon,
The apple blossoms drink the rain,
And the first warm air of June.

The windflower and the violet
Draw in the April breeze,
And sun and rain and hurricane
Are the tipple of the trees;
But not a bud or greenling
From the hyssop on the wall,
To the cedar of Mt. Lebanon,
Is steeped in alcohol.

From all earth's emerald basin,
From the blue sapphire bowl,
No living thing, of root or wing,
Partakes the deathly dole:
I'll quaff the lily's nectar,
I'll sip the cowslip's cup,
I'll drink the shower, the sun, the breeze,
But never a poisoned drop.

After Many Days.

David Bruce was a young artist in Philadelphia, nearly forty years ago. He painted portraits until he made money enough to take him to Rome for two or three years. When he came back, he had gained high and just ideas of art, and much technical skill. But very few people bought pictures forty years ago, and the times were as hard as they are now.

David, with his mother and sister to support, soon found himself without a dollar.

"I'll have to come to you for work," he said, bitterly enough, to his Uncle Ben, who was a carpenter. "I can drive a nail and handle a saw if I cannot paint pictures worth buying."

"Na, na, my lad. When ye've got a trade, stick til't," said the hard-faced old Scotchman. "Though I could wish ye had a decenter one! my own, far example."

So young Bruce contented himself with a diet of black bread and milk, to give his mother and little Jennie a full share of the provisions.

Matters were fast coming to an extremity. There was little but bread and water in the larder for anybody, when David received an offer of work from a manufacturer of wall-paper, who was in need of new designs.

His Uncle Ben brought the man to see him.

"Here's a rare chance for ye, lad. Mr. Jenkins will pay ye well, nae doot. My nephew has been for years learnin' his trade in the capitals of Europe," turning to the manufacturer, a red, pudgy little man. "Ye'll find he's fitted himself to design your paper to your satisfaction."

"Why, uncle," cried David red with rage, "I'm not a dauber of signs and wall-paper! I paint landscapes—great historical pictures."

"Ye're a fule!" whispered his uncle. "Have you a mind yer mither shall starve? You look at her thin cheeks yonner."

David glanced into the other room. He was very civil to his visitor after that, though secretly he gnashed his teeth with mortification.

"You must put your best touches on, Bruce," said the manufacturer. "I'm not easily pleased. I never pay for the first design, but if I approve it, I'll be a liberal patron."

"I imagine you'll be satisfied," said David, loftily.

The next day the carpenter came to see how the work progressed. "There are a half dozen designs. I dashed them off this morning, said David, indifferently.

Ben looked over them through his spectacles.

"I'm no judge of such matters. Are these good, David?"

"Good enough."

"Is it the best you can do?"

"Certainly not. Do you think I'd put my best work on wall paper? Did I go to Rome for that?"

"Dinna ye mind the good book says, 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might?' Naw, there's my journeyman, Jock Sawtree," laying the papers carefully in a pile on the table, "Jock says to me this mornin', 'Ben,' says he, 'why do you plane off the top planks of the perch as smooth as the bottom? It's a wasting time,' says he. 'Nobody'd know if you slighted them.' 'Jock,' says I; 'I'd know it.'"

David looked at the old man a minute, and then gathered up the designs and threw them into the fire. "You're a better artist than I," he said.

"I know naething aboot art, but I know what's honest," said Ben.

David spent the rest of the day on a design. It was the best he could do. In the evening he showed it to his mother and Jennie.

"My idea is the paper of a chamber, in which the occupant, waking from sleep, shall have a glimpse of the field outside."

The ground of the design was the pale blue of the air, against which waved long white grasses and white wild daisies, with here and there a joyous song sparrow, in flight, or poised to sing.

"It is the field where you used to play when you were a boy, David" cried his mother.

"I know, mother."

David had put so much feeling and his tenderest recollection into the sketch that he felt it must succeed. But the next day he received a curt note from the manufacturer, stating that he "could not feel justified in employing him. This design, being the first, was, of course, his property."

"So my best work is wasted," said David.

Several weeks later he saw in the window of the manufacturer in High street paper printed in his design. It sold rapidly. But the truth was the manufacturer chose to employ cheaper and inferior workmen.

The Wild Camels of Lob Nor.

The favorite home of the wild camel is the desert of Kum-Tag on the east of Lob-Nor. One of our native hunters told me that only 20 years ago he had seen herds of several dozen, sometimes even of more than 100, not far from where the village of Tsharchalyk is now. The old huntsman told me that during his life time he has shot, with an old crippled gun, more than 100 of them. As the population and the number of hunters increased, the camels wandered further east into the desert of Kum-Tag, which, on account of the scarcity of water, is entirely inaccessible to man. No one has ever penetrated it. Two bold hunters made an attempt, but after two days, during which they and their asses, carrying provisions, etc., had toiled knee-deep in the fine, drifting sand, parched and blinded with the dust, they returned, almost overcome with fatigue. In some seasons of very great heat, the camels are attracted by the coolness of the high valleys of the Altyn-Tag, and ascend as high as 11,000 or 12,000 feet. In contrast with the tame camel, whose characteristics are timidity, want of intelligence and apathy, the wild one is distinguished by a marvellous development of the senses, and great sagacity and acuteness. Huntsmen have assured me that under the wind they can scent a man at a distance of several versts (one verst is about two-thirds of an English mile) that they hear the slightest noise at an incredible distance, and that their visual organs are equally developed. When they suspect approaching danger they fly at once, and often run a hundred or more versts before stopping. I followed the trace of a camel which I missed for more than twenty versts, where it had turned into a ravine, which being altogether out of the way, I did not care to follow. It would seem that an animal so awkwardly built as the camel, would not be able to climb about the rugged Altyn-Tag, yet we observed, many at a time, their traces and dung leading into narrow crevices and on steep cliffs where the boldest man would shrink from following. it is, indeed, so strange a sight that I could scarcely trust my own eyes when I saw their trace mixed with that of the wild mountain sheep. The wild camel runs very fast, and would overtake at a long distance, a good race horse. The period of heat is in winter, from the middle of January until the end of February. During this time fierce combats often take place among the males, which not seldom end in the death of one of the rivals. The female conceives when three years old, and carries her young for little over a year. The hunters whom I had sent back to the mountains returned on the 10th of March with three beautiful specimens, a full-grown male, female and calf. The zoological distinctions between the wild and tame camel are not very great, and now the question arises whether the wild camel is the lineal progeny of wild parents, or is it descended from tame camels, which, having escaped from the discipline of man, have wandered away in the desert and become wild? It is my opinion that the former theory is the correct one. I think that the qualities which, in the struggle for existence, offer to the animal the best chances for self-preservation, are stongly developed in the wild camel. Their remarkably developed senses protect them against their principal enemies—man and the wolf. A wolf would scarcely be a match for a full-grown camel, and they have little to fear from man, on account of their acute eyes, ears, and scent, and their choice of abode in the most impenetrable localities. It is probable that the deserts of Lob-Nor have, from time immemorial, been the dwelling place of the wild camel. In former times they may have been scattered over a great space; at present they inhabit only the most remote and impenetrable corner of the Central Asian Desert.—The Oriental Church Magazine.

A little girl about four years old and a little boy about six had been cautioned not to take away the nest-egg; but one morning when they went for the eggs the little girl took it and started for the house. Her disappointed brother followed, crying: "Mother, mother, Susey's got the egg the old hen measures by!"

Cure for Hydrophobia.

I can give some facts which may be of use to somebody thereby giving life. The time between the biting of an animal by a mad dog and showing signs of hydrophobia is not less than nine days, but may be nine months. After the animal has become rabid, a bite or scratch with the teeth upon a person, or slobber coming in contact with a sore or raw place, would produce hydrophobia just as soon as though he had been bitten by a mad dog. Hydrophobia can be prevented, and I will give what I know to be an infallible remedy. A dose for a horse or cow should be about four times as great as for a person. It is not too late to give medicine before the spasms come on. The first dose for a person is one and a half ounces of elecampane root, bruised, put in a pint of new milk, reduced to one-half by boiling, then taken all at one dose in the morning, fasting until afternoon, or at least a very light diet after several hours have elapsed. The second dose the same as the first, except take two ounces of the root; third dose the same as last, to be taken every other day. Three doses are all that is needed, and there need be no fear. This I know from my own experience, and I know of a number of other cases where it has been entirely successful. This is no guess work. Those persons I allude to were bitten by rabid dogs, and were penned up to see if they would go mad; they did go mad and did bite the persons. This remedy has been used in and about Philadelphia for forty years or longer, with great success, and is known as the Goodman remedy. I am acquainted with a physician who told me he knew of its use for more than thirty years, but never knew a case that failed where it was properly administered. Among other cases he mentioned was one where a number of cows had been bitten by a mad dog. To half of this number they administered this remedy, to the other half not. The latter all died of hydrophobia, while those that took the elecampane and milk showed no sign of that disease.—R. C. Shoemaker in Country Gentleman.

Stumps.—The following method of getting rid of stumps is recommended by the Scientific American: "In the autumn bore a hole one or two inches in diameter, according to the girth of the stump, vertically in the center of the latter and about eighteen inches deep. Put into it one or two ounces of saltpetre; fill the hole with water and plug up close. In the ensuing spring take out the plug and pour in about one-half gill of kerosene oil and ignite it. The stump will smoulder away, without blazing, to the very extremity of the roots, leaving nothing but ashes."

A Vegetable Curiosity.—A remarkable freak of vegetation has appeared in the grounds of R. B. Tatman, at Worcester, in the shape of a potato vine which bears tomatoes. It appears to be a mixture of the two vegetables, and is accounted for by the fact that a strong tomato vine from chance sown seed grew in the same hill with the potatoes, and the pollen of the two plants became mixed. Unfortunately the vines were pulled up before the peculiarity of the growth was noticed. Some of our agriculturists may derive a valuable suggestion from this. As both the potato and tomato are of the solanaceæ family, it is not impossible that one should be fertilized by the other, and a remarkable economy of labor might be effected if careful and scientific cultivation should produce a plant which should bear good potatoes at the roots and good tomatoes on the tops.—Springfield (Mass.) Union.

I will subjoin an excellent method of washing clothes practiced in France and Germany extensively, where it was first introduced. I have tried it in my own household for six months and think it a great improvement on anything I have seen in that department of work. It is a saving of time, labor and fuel, while the clothes are given a whiteness unequaled in any other method of washing.

Recipe: Dissolve one pound and a half of hard soap in a little water, to this add ten gallons warm water, one tablespoonful of spirits of turpentine, and two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. The same of powdered borax will answer where ammonia cannot be had. Mix thoroughly with the water which can be set on the back part of the kitchen stove. This should be kept at a temperature in which the hand can be held. Into this solution put the white clothes, and leave them two hours, covered as tightly as possible. Then take out and wash once through warm water, little rubbing being necessary. Rinse through two waters, the last being blued, and the clothes are ready for the line. The solution can be reheated, but a little more turpentine and ammonia should be added. It does not injure the most delicate fabric.—Interocean.

Hiatt preached in the College church, Wheaton, last Sabbath. This church lately took up its annual collection for this reform work, and applied it in payment of Bro. Hinman's lecture work.

The Free Mission Work.

—Bro. Hinman reports additions to the fund now being raised. At Mt. Palatine he received the following:

John Morrison	$10 00
John Laughlin	2 00
Geo. Gurnea	5 00

Last Sabbath he spent at Streator. He looks forward to the Wisconsin meeting hoping to attend it.

Free Methodist.

—Bro. Ebey of the Chicago church has been holding a tent meeting for sixteen days on West Ohio street, assisted by Revs. W. F. Manley and P. Hannah. The tent was removed some two weeks ago to the corner of 51st and Baltic streets. The attendance is large and orderly and much interest is manifested. Several conversions have resulted from this work.

—Bro. E. Mathews holds his last quarterly meeting at Napoleon, Mich., from the 29th to the 31st inst.

—Rev. W. F. Manley baptized twenty-one persons by immersion at Mt. Morris, Ill., during the first week in August.

—The Free Methodist in an editorial on some features of the trial of Rev. A. G. Miller of New Jersey, speaks of the intolerance of the system that prevents any Gospel labor undertaken in a certain district claimed by the M. E. preacher as his circuit. The article concludes: "As this parish system has its special application to those engaged in the anti-secret reform and the work of holiness, it becomes a serious question whether such persons will be allowed to continue their efforts of opposing 'the unfruitful works of darkness,' and leading souls into the light of holiness. It is also a question whether the M. E. church under the circumstances is not assuming to be the special shield of Masonry, and opposer of full salvation. As the parish system is revived by the preachers, and by them enforced and approved, it becomes a question whether or no the lovers of light, and truth, and holiness, are under moral obligation to use the Lord's money to sustain such parish ministers. Should the conclusion be reached that such men cannot be sustained, we then inquire, how long can membership be retained in a church whose ministers are, with few exceptions, promoters of secrecy and worldliness, and opposers of holiness? These questions are under consideration, and the authorities of the M. E. church may as well look the issues squarely in the face."

United Presbyterian.

—Rev. F. M. Spencer, of Leavenworth, the faithful pastor and staunch advocate of reform, has been elected president of Muskingum College, located at New Concord, Ohio. He has for seven years been supervising mission work in connection with pastoral work. Rev. Joseph Alter of Valley Falls, Kans., has been chosen as his successor at Leavenworth. The Kansas presbytery meet Aug. 12th to consider his resignation, and adopted the following:

Whereas, The Rev. F. M. Spencer has been pastor of the congregation at Leavenworth for the past eight years, that during a part of this time he was the only pastor in the Presbytery, that during a great part of this time he has borne the burden of the Presbytery and of many of the congregations, and that the present favorable condition of our cause in this part of our State is mainly due to his efforts; and

Whereas, The Board of Trustees of Muskingum College has elected him to the presidency of that institution, which office has been by him accepted to the disruption of the tender tie of the pastorate and his fellowship in the Presbytery; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we bear glad testimony to his efficiency as a pastor and a presbyter, and commend him to all the brethren in the church in his new relations.

2. That while we congratulate Muskingum College on her new president, we are sorry that, when there is such great need in this field for men of his mould, there should be a seeming necessity to draw the president of the college from the west side of the Missouri river.

3. That we wish Bro. Spencer all success in his new field of labor, and hope that through his energy and persistence he may place Muskingum college by the side of her sisters, Westminster and Monmouth, both in her roll of students and her curriculum.

—The U. P. churches in Philadelphia all continue their regular services during the vacation season.

—A farewell meeting was held August 6th at Greenwood, Missouri, on the departure of Miss Rosa McCullough as missionary to India. Miss McCullough graduated seven years ago at Lincoln College, Greenwood, being a member of the first class.

—The fall term of Western College opens Sept. 3. Although one of the buildings has been destroyed the faculty and trustees are pushing on for greater success and usefulness.

—Rev. J. W. Hott, editor of the Telescope, has been spending the summer months in Virginia, recovering strength from the long and exhausting illness of the winter. He writes regularly for the paper. Prof. W. O. Tobey, his associate, has just been taking a few days rest at Chautauqua, N. Y.

—Rev. W. C. Smith of Westfield, preached at the dedication of a new church near Flora, Ill., last Sabbath.

—Pres. E. B. Kephart of Western College, is to be present at the dedication of a new church at Wykoff, Minn., September 14th.

—The Christian Radical says the "Bethel Church, Black Oak Mission, has a consistent board of trustees. They do not believe in the idolatry of Freemasonry, and, therefore, will not permit an adhering Mason to preach in that church. That is sound logic."

—Some weeks ago the church difficulties in Polo, Ill., were referred to. In an article by Bro. Parker Hurless, presiding elder, we find the following particulars:

I was present at the last quarterly conference for this station. The pastor stated in his report, in substance, that with sister churches and outside denominations, the U. B. church here never stood higher since its organization than it did then; that all the members of the various classes, save one, were living up to our Discipline; also reported for the quarter seventy Sabbath-school scholars, etc.

The report shocked me, for every one in the audience knew that it was designedly incorrect. I could not honestly do less than express my astonishment at such a report, which I did in mild language, whereupon Mr. Dessinger took the floor and raved more like a drunken bully than a Christian minister. He denounced me as a "liar," which was, so far as I recollect, the mildest thing he said of me. A term in the penitentiary would be mild punishment for some of his utterances.

A. T. Strock, their secretary, then took the floor and dealt out a very similar dose in about the same spirit. As my name had already been passed upon, I asked the presiding officer if my name was again before the conference. He then called Mr. Strock to order, but he defied the chairman and Mr. Dessinger shouted to Strock to "go on," which he did.

Mr. Dessinger afterward addressed the secretary and moved to adjourn. Mr. Strock put the motion, and, I believe, announced it carried.

At this juncture the presiding elder arose, and after making some remarks in a Christian spirit, notified the leaders of the rebellion that he would refer their case to the annual conference, and dismissed them.

Then Mr. Dessinger secured his own election as chairman, and he and those of his mind played quarterly conference.

More recently a number of men and women met and called themselves "the church," and proceeded to fling out of the church, without proper disciplinary steps, a number of the very ones that Mr. Dessinger had reported as living up to the Discipline of the church a short time before.

From their "secretary" who called their gathering a "revision meeting" the two presiding elders of the conference were officially notified that they had been "formally expelled from membership of the church." A presiding elder's wife was also expelled.

The woman whom they had denounced as a liar more than a year ago and was nursed and petted by them until they had no more use for her, was carefully lifted over the fence and safely let down upon a bunch of straw on the outside, figuratively speaking.

Her husband also, with a "by thunder" and "I'll be darned" threatens to leave the church. The poor woman will now receive such kicks and cuffs as her enemies, disguised as friends, may feel safe in administering.

Now some of this little faction boldly say they will hold possession of the U. B. house of worship here, hire Mr. Dessinger for another year, have nothing to do with presiding elders or bishops, but run the church on an independent line.

Furthermore, they intend to make as formidable an appearance at annual conference as possible. Our ministers can therefore, come to conference ready to be "button-holed" and hear a wonderful tale of slander, etc. The object of the above is found in the expressions, "It'll be votes that'll count at conference," and "—— will be kicked out of conference."

Some have been drawn into this rebellion through misrepresentation and are to be pitied rather than blamed; but the leaders positively know better, and should be held responsible. * * *

The present pastor found a good congregation here when he came, and the church as a whole or majority, loyal.

Now there is a scattered membership, small congregation, and badly crippled Sabbath-school.

But the worst feature of all is, that souls may be lost forever.

As a compensation for all this a few can boast of their perseverance in wrong doing or seeking their own way in the efforts to destroy others while a minority of Masons and Odd-fellows rejoice heartily. May the Lord continue his mecty.

I am glad to be able to inform the brethren that we have as yet some as good and true members here as can be found anywhere in the church although temporarily driven from the public services of the U. B. church.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The committee on locating the college at Beaver Falls, Pa., met July 31st. The station of the Pittsburgh and Erie railway to be located at one corner of the grounds was named "College." It is the intention to have the contract let at an early day so that the building may be ready for occupancy in a year from September. For the present the institution will continue as heretofore at West Geneva, Ohio.

—The mother of Rev. T. P. Stevenson of Philadelphia, pastor of the First R. P. church of that city and editor of the Christian Statesman, died at his residence at Cape May Point, N. J., on the 12th inst.

—A new congregation was organized at St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 29th. The new church starts with 38 members. Mr. W. R. Laird, lately licensed to preach by the New York presbytery, has been laboring in St. Johnsbury, and it is mainly due to his efforts under God that this congregation has been gathered. Revs. J. R. Thompson, J. C. Taylor, J. C. K. Faris and D. C. Faris took part in the exercises of the occasion.

BAPTIST.

—Rev. J. D. Fulton has rented the Rink in New York for the purpose of opening a people's church in which none will feel the trammels of wealth and aristocracy. It is said that the new enterprise is making progress. A recent meeting of the various committees has been held, showing that all the arrangements are proceeding satisfactorily. Large numbers of persons, not members of the Centennial church, have offered their services as singers in the great choir which is to sing in the Rink.

GERMAN BAPTIST (BRETHREN).

—A discussion between S. H. Bashor, editor of the Gospel Preacher, and Rev. P. Bergstresser, pastor of the Lutheran church in Waynesboro, Pa., has been arranged to debate upon the topics of triune immersion, infant baptism, feet-washing and the Lord's Supper.

—Bro. H. R. Holsinger has retired from the editorial management of the Progressive Christian, on account of the small size of the subscription list which does not yield a living for two editors.

GENERAL.

—There is a Presbyterian church among the Chippewas—or the Ojibways, as they call themselves—on Lake Superior. They now report seventy-two members, with a most excellent and intelligent Indian (half-breed) pastor. Eighteen were received into the church last year, and fourteen adult baptisms show that these were from the heathen Indians.

—The wife of Midhat Pasha, the new Governor of Syria, while recently at Beyrout, told Miss Taylor, the principal of the Moslem Girls' School, that her husband meant to compel all Mohammedan parents to send their children to school. There are now 11,000 children attending schools. The Greek young men have formed a Young Men's Christian Association in imitation of the Protestants, and have opened schools for boys and girls, using the New Testament as a text-book.

—A lady, Miss Waterston, has gone to Central Africa as a medical missionary. She is to join the Livingstonia Mission, with which a European woman is already connected, who is to be the wife of Dr. Laws. Mrs. McDonald, at the Blantyre Mission, in the Shire Hills, south of Lake Nyassa, is the only other European woman north of Lake Ngami. Miss Waterston does not go to Africa now for the first time. She was superintendent of the female seminary at Lovedale for several years, and gathered there an experience which will be of the utmost benefit at Livingstonia.

—Gov. Talbot, of Massachusetts, forbids the running of excursion trains on the Sabbath through the Hoosac Tunnel and its railroad connections which are owned by the State.

—Rev. George F. Herrick, of Turkey, reports that the circulation of Bibles and religious literature in that country now numbers 140,000 volumes a year. The only mission, he says, which can reach Turkey is a woman's mission.

—The number of native Christians in India is given in the new Missionary Directory as 266,391, an increase of 42,133 in four years; and of native communicants, 68,689, an increase of 15,863. The directory gives the names and addresses of 960 missionaries and native pastors in India proper, not including Burmah and Ceylon.

News of the Week.

—The Inter-State Exposition in this city opens September 3d and continues six weeks.

—A terrible storm visited the whole Atlantic coast from Maine to the Carolinas last week Monday. At Newburyport, Mass., it was the severest in ten years. The wind blew a hurricane, wrecking four yachts, badly wrenching steamers and schooners in the harbor, and scattering about twenty small boats. The fruit trees were stripped, and tents on the beach were leveled or blown into the sea. At Newport between twenty and thirty sailboats are sunk or damaged. The storm at Moorhead City, N. C., was the most violent that ever visited that place. At 6 A. M. it blew a hurricane from the southeast and at midday hauled to the southwest, a change which saved Beaufort and Moorhead from entire destruction. The Atlantic House, the largest hotel in that part of the country, is entirely demolished, not a vestige being left. There were one hundred and fifty guests in it, and there was not a particle of clothing saved by any of them. The people did not begin to leave until the waves were literally breaking the hotel to pieces—then there was a stampede. All baggage, furniture, etc., went to destruction. John Hughes, son of Major Hughes of Newbern, lost his life in the wreck of the Atlantic House.

—The house to which Lincoln was carried after his assassination, and in which he died, is situated on Tenth street, Washington, opposite the old Ford's Theater. It is a plain three-story brick house, with high wooden steps. It is now owned and occupied by Mr. Lewis Schade, the editor of a German paper, who has had a marble slab placed between the windows of the second story, on which is inscribed as follows:

"President A. Lincoln died in this house April 15, 1865."

Mr. Schade says that it is the custom in Europe to mark historical houses in this way, and he desires to introduce it into this country.

—At 11:30 A. M. Aug. 20th, fire broke out in the large sawmill and salt block of Sanborn & Bloss, at Carlton, opposite East Saginaw, Mich., and in thirty minutes had consumed the mill and salt block, two drill houses, the salt shed containing 4,000 barrels of salt, and several dwellings. Six million feet of lumber and 3,000 cords of wood were also burned. A strong south wind carried the flames directly into the town and for a short time threatened its entire destruction. About half of the village was soon vacated, the household effects being moved to the river bank. Shortly after the wind suddenly veered to the east, and the fire was soon under control.

—The wheat crop of Illinois is reported the largest and most valuable ever raised in the State. The crop aggregates 42,041,252 bushels, and is valued at $37,266,757.

—The Mississippi murderers are again at work. A few weeks ago H. M. Dixon, independent candidate for sheriff, was compelled to withdraw. A demand was made that he leave the county, but this he declined to do. As many persecuted Republicans in the south have done, he asserted his rights as an American citizen, and defied the mob. The final result in his case is the same as has been frequently recorded in other cases. He has been shot and killed by James H. Barksdale, one of the candidates on the Democratic ticket.

—The Customs Bureau of the treasury department has prepared a statement showing the receipts for customs at sixteen principal ports of the United States. At New York, where the customs were largest by far, the increase in the revenue this year was more than $6,000,000 over last year, while the aggregate cost of collection was decreased by over $200,000. In Boston the increase was a little over $700,000 in revenue, while the expenses were decreased over $11,000. In Philadelphia the revenue increased about $2,500,000, and the expenses were increased about $11,000.

FOREIGN.

—Severe storms of rain and wind were experienced in England last week. In North Wales the storm caused the stoppage of all trains on the Holyhead line. The Irish mail was obliged to return to Chester on account of the flooding of the line, portions of which were washed away. The bridges at Aber and Mold and the viaduct at Llandalas was rendered unsafe by the storm, so that all traffic between Bangor and Chester had to be suspended. On Sunday the rain was very heavy in the vicinity of London.

—The Ameer of Afghanistan will be hereafter addressed through the British government in India. In other words, Afghanistan is as much an English province as Khiva is a Russian.

—As Cashmere is the only part of India which appears to be still threatened with famine, there are hopes of a revival of prosperity in in India. So confident is this feeling in Manchester that anticipations are indulged in, and here and there preparations made for a great revival in Eastern trade.

—The rapid decline of Bonapartism in the provinces of France is shown by the fact that three Imperialist newspapers have been stopped for want of funds.

—English miners have recently held a delegate convention in which 200,000 of them were represented. They resolved, among other things, to emigrate to America.

—Prince Kung, of China, visited General Grant while the latter was at the Chinese capital, and suggested that the General act as arbitrator between China and Japan, as to the conflicting claims to the Loochoo Islands. Both countries claim and exact tribute from the islands, and war threatens. The New York World sees in General Grant's partial acceptance of the mission of peace-maker a reason for the recent coolness of British officials in China.

—The judgments of the Russian military tribunal against a number of Nihilists has been published. Five men were sentenced to be hanged, one woman to Siberia, and twenty-two others to ten years' penal servitude.

—At the State Asylum for Feeble Minded Children, at Lincoln, Illinois, pupils from the State are furnished with board, tuition and washing, free of charge. The school term will open September 1st. Friends of this class of children, who wish to get them in this year, should make application at once, as there are but few vacancies to fill. Address Dr. C. T. Wilbur, Sup't, Lincoln, Illinois.

A CYCLOPEDIA FOR $10.00.—Perhaps the most remarkable literary enterprise of the time, is the publication of the Library of Universal Knowledge, in 20 volumes of nearly 1,000 pages each, handsomely bound, for fifty cents per volume, or $10.00 for the set. It is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopedia; A Dictionary of Universal Knowledge for the People, with very large editions upon topics of special interest to American readers. The amount of matter will somewhat exceed that of the Cyclopedias of Appleton or Johnson, though the price is but a fraction of their cost. Volume one is to be ready early in September, and the others will follow at very short intervals. The remarkably low prices are accounted for by the method of sale, to the subscribers direct, saving them the large commission, often 50 or 60 per cent., paid to agents or dealers; also, by the recent great reduction in the cost of making books, and by making very large sales. This certainly is a work that the millions will appreciate. Special inducements are offered to early subscribers and to clubs

The same publishers have recently issued editions of Chambers' Cyclopedia of English Literature, 4 vols., $2.00, formerly sold in 2 vols., for $9.00; also, Rollins' Ancient History and Josephus' Works, large type editions, for $2.25 and $2.00, and Smith's Bible Dictionary, $1.00.

They also publish in August and September, the Acme Library of Biography, 12 vols., and the Acme Library of Modern Classics, 9 vols., the former at 35 cents and the latter at 50 cents per vol. In these series are presented such authors as Carlyle, Macaulay, Gibbon, Goldsmith, Lamartine, Michelet, Thomas Moore, Walter Scott, and Fouque, and such subjects as Cæsar, Cromwell, Burns, Joan of Arc, Vicar of Wakefield, Picciola, Lalla Rookh, etc. Full catalogue of publications, terms to clubs, etc., will be sent free on request by the publishers, the AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE, 55 BEEKMAN ST., N. Y.

Causes of Poverty in England.

The effect of this wide spread distress must be to increase the difficulties of the present government, to strengthen the accusations of the Liberal party, and, perhaps, lead to a change of administration. We wish it might lead Parliament and the nation to consider more seriously the one cause which more than any other wastes the wealth of the nation, and spreads want and misery among her people—the drink traffic. Sir Wilfrid Lawson's Permissive Prohibitory Bill, or, as an American would say, Local Option law, defeated last year, was promptly presented again at the recent short session of Parliament. No less than six other measures, wise or otherwise, were also presented, all looking in some way to the restraint of this terrible scourge. One of them is an act to apply to Wales the same law for the closing of dram-shops on the Sabbath which is now working so happily in Ireland. If these bills indicate a deepening interest in the general question of temperance, it is the brightest point on England's horizon. Ruskin says: "Though England is deafened with spinning wheels, her people have not clothes; though she is black with digging coal, her people have not fuel, and they die of cold; and though she has sold her soul for grain, they die of hunger." And he might have added that her drink bill is the principal reason for this want in the midst of plenty.

But there are other evils in the structure of English society, and it is probable that the present commercial distress will stimulate the discussion of them, or even precipitate action upon them. The expense of the royal establishment seems enormous in the eyes of an American whose president administers the government of a population larger than that of Great Britain on a salary of $50,000 a year, while the Queen of England receives £385,000 a year from the nation, and about £40 000 more from the Duchy of Lancaster. The Prince of Wales receives £40,000 from the nation, about £60,000 from the Duchy of Cornwall, and his wife £10,000 from the nation—altogether £110,000. To the expense of the royal family must be added that of the dignitaries of the established church. The salaries of some of these are as follows:

The Archbishop of Canterbury	$76,000	per year
Archbishop of York	56,000	"
Bishop of London	50,000	"
Bishop of Durham	40,000	"
Bishop of Winchester	35,000	"
Bishop of Ely	27,000	"
Six bishops have each	25,000	"
Eight bishops have each	22,500	"
Eight others each	21,010	"

But these are trifling items compared with the fact that the whole landed estate of the kingdom is in the hand of a small number of its citizens. For example:

The Duke of Sutherland owns	1,358,425	acres
Duke of Buccleugh and Queensbury	459,260	"
Sir James Matheson	406,070	"
Earl of Breadalbane	372,629	"
Earl of Seafield	305,891	"
Duke of Richmond	286,407	"
Earl of Fife	257,662	"
Alexander Matheson	220,433	"
Duke of Athol	194,640	"
Duke of Devonshire	193,121	"
Duke of Northumberland	185,515	"
Duke of Argyle	175,114	"

It is stated that whole districts have been nearly depopulated to make room for game parks, and where millions of sheep were once raised to feed and clothe humanity, only deer are kept to gratify the sporting propensities of an idle aristocracy. Facts like these constitute grave problems for the statesmanship of England to deal with. Christians throughout the world should pray that this great nation, whose influence is in many ways so beneficent upon the earth, whose citizens are spreading commerce, and letters, and religion so rapidly around the globe, may be enabled to settle them speedily and settle them aright.—Christian Statesman.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Now there is quite a number of subscribers of the Cynosure in this (Walworth) county, and the county fair will be held Sep. 23-26. Will not some one be on hand with a supply of tracts, say some 2,000 pages for free distribution, and I would add some books to sell.

I did this work last year for a short time one day, but I did not have half tracts enough. This year I am so situated that I cannot attend to it. Some one will, I hope, do his duty to the cause of reform and to God."

Topics of the Time.

A great lobby is being organized in Philadelphia for the next Congress. The great Centennial occurred when the people were in the depths of the hard times and the thunder of the grange movement growling against monopolies was yet muttering in the distance; so that when aid was asked from the government these causes and the local prejudice existing between cities induced the Philadelphians to modestly ask for a loan of a million and a half. They evidently expected that it would never be called for, and even the committee in Congress which drew the bill supposed it would be a subsidy. After taking the case through the lower and upper courts the Centennial Commission had to pay back the loan with much groaning. It seems now that the government made some $2,000,000 on duties on imported articles for the Exhibition, and nothing would after all have been lost had the loan never been repaid. To get this $1,500,000 back and divide it among the hungry stockholders, after retaining one-third, is the object of this lobby. Would not our Philadelphia fellow-citizens be wiser to let the whole sum go as a grand Centennial gift to the nation. The greedy crowd now after it would not be benefited, one in ten of them, if all is repaid.

The Oneida community of New York has at last succumbed to the inevitable and voluntarily last week gave up its system of promiscuous or "complex marriage." The pressure of public opinion has been felt upon the little company of two hundred. They were threatened with law suits, but it was impossible to make out a case against them. Legislative action was a more formidable danger. There was also a strong minority in favor of the ideas of wedlock existing in the outer world. These were led by a son of Father Noyes, the patriarch and founder of the Community. "Complex marriage" and "scientific propagation" had become offensive to them. Prof. Mears, one of their strongest opponents, visited the elder Noyes and agreed to a compromise. He guaranteed the good will of the whole country about if only they would abandon their immoral practice. Knowing that this would sooner or later be necessary, Noyes prepared a message to his people giving up their abominable practice but retaining all their communal features. Henceforth they will be divided into two classes, celibates and those married on the monogamic principle. The community is wealthy and honorable in business, and their neighbors will rejoice that this only bar to good citizenship and neighborhood is abolished with so little disturbance. The cause of public morals will be also greatly advanced, and we will be more ready to deal with Mormonism.

Important news comes from South America to the effect that Colonel Fisher has been sent as a special messenger from Washington to Peru and Chili bearing dispatches to both of these governments, offering the mediation of the United States government in the present unnatural, bloody and fruitless quarrel in which they are engaged. Propositions have already been made by France in the interest of French bondholders whose risks are being increased by the war; but having a mercenary basis in which it is improbable that English capitalists similarly involved will agree, nothing could be effected. The proposition of our government will no doubt be thankfully accepted and a new evidence of the greatness of our country's mission be given to man kind. May the blessing of the Prince of Peace be on such labors.

A monument to the memory of Gen. Custer, the brave cavalry officer who fell before the attack of Sitting Bull and his Sioux in June, 1876, was unveiled at West Point on Saturday. Addresses were made by Gens. Schofield and Banks during the impressive exercises of the occasion. Custer, though yet a young man, (he was 37 when killed in the Little Big Horn battle,) was one of the best known and most popular of our army officers. His repute for dash, bravery and success in the war of the rebellion was perpetuated in an entertaining series of magazine articles in the columns of the Galaxy, describing soldier life and warfare on the plains. With all due credit for his popular qualities there is in his writings and military movements a monument to memories of another kind. His policy of Indian extermination and readiness to attack them at every opportunity were little to the credit of the nation and doubtless contributed materially to the expensive and cruel struggles with depleted ranks of the savages. The policy of the present administration is in happy contrast: and if the efforts for the Ponca Indians shall succeed in our Supreme Court, a better day for the red man, and for our territories will surely dawn.

The country is familiar with the Sprague-Conkling scandal. It has not been introduced in these columns, because the stories affecting the New York Senator and the wife of an ex-Governor of Rhode Island and daughter of Salmon P. Chase were too unsubstantial a foundation. There is another side to this picture which the escape of Mrs. Sprague from her husband's house on Saturday makes noticeable as a terrible warning. When Sprague as Senator was married to Kate Chase he was perhaps the wealthiest young man in the country. The tippling habits of Washington society became, after the panic which ruined his great business in Rhode Island, confirmed dissipation. This is no doubt at the bottom of all the troubles between him and Conkling, and has made his house a prison to a high-tempered wife. In spite of threats and constant watching she left Narragansett Pier on Saturday with her children, and all there is left between the two, who were fourteen years ago esteemed the most favored couple in America, is the law court and its settlement of the children. So sad a lesson from high society is enough to quench any ordinary ambition for entering it, and makes us bless again the wife of our President for her firmness against the winecup.

—We have received, too late to print this week, a very interesting letter from Bro. Fulton, of Dresden, Ohio, reporting some excellent work by Father Taylor in that place and vicinity during the last of August.

—The Freemasons of Mexico, we observe, are disposed to interfere with the President of Mexico in his discharge of his official functions. There have been some executions at Vera Cruz, which the dispatch implies the brotherhood were opposed to, and they have consequently asked Diaz "whether he directly or indirectly ordered" them.—United Presbyterian.

Idolatry, Ancient and Modern.

BY THOS. HODGE.

"Take heed lest there be any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God."

These words may be regarded as teaching us that if we depart from the living God we cannot then worship any but the dead gods or idols of gold and silver and stone, or our corrupt lusts whose fruit is death; no matter if such idols are declared, as they were falsely declared to be, the very living God who had brought the Israelites out of the land of Egypt! Idolaters then seldom or never confessed themselves to be false worshippers until punishment brought repentance, and it is the same in our day. Then the exhortation was, "Turn ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods. Ye shall make no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a standing image of stone in your land to bow down to it; for I am the Lord your God." "Ye shall not go after other gods, the gods of the people which are round about you." "Thou shalt not turn aside to the right hand nor to the left, to go after other gods to serve them." "He that sacrificeth to any god save unto the Lord only, he shall be utterly destroyed."

Such warnings and threatenings did not keep the Israelites from idolatry. They were easily led astray, and they conformed to the prevalent customs of the worshipers of the dead gods: such as Baal, and Ashtaroth, and the gods of Syria and of Zidon, of Moab, of Ammon and of the Philistines. How silly and wicked in them to do this, and although God, the living God, entreated them by the prophets to return to him, yet they hardened themselves again and again until the threatenings for their sin wrre executed. They were punished for disobedience.

The Jews were a nation which was typical of the Christians of our day. The preaching of the Gospel, and the abounding copies of the Scriptures have given line upon line to the multitudes; but alas! there are false guides now of as old and we are verily in the "perilous times" of the last days. "Philosophy and vain deceit, and the deceivableness of unrighteousness" combine to delude society. The mystery of iniquity has enticing charms to many whose hearts incline to the "pleasures of sin for a season," and who regard the easy yoke and light burden of duty to Christ as the exactions of a hard master. The baits of pleasure allure such people and thus they become the servants of the world, the devil, and the flesh, instead of the servants of righteousness and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Apart from the evil heart of unbelief against which every believer is warned, there are in our day numerous advocates of the claims of this very unbelief as the true guide for men! Not only is unbelief in Christ the Son of God and only redeemer of man urged by skeptics such as Ingersoll, but before him and co-workers with him, were the secretist subverters of the faith, who promise good where God has warned of evil, and whose fruit is corruption and death instead of life and immortality. What are lodges instead of churches? What are corrupt churches instead of the church of Christ? Where is the last to be seen? We ask the for "visible church," and in many cases the response is, lo, here! or, lo, there! but we only find a shadow. Its true qualities may be seen in the Scriptures, and obedience to Christ as its Lord and Master, its Life and its head, is the best way to find it. But who in these days of "names, sects and parties" are willing to be unknown as the disciples of Paul, or Apallos, or Peter, or John the Baptist, or John Calvin, or John Knox the Presbyterian, or John Wesley the Methodist, and to be known only by the name of our Lord? Let us then forsake all others, and become known only by the name of "Churches of Christ," or such other as has been given to believers who are willing to obey their Lord in all things which he has commanded.

The institutions of the church are few and simple. To obey them is the practical confession of faith as given in the New Testament; they show faith in Christ's death for sin, and his burial and resurrection as their risen and exalted Lord with all power in heaven and on earth. Shall such members of Christ become members of corrupt lodges in which there are prayers and worship without his blessed name, or where his name is used only to delude the unwary? Not only has the church been corrupted, but the institutions of our country also, and their overthrow must follow if they are not purified by an intelligent people acting on Christian principles.

May every reader be saved from such gross wrong doing and aid in the right.

The Vine and the Plant.

BY ISAAC H. MCOMBER.

A long time ago a husbandman planted a living vine in good soil, upon high ground. Its roots taking hold of the Rock of Ages, and its top clinging to the everlasting throne, and sending out its branches far and near. Every leaf of this vine is a motto leaf, with golden letters, bearing precious words, some of which are:—"I am the true vine, my Father is the husbandman;" "I am the light of the world;" "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me;" "I am the way, the truth and the life;" "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved;" "Come unto me all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

The husbandman knowing that a plant would arise to oppose his vine caused it to bear these words:—"Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up;" "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon;" "But I say unto you, swear not at all;" "No man cometh unto the Father but by me;" "He that hateth me, hateth my Father also." It also bears precious fruit, such as "love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

It pleased the husbandman at one time, to bruise this vine, and forthwith, it sent forth a sweet-smelling savor, and life-giving influence, sufficient to heal all mankind. The Holy Spirit, like a beautiful dove, is ever hovering over this vine.

But not so with the plant. The first knowledge that we have of the originator of this plant, is when he gave a lecture to the inhabitants of the garden of Eden, which brought upon them the displeasure of their Maker. The consequence of which was their banishment from that beautiful place. After this we hear of him again. When the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, he came also; and when asked where he was from, he replied:—"From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it." (A tramp.) Shortly after this he broke into the house of the best man in all that country, the most perfect, and honorable, and benevolent. None stood as high as he in all that land; and yet this miserable tramp tore this good man's house to pieces, killed all his children, destroyed his property, and would have killed him had it been in his power. Later still we find him in the country of the Gadarenes. At this time he asked and obtained possession of a great herd of swine. But as soon as they saw him they became desperately enraged, choosing death rather than to endure the presence of such a being.

It appears that this plant was first germinated in one of his hot-beds; afterwards transplanted by one Apollyon into low marshy ground, not far from the valley of death. A very unhealthy country, but well adapted for the growth of his plant, which thrives best in the night, and the darker the night the better, as it cannot endure the light.

At one time, (from 1826 to 30), the light from the vine came very near destroying it; also at the present time, it is drooping from the effect of the light that is being poured upon it. It is a poisonous plant, causing its admirers to become partially if not wholly blind. To them it has grown very broad, and they believe it to be very high, reaching up to the very heavens. But their blindness is leading them astray. It is seen best from the high ground near the vine, from which place it is easily discovered to be nothing more than a very low shrub.

These people are divided into two classes. One class rejects the vine altogether and yet are hoping to reach heaven at last. They do not like the door of the sheep-fold, so they are climbing up some other way. The other class appear to admire both the vine and the plant. Oh how strange, how inconsistent! This plant also has motto leaves, some of which are:—"Mystery," "Secrecy," "Never reveal, ever conceal." Its fruits are deception, blasphemy, treason, murder, and death.

The great Physician has repeatedly told them that he is ready to restore them to perfect sight, and make them every whit whole, on condition that they leave their land and come to him. But they love their land. O poor misguided souls! They see not that heavenly dove hovering over the vine, nor yet—that wily serpent coiled at the root of his plant.

In the house of the husbandman on high are many mansions prepared for those that love his vine. The worshipers of the plant claim to have a grand lodge above. But there is a vast difference between a mansion and a lodge. They also claim to have found in their plant a great light. "Now, if the light that is in them be darkness, how great is that darkness?"

The Family and Freemasonry.

BY REV. W. SOMERVILLE, M. A., OF ST. JOHN, NOVA SCOTIA.

It is not by individual movements only that the unity and confidence of the family are disturbed. There are social organizations in the land that tend to break up the unity of families, and these are of such a nature, put forth so high claims to public consideration, and are so influentially supported, that their character and operations are not very exactly canvassed, and many, who may have some misgivings, are awed by their popular pretentions, and are afraid to express their doubts.

I shall confine my remarks to one of these organizations, and that because it has the highest patronage, is spreading rapidly, and is in my judgment the most dangerous. I refer to the unchristian, anti-christian institution of Masonry. I do not say Free-Masonry, because it looks like burlesque to call that man free, who is bound by the solemnity of an oath, under fearful penalities, to keep secrets inviolably and to walk according to laws exactly, of which he is profoundly ignorant till he has taken the oath. I call the institution unchristian, because it professes to unite "the distant Chinese, the wild Arab, and the American savage," with the "Briton, the Frank, and the German," in brotherhood. I call it anti-christian, because what is not for Christ is against him.

A society whose members are sworn to keep secrets which have not beforehand been communicated, not only such as are entrusted to them at the time of initiation, but such as had been overlooked or forgotten, and are afterwards imparted; who hold Masonic obligations antecedent to civil, and "if the Masonic and civil come in conflict, they might render obedience to the former, without incurring the guilt of a wilful transgression of the latter;" having attained the degree of a Royal Arch Companion, who are required to "assist a brother when engaged in any difficulty, so far as to extricate him from the same, whether he be right or wrong," and to keep his secrets, committed to him as Masonic secrets, involving even murder or treason; who transact the business of the lodge within doors, closed and guarded; who can by private signs recognize each other by night or by day, in private or in company; such a society, having its ramifications in every part of the land, furnishes a machinery which, worked by unscrupulous hands, is fitted to blast the character of any individual who may be obnoxious to the fraternity, overturn any government, shake the foundations of society,destroy all confidence in our legislature and courts, sow the seeds of distrust between ministers and people, and subvert the discipline of all churches, while the high character of many Masons lulls all suspicion, and men of principle and piety, who are dissatisfied with the conduct of their brethren, are obliged to keep aloof or maintain a profound silence.

That there may be no mistaking of my ideas of the unholy nature and dangerous tendency of Masonry, I have introduced this broad statement. My present object, however, is not the discussion of the general question, but to animadvert on its bearing on the domestic economy. It is irreconcilable with the constitution of the family.

God has united husband and wife by a bond having a mysterious and inexplicable power, and which cannot be broken but by a reckless disregard of the divine injunction, "What God has joined together, let no man put asunder." Husbands and wives cherish a mutual affection which has no parallel among other members of the human family. They have common interests, joys, trials, and hopes. They are one. So says the Saviour. "No more twain." So saith the Spirit in the Apostle. "Neither is the man without the woman, nor the woman without the man." You might as well say the Christ exists without the church, or the church without the Christ, as gainsay the inviolable union. Now Masonry excavates an impassable gulf between a man and his wife. The husband has entered into a relation in which his partner can have no sympathy with him. Mutual consent and co-operation are an impossibility. When he collects his household to express their devotion to a common God, and to ask for his protection and blessing, the wife is with her husband. When he goes to the prayer-meeting, to unite with his fellows in pouring out their hearts at a throne of grace, she is with him. When on the Lord's day he enters into the place of worship, she is with him. When he sits down at the Lord's table, she is with him. Animated by the same spirit, and an heir with him of the same promises, in the same holy exercises and in all the holy associations which are founded on divine arrangements, they are not separated. Into the higher and more sacred enclosure of the Mason lodge she must not enter. From all its exercises and pleasures she is shut out by an impassable barrier. Here the man is without the woman, and the woman without the man. We cannot say such a separation is in the Lord.

The formation of the marriage bond implies, on woman's part, an affection and a confidence which no language can express. To leave father and mother, brothers and sisters, the scenes of early affections and pleasures, to put herself under the protection of one, who may have been till lately a stranger, and may have his residence in a distant land, involves a surrender of heart that has a right to ask and expect the highest place in the heart and home. What may be the effect on the sensibilities of custom it is difficult to estimate; and the absence of thought may leave the feelings in a state of torpor, but I have an irrepressible apprehension that a loving, sensitive, and reflecting wife cannot fail to be full of sadness when she finds that there are associates who have a higher place in her husband's confidence than his wife and children—an organization that has greater attractions than his own household. The necessity of going forth on the business of life is intelligible and recognized, but the connection with the lodge is a mere matter of choice, and there is no ostensible object contemplated in it which demands such a rude severance of the ties that bind together the primary members of the household.

It is not, I apprehend, possible for an affectionate and reflecting wife at all times to repress surmises respecting the object and occupations of a Mason lodge. To make arrangements for the relief of the widow and the fatherless little ones demands no secrecy. The object is one which must command universal approbation and applause. "Why should a lodge always meet in the dark hours of the night? Why should doors be shut and guarded? There must be objects contemplated —there must be operations engaged in that do not bear to be exposed to open scrutiny without exposing the parties to ridicule, reproach or punishment." Such thoughts must force themselves on a wife's mind, while she anxiously watches to a late hour to hear the step of her husband returning from the lodge. If there are great and important mysteries of science and of art, which are in possession of the members of the Masonic brotherhood, the greatest mystery of all is that they would be lost unless more than one-half of the human race are kept in profound ignorance of them.

But Masonry steps into the family, and also interferes occasionally with parental authority. When a son goes out to take his place at the head of his own family, he still owes to father and mother the reverence of other days, though not that direct subordination which belongs to a state of minority. But it sometimes happens that a son, claiming the privilege of age, while still a member of his father's family, enters a Mason lodge, and the good order of the household must yield to the higher claims of the secret and irresponsible society. The doors must open at any hour in accommodation to any one who is and is not of the family. With what distress and shame have parents sometimes to confess that their sons are frequently out at night, and that they do not know where they are, with whom they associate, or how they spend their time. And are we to assume that all is right when they return after late hours because they say they have been at the lodge, and no further questions are to be asked? The Masonic brotherhood claims a confidence that is denied to a father's judgment and a mother's heart. Masonry draws largely upon confidence and credulity, more largely than ever Jesus Christ did. There is not a servant or a friend who would enter a family which would exact an oath of all who enter that nothing that transpires in the family shall ever be uttered except to one of the members. There are times when members of government ask confidence for a limited period with respect to matters in due season to be revealed. The Masonic secret is forever to be concealed, and never revealed even to father and mother, who have a right to be trusted before any other. If a secret is Masonically imparted to a son which may afflict his father's interests, character, or life, to reveal that secret is to separate from the society and expose himself to the imputation of perjury and to Masonic vengeance.

I shall not dwell on the effect of Masonic obligations on the sweet and attractive and confiding intercourse of brothers and sisters. The truth is that Masonry, lauded as ancient—it is only a little over an hundred and fifty years old—as honorable, as benevolent, and as conducing to harmony and affection, is calculated to sever the holiest ties which bind the members of that most ancient, and honorable, and blessed of all associations—the family—an substitute an artificial, an unantural combination, exclusive in its spirit and aims—a simple despotism of the most destructive tendency.—The Advocate, Glasgow, Scotland.

THE SERMON.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Sabbath evening, August 10th, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. —1 Thess. 5:21.

There are theories, institutions, machines and men continually appealing to the world for recognition and support. Some persons at once disapprove of the new because it is new. Age is to them the test of excellence. If a thing was not believed, done or encouraged by their ancestors, that is a good and sufficient reason why they should not believe, do or encourage it.

On the other hand there are persons who run eagerly after the new solely because it is new. There are men who are converted to every new denomination, who buy every new article, and with whom present wine is invariably best.

But there are others, who intelligently scrutinize the claims of each new thing which asks their notice, and reject the evil or worthless to retain the valuable and good. They, so far as they can, "prove all things, and hold fast that which is good;" they obey the injunction of this text.

THIS DUTY USUALLY ADMITTED.

There are very few men who would wish to deny the wisdom of the course indicated in this Scripture. There are, perhaps, none who would deliberately say that a man should accept or reject anything without an examination. To hold fast a thing without testing it, because it is old or new or popular or despised, is to act the part of a fool, and men know that it is so. But, although this proposition is so universally admitted, there arise from time to time, questions where the practical application of this principle is denied. Thus a few years since the investigation of the question of slavery was treated as a crime. A man had no right to be in doubt as to that matter. He was a traitor to Caesar if he admitted that the system might be wrong. He was not to prove slavery and hold it fast if he found it good, but he was to hold it fast whether good or bad, and be careful not to prove it at all.

So at the present time there are a certain class of persons who thus teach concerning secret societies. They resent any examination of the loud-sounding claims which these associations make as an insult to all concerned. When they have told us that these institutions are all right; that they interfere with no duty which man owes to family, country or God, etc., they seem to think that the duty of all men is to accept without question the judgment which they have pronounced.

Others go still farther and affirm that we cannot test these associations even if we would. Men can analyze the the soil on which they walk,the air they breathe, the water they drink and the light of the stars, but they cannot examine a secret society that meets over a country store. This seems a statement so ridiculous, that no man in his right mind would think of making it, but you will often hear it urged by persons in defence of these orders.

IS IT TRUE.

If it is, then no Christian man has any right to join such orders. They require an oath or pledge of fealty at the beginning. Unless the man will give this pledge at the start he is not admitted. That is, he must promise to hold fast first and prove afterwards. This is contrary to the text which teaches that men must prove the things first and hold fast those they find good afterwards.

If the statement is not true, and if these organizations can be tested as well as any others, then it is clearly the duty of Christians, first, to find out what they are, and then hold fast or reject as the case may require. Those who say that you can know nothing of these of orders until you join them, accuse every professor of religion in their membership of violating this command. I stand with those who believe that these orders can be tested. There is no difficulty in knowing the principles and practices of any and all secret societies which exist for a considerable length of time and are widely extended. A man can know as much of Masonry, Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, etc., before he unites as he can ever find out afterwards. This is so well understood at the present time that no honest man connected with the orders thinks of denying it. And if this be true, then it is the duty of all men who think of uniting to prove first. Further than this it is the duty of all Christians to prove these orders, both men and women and children. For as they exist they ask and receive commendation or condemnation at the hands of all men, and before giving the one or the other the Christian must test, examine or prove.

HOW CAN WE DO THIS.

There are a number of ways in which one can ascertain the character of these institutions. One of the most satisfactory is by their own ceremonies and writings. There are the monitors, manuals, handbooks, rituals and text-books on law written for the guidance of the members of the fraternities. There are also the ceremonies of dedication, installation, celebration and burial which are practiced in public and are apparently intended as recommendations of what is kept concealed. It is usual and not unjust to judge a store by the articles which are placed on exhibition. You don't ask for jewelry in a store where heavy hardware is placed in the window, nor do you expect to purchase a shawl in a shop where meats and vegetables are exhibited. This principle applies properly and forcibly to these secret orders. They have certain things which they call secrets; these things they are anxious to sell at a given price to the men in every community. In order to advertise themselves they from time to time put on regalia, take certain implements,e. g.,swords, trowels, rods, etc., and with these regalias and implements perform certain solemn ceremonies and repeat certain prayers. Now any man who will read the books which they print, and observe the ceremonies which they perform will be enabled to judge very accurately the character of the order. He will reason thus:—"These things are probably the best they have, since they are produced for the sake of impressing the public favorably. The things which they keep concealed are almost certainly no better, and may be very much worse." If, then, these outer performances are profane and foolish the conclusion will be irresistible that the inner work is more so.

THE TESTIMONY OF SECEDERS.

Having studied the works and the public services of these orders, the next step will be an examination of the testimony of those who have abandoned the orders. Respecting these men there is one thing particularly to be noted, that is the fact that the drunken, infidel, and immoral members of these orders never secede. They may become disgusted and leave, probably they sometimes do, but they never appear before the public to bear testimony against the institution which they have abandoned. The seceders are men like President Finney, Elder David Bernard, Dr. Nathaniel Colver and a host of others that might be named. There is almost no exception to this general rule. Hence the information which we have from the inside is the most reliable that we can get. If the seceding Masons, Odd-fellows, etc., do not tell the truth there are no men in the orders who can, for these seceders are the most truthful and upright men who go into the lodges.

Another remarkable fact in this connection, is that the revelations and the printed work of the orders agree. The manuals, monitors and handbooks are continually hinting at the things which the revelations say outright. No man can sit down and compare the two without seeing the marvelous exactness with which the one fits into the other. So notorious is this fact and so widely have the ceremonies become known that no Freemason of decent character pretends to deny the substantial correctness of the revelations. When I first lectured on these orders in 1869 Masonic ministers often denied the truth of the expose, but at the present all that is changed and men either say nothing or admit that ceremonies, obligations and penalties are substantially revealed. This is not saying that some ignorant or base man may not declare that, "Its all a lie," probably there are some such persons, but they are few in number and are rapidly diminishing.

We are now at a place were men must meet the case as it is. Mere looking wise and saying nothing; declaring that seceding Masons are perjured villains; and that outsiders know nothing about it, these arguments were never valuable and are now worth nothing at all.

FREEMASONRY IS A FAIR SPECIMEN of the various secret orders. Men often say, Why particularize Masonry? Why not speak of all secret societies, or at least change off once in a while? There are a number of reasons for so doing. Masonry is one of the oldest of these orders. It originated in 1717, about one hundred and sixty-two years ago, while most of these secret lodges are children of a day. Masonry is also the worst of these fraternities. Perhaps the Ku-klux klan should be excepted from this statement, but this is the only exception, if it be one. It is, once more, the parent of the rest. Odd-fellowship, the various temperance orders, the Knights of Pythias, etc., etc., are simply homeopathic doses of Freemasonry, done up to deceive the unwary, and some of the doses are nearly as bad as the original. The leading men in the inferior orders are Masons, and they use these orders simply as cat's paws to rake their own chestnuts out of the fire. These are a few of the reasons for making Freemasonry so prominent as we do in these discussions. To put it in one word, if we can get down the tree (Masonry), we can cut off the limbs (other secret orders) at our leisure.

ITS CEREMONIES ARE INDECENT.

To begin at the beginning, this church objects to this order because its ceremonies are silly, indecent and unchristian. To take a full-grown man, strip him to the verge of nudity, blindfold and cable-tow him, lead him around the lodge "on the square," cause him to kneel first on one knee, then on the other, then on both, to do all this in the presence and for the amusement of a set of men, many of whom are ignorant and immoral, is revolting to manhood, to say nothing about religion.

There is an old proverb which declares that men ought not to dispute about questions of taste. This proverb is a good one and we do not propose to dispute it. If men think that the rites above mentioned are elevating and beautiful, we have no quarrel with them over the matter. They don't seem so to us, and we bear testimony according to the light which we have. There is, however, one thing which leads us to suppose that our view of this feature is common to most members of the order. This thing is the care which has been taken to conceal the facts in the case, from the world. Ministers of the Gospel (?) members of churches (?) and moral men have joined hands with gamblers, saloon keepers, drunkards, and libertines, to keep these ceremonies secret. To accomplish their end they have not scrupled to employ slander, lying, and murder; this was true forty-six years ago, and it is true to-day. As long as there was the least hope of hiding the truth they tried to do it, and now that they cannot expect to succeed in this they retire in silence or simply laugh. Now if they did not think these ceremonies silly, indecent and unchristian, why should they exert themselves so strenuously to keep them hidden from the world?

ITS OATHS PROTECT CRIME.

This is true of Blue Lodge Masonry and is especially true of Chapter, or Royal Arch Masonry. The Master Mason swears to conceal all a brother Mason's crimes except murder and treason, and the Royal Arch Mason swears to conceal all his secrets without exception. How can such an oath be taken by an honest man? He swears to conceal adultery, arson, horse stealing, burglary, and every other crime, except murder and treason, if communicated to him on the square, when he takes the third degree, and all crimes when he takes the seventh.

It answers no good purpose for a man to say, that he would not think of doing such a thing; the question is not, "What will you do?" but "How does the oath read?" Now we know how the oath reads. Honest Masons admit that we know how it reads. No Mason of decent character thinks of denying that we know how it reads, and knowing how it reads we can tell what it means as well as the Mason can.

In perfect consistence with these oaths we find Masons all over the country committing crimes with impunity. Sham trials, sham imprisonments, or Masonic help that prevents even the sham trial,—these things are getting common as household words. It is perhaps more clearly evidenced in the South than anywhere else. There society is so permeated by these secret conspiracies against every thing good, that courts of law are like scare crows on which birds sit and sing.

ITS RELIGION IS CHRISTLESS.

That this is a religious system has been proved so many times that it seems perfectly needless to prove it again. It has altars, prayers, priests, hymns, baptisms and burials. It professes to teach piety, morality and manners. It guarantees its devotee an honorable life and a glorious eternity. I mean to say that this is the natural meaning of the words used in the text-books of the order. I might quote by the hour articles on "Prayer," "Religion," "Acacian," "Builder Smitten," etc., to prove this proposition but it is needless.

That this system is Christless is equally clear. It welcomes men who disbelieve in him. Saloon keepers and saloon patrons are bright and shining lights in the Masonic church of almost every village. Men who die of delirium tremens are sent straight to the Grand Lodge above. These and a hundred other facts patent even to the casual looker-on, prove that this Masonic religion is very different from that preached by the Master and Peter and Paul. Being different, it is, of course a rival religion, and since it is opposed to Christ we are opposed to it and expect to remain so until its character is changed. We have taken the Lord Jesus Christ as our all in all. His friends are our friends, his enemies our enemies; we are complete in him.

Proving this system of secretism, we find it bad, not good, and hence instead of holding it fast we throw it away. We have no malice toward those who differ from us in opinion. We would be glad to be of one mind on this subject if we could. But we are compelled to decide this matter on its merits and by the light which we have. So doing we find it totally bad,—ceremonies, oaths, penalties and religion, all bad. Finding it so we are compelled to warn men against it. Not to do so would be to prove false to our duty as watchmen on the walls of Zion. God help us all to bear a faithful testimony to his truth. Amen.

Influence of Newspapers.

A school teacher who had been a long time engaged in his profession, and witnessed the influence on a family of children, writes to an exchange as follows: "I have found it to be a universal fact, without exception, that those scholars of both sexes and all ages, who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who have not, are:

1. Better readers, excellent in pronunciation, and consequently read more understandingly.

2. They are better spellers; define words with ease and accuracy.

3. They obtain a practical knowledge of geography in almost half the time required of others, as the newspapers have made them acquainted with the location of important places of nations, their government, and doing on the globe.

4. They are better grammarians; for, having become so familiar with every style of newspapers, from the common-place advertisement to the finished and classical oration of the statesman, they more readily comprehend the meaning of the text, and consequently analyze its construction with accuracy.

5. They write better compositions, using better language, containing more thoughts more clearly and correctly expressed.

6. Those young men who have for years been readers of newspapers are always taking the lead in debating societies, exhibit a more extensive knowledge upon a greater variety of subjects, and express their views with greater fluency, clearness and correctness.—Christian Instructor.

Bro. Mathews on the Historic Ground in New York.

In accordance with a notice printed in the Cynosure and Free Methodist, I attended the semi-annual meeting of Niagara County Christian Association opposed to secret societies. Here I found men worthy of the profession of said notice; and as I look back to the meetings and partings history seems to repeat itself in this:—"And the Lord said, It is not good that man should be alone, I will make him a help meet for him;" the sisters are help meets for the men. God bless them.

En route for said meeting I spent a few days in and around Toronto, visiting relatives and friends, finding no open door, and none others are great and effectual (1 Cor. 16-9) I did no reform work only by preaching the Gospel. Friday, August 15, I left Toronto, crossing Lake Ontario, which was very rough and made me very sick. Surely I was not fleeing from the Lord as Jonah, neither was I thrown overboard, but landed safe at Niagara. The river parted me from the Fort where poor Morgan was confined and from which he was taken and sunk in the waters which bore me up. I trembled with anxiety to get to work, stirring public sentiment and so hastening the extirpation of so great an evil from the land. I found a train in waiting and was soon flying to the Suspension Bridge. This ride afforded a very pleasant view of the river and Falls, much better than any other I have enjoyed, though I have been to the Falls several times. On reaching the Bridge or Clifton as it is called, I fell among thieves, but lost nothing more than my train and so was discommoded. Thank God I was not wounded and left to die. The good Samaritan was money in my case. The hackman was unfortunate in boarding the wrong train that time. I am glad I had traveled before, if I had not they would have sent me to Buffalo en route for Ransomville.

Saturday at 5 A. M. I boarded my train and was soon at Bro. Ingleby's where God blessed us at family prayers. My visit was necessarily short and I was soon at Hess Road, where I found a team in waiting as promised and soon refreshed myself at the home of Bro. Parker. I found Sister Parker a staunch Free Methodist and regreting her husband's slowness to push out into the work of God. May her desire soon be realized. Amen.

Sabbath at 11 A. M. I preached for Bro. Mervin (Presbyterian) in view of Wright's tavern where Morgan's abducters were entertained. Here they drove the carriage into the barn. Then as now a capacious shed stood between the barn and house. It it not the same barn nor shed, but stands on the same ground. I am thus particular because Bro. Miller was called a liar by an Abiffite for so saying. Bro. Alberty took me home to dinner and then to Warren's Corners to an M. E. church where I preached again.

In my travels I was surely on historic ground. The closely curtained carriage in a sultry day (Yes, the narrative says: "It was an extremely warm day, and the singularity of the circumstances, that the curtains were all closed attracted attention." —Bernard's Light, page 358,) was driven over the same road, and at the junction of roads where stands the church that I preached in, the conspirators took the Youngstown road and soon arrived at Fort Niagara. I preached again in the evening to a full house, and much of the presence of God was among the people. Quite a number testified and so closed the most spiritual meeting of the past year, so the congregation told their pastor, who informed me. Thank God! Having preached three sermons and traveled seventeen miles, I was glad to rest at Bro. Hardy's.

Monday evening at 8 P. M. I lectured at Warren's Corners, where I was opposed by a Royal Arch Mason of Le Roy Chapter, and who, if he keeps his vow, is to debate the following in February next: "Resolved, That no man can be an adhering Mason and a Christian at the same time unless he can be a Christian and break God's commandments." Affirmative, Rev. E. Mathews.

Tuesday at 11 A. M. was held a was held a social meeting where God peculiarly blessed all present. I lectured at 2 P. M. and at 8 P. M. to appreciative and large audiences. So closed the Niagara county meeting of which you will receive a report from local brethren I trust.

Yours fraternally,
E. Mathews.

Dr. Cook to Friends in Indiana.

August 29.

I have been quite sick and am now in poor health, and being short in another respect I am not doing much in the way of lecturing. But you must not find fault with me, I am not idle; I am doing all I can for our annual meeting and I want your help. I have been to Whitley county and the friends there are preparing to come, also in DeKalb county; and from present indications we will have a big delegation from Lagrange. Letters are now beginning to come from Ohio and Indiana 200 miles away notifying me that they are coming. This is as it should be. Rev. Wm. Hoobler of Fountain county, writes me he will send his minister. Who else will do likewise?

Dr. Champ and Peter Rich write of their coming, also J. G. Mattoon of Ohio. All who are intending to come must write to me at once. One more suggestion. Why cannot Revs. Warren Taylor, J. T. Hobson, E. Mathews, Bro. Doesburg and others start and lecture their way through. We cannot promise to pay fares however glad to do so. Three years ago I started in cold December with thirty-two cents to go one hundred and sixty-seven miles to our meeting and I made it, too. Friends, come once more to the front; if you can't pay car fare, foot it! We want you. I want to see you again together. We must show to the world we are in earnest. We must put our work in better shape this fall or give up. In the name of all that is good, come!

Yours,
S. L. Cook.

A Few Stray Facts.

Cameron, W. Va.

Masonic murders are far more numerous than most people suppose, and a list of those who have been assassinated at the behests of the cable-towed craft, would embrace the names of persons in various ranks and walks of life. In a strictly literal sense, I may call the order of Free and Accepted Masons a murder manufactory. What means its revolting death penalities with their specific wording to make them as brutally inhuman as possible? What means the playing murder in the esoteric work of the third degree, and the pretended prayer over the candidate who plays that he has been murdered? These things are meant to school its votaries for the commission of the crime of taking human life. And well informed Freemasons are aware that hundreds, if not thousands, have lost their lives as victims of Masonic vengeance, and every few days some new name is added to the number of the slain, the lodge usually reporting the murdered men as suicides or as killed by accident.

On the 23d of June, the present year, (1879), as Jonathan W. Moss and I returned from an appointment, a gun was fired from a clump of bushes commanding a view of the road in a place where no person would be hunting for any kind of game. If either of us had been killed, the report would probably have been that the slain one was accidentally shot. Bro. Moss and I are both zealous Anti-masons, and the cable-towed craft are not specially inclined to desire that we may have long and useful lives. After the mysterious firing of the gun in question, we consulted as to the propriety of calling attention to the fact through some of the public prints, and thinking that perhaps the firing was simply done for a scare by somebody under lodge control, we concluded to wait awhile to see if the mystery would not be cleared up in some way. As the event remains still unexplained, and as a very virulent and unprincipled Freemason from Moundsville was in the neighborhood at the time, and as hints had been dropped that Turney or Moss, (one or both,) were likely soon to step out, the firing of that gun under the circumstances may justly receive a passing notice.

Soon after the event in question, a prominent Freemason in Cameron, W. Va., went back on his promise to let me have a copy of the report of the Grand Lodge of West Virginia, claiming that he had received special orders which forbade him to put that report into my hands, although he had said of his own accord in the presence of half a dozen men that he would give me a copy of that report without fail. The fact is, that people of this country do not understand how much vileness really lurks in the fraternity of Freemasons, and are too ready to accept of Masonic statements as true and Anti-masonic ones as false, without making any investigation for themselves. A few more cases of murder-shielding, like that of John L. Clayton, at Grafton, W. Va., ought to open the eyes of the people to the real spirit and purposes of the secret lodges.

In this fraternity (self-styled, "Freemasonry" in English, "Preimasonri" in Romaic,) we have an enemy to everything which is good or great.

While treating of the murderous and vile institution, invented by a set of monarchists and infidels in a London grog-shop, and which is aristocratic in all its features, and which is as false in all its pretenses as the Mormon religion, I find a place to insert the following clipping; "In Brazil there is a vine called the Matador or Murderer. It creeps along the ground till it meets a vigorous tree, when it fastens upon it, throws out its slender fingers, and clasps it in its murderous embrace. Climbing higher and higher, and growing stronger as it advances, it saps the life current of its victim, nor stays its course till the topmost bough is reached. When its work of death is done, it blooms and scatters its seeds for another murderous course."

The Masonic system of lodgery is one of the Matadors of the present age. The murderous vine which clasps or cable-tows those upon whom it fastens with hood-winking energy, until their religious trust in Christ withers away into the deadness of self-delusion, and every truly right conception of moral obligation dies under the deadly grasp of the poisonous plant—this Matador has wrapped itself around many churches and sapped the life-current of both ministry and membership, leaving a corrupt and decaying formality in the place of a spiritual and efficient Christianity. It is secret, subtle and insinuating in its advances. "It creeps along the ground." It kills laws without repealing them. It is full of underhandedness, yet always at work. It injects into the church worldliness and pride, and these pernicious saps of Satan supplant the sincere milk of Word and stop the flow of praise ascending and of grace descending. But the Matador continues to corrupt and destroy with its degrading, idolatrous and superstitious fingerings, (signs, grips, tokens and perfect points of entrance,) till the worship of the God of truth and purity is suppressed by the practical and theoretical impurities of the pagan and Masonic "points within the circle," of the vileness of which many persons have but little conception, and which the present article is not intended to particularly discuss.

THE REFORM SONG BOOK.

Bro. George W. Clark's new book of songs deserves especial notice, for the benefit of reformers, and for reform as well. Bro. Clark's early acquaintances will need no commendation for this new work. They can never forget how all the powers of their being were moved to their profoundest depths, while their tears and joys were mingled with the thunders of applause that greeted these wondrous songs as they rang out in the matchless voice of our brother in our Temperance, Anti-slavery and Reform conventions.

No living man had reason or occasion for infusing a more intense inspiration into these old ballads than Bro. Clark. Again and again his life was sought by, and miraculously saved from the rage of blood-thirsty men, rendered furious by the truths that blistered whatever they hit. Failing in all other attempts to break up one of his conventions, the exasperated sinners dragged a corpse from the grave in the night, and placed the ghastly form in the pulpit, where the convention was to be held. But a dead man was as powerless to break up a convention as "to tell tales."

Let all persons, therefore, who wish to avail themselves of the songs of a living martyr, do so now, and thus "help the cause along." The logic that burns, the eloquence of song, and the thunders of war, all acted their part in the overthrow of slavery. And Masonry is more vulnerable, if possible, to the keen edge of song, than intemperance or slavery. Then let us sing at the blasphemous tomfoolery, till it shall die of very shame. Every community blessed with a few Anti-masons should form a choir, secure a dozen of these books, and commence gathering converts. Remember, twelve copies for $3.35; three copies for $1; one copy 35 cents.

> And then no more by cable tows
> Or grips, or hoods that blind,
> Shall nended men by horrid oaths
> Seek light they never find.

Send in your orders to Dansville, N. Y., at once. Bro. Clark put me down for a score and four.

Let us prove by self-denial and labors of love that we are in earnest, and intend with the blessing of God, and by every means in our power to pull down these rookeries of Satan; and thus save the land from moral ruin. "Bis dat qui sito dat." (He gives twice, who gives quickly.)

UNPROFITBLE DEBATE.

WENONA, ILL., Aug. 23, 1879.

DEAR BRO. K:—I notice that there is a disposition on the part of some of your correspondents to continue the discussion of the question of "falling from grace." I have only to say that this is one of the points on which men's minds never have and never will be settled. In that remarkable book by Dr. Edward Beecher, "The Conflict of Ages," he enumerates the questions that the church has discussed with equal fervency on either side without ever reaching any conclusion, or with any other result than to embitter each other's minds.

It would be better that such discussion should stop. I am reminded of Will Carlton's old farmer, who wanted to separate from his wife:

> "The first thing I remember
> On which we disagreed,
> Was something concerning heaven—
> A difference in our creed.
> "We arg'ed the thing at breakfast,
> We arg'ed the thing at tea;
> And the more we arg'ed the question,
> The more we didn't agree.
> "So I have talked with Betsey,
> And Betsey has talked with me,
> And so we've argued together,
> That we can't never agree."

Now, lest a like unpleasant result shall come to us reformers, let us stop arguing this and like questions. The evils of such arguing are waste of time, alienation, bitterness, and sectarian discussions. The Hindoos have a proverb, "Though you bathe a dog's tail in oil and bind it up in splints, you cannot get the crook out of it." So it is with our peculiarities of belief; they will never live side by side all straight, smooth, and exactly alike. The Lord never meant that they should be so, and it tends greatly to promote and perpetuate that sectarian division which is the bane of the church, when we try to make them so.

I recently listened about three hours to a learned D. D. who had written a book to prove that the coming of our Lord took place at the destruction of Jerusalem, and that it not a future event. I tried to get him interested in our anti-secret reform, but he had no time nor thought for it. Impracticable abstractions consume the time and energies of those who ought to have something better to do. In this sore and terrible conflict we have no time for mock battles among ourselves. My eyes fall on this beautiful prayer which let us make our own: "Thou eternal God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who art clothed with all perfection, and whose eyes are too pure to behold iniquity, but who art full of patience and long suffering, breathe thine indulgent spirit into those who themselves need it so much from thee. Teach them tolerance of those whom thou dost tolerate. Give to them the disposition of Jesus Christ, who, satisfied with a pure intention and an honest will, waits long for what he might demand at once. Teach us like him to look upon the heart, upon what is essential, and not upon vain circumstances. Enlarge our heart, tear away the prejudices and pride that have narrowed its utterance, and grant that those whom thou hast given us as brethren, may there find an asylum and home, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen." Yours in Christ, H. H. HINMAN.

THANK GOD FOR DELIVERANCE.

The following is the good testimony of an aged veteran in our late war, who received distinguished academical degrees from Trinity College, Dublin. He is now in the National Home for disabled veterans, from whence he writes, for the encouragement of any who may be struggling with an evil habit:

N. H. D. V. S., MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 26, 1879.

ESTEEMED SIR:—Your admirable endeavor to superinduce total abstinence, encourages me to thus correspond, hoping to contribute a mere mite towards that most desirable habit.

Many years ago I resolved, at three different times, to abandon the use of tobacco, but having made the determination in mine own strength I was incapable of persisting in the good course, so I continued in gratifying any evil propensity for a space of fifty-two years. However, upon my presenting fervent and sincere appeals to the throne of grace I received abundant power of self-denial, to forsake the deleterious habit, just as the Lord had previously enabled me to relinquish the use of intoxicants.

Let any spell-bound slave of intemperance or other wrong doing apply in filial sincerity for the needful help, and he will find, to his unutterable joy, the truth to be, "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me."

Wishing a happy release to all temptedsouls, I have the honor to subscribe myself, yours most respectfully,

ROBT. VINCENT.

FAITH.

CAWKER CITY, Kans.

I have now lived in this wicked world a little more than half a century; and from the earliest period of my recollection up to the present time, the word faith has been a subject of controversy and argument among Christian ministers. One has said, Faith is the gift of God. Another says, We can believe: we can exercise faith ourselves. The controversy has been incessant, while neither party has gained the victory. The minister's work is to explain the Word of God. Then I ask is this controversy among God's ministers best? Is it necessary? Is it right? If aman asks God how is to explain a text, he will show him. If another asks light on the same text, God will give him the same light of course: and if all the ministers went to him for instruction, this controversy upon Scripture would cease. Then, indeed, would we "walk by the same rule, mind the same thing, and teach the same doctrine."

Now let us look into the law of the Lord and see what it says about faith. There are some texts that seem to prove that God is the author of our faith: that he gives us faith. "According as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." Rom. 12:3. "To another is given faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit." 1st Cor. 12:9. "Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith from God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." Eph. 6:23. "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." Heb. 12:2. "And exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." Jude.9.

Then there are other texts that seem to teach that we can always exercise faith ourselves without the help of God. "Then touched he their eyes saying, according to your faith be it unto you." Mat. 9:29. "He saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe." Mark 5:36. "Whatsoever things ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Mark 11:24. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." Acts 16: 31. "But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." Rom. 4:5 "That ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel." Phil. 1:27.

Now shall we allow these texts to contradict each other, as theologians have for many years past; or shall we try to harmonize them by the light of the Spirit? There are some things that we can believe for, without the help of God. For instance: when Jesus was here upon the earth healing everybody that came to him, a man could without divine help, believe that he would heal the sick. But, for example when a Christian tries to believe for the blessing of sanctification; for the cleansing blood right down into his heart from the glory-world, he will need the help of the Lord before he reaches the fountain. To illustrate: a father takes his little girl and leads her out into the orchard. They pass under a tree loaded with beautiful fruit. The little girl reaches up her hand and stands on tiptoe, and tries hard to pick an apple, but her arm is too short. The father willing to gratify his child; takes her in his arms, lifts her up and she picks the apple. Just so it is with the Christian when he tries to believe for any great blessing from above. He reaches up the hand of faith, and tries hard to grasp the thing that he asks for. God lifts him up and he takes the desired boon; and he thinks by his own faith he brought the blessing down. We must always struggle to believe and if we ask for a proper thing, God will always (if necessary) help our faith, and give us whatever we desire. So we see all the texts I have quoted are true and harmonize. We believe, and God gives us faith. Hence faith may be defined, An effort of our own will aided by the Spirit of God. St. Paul says, "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Eph. 4: 12, 13. That is what we want, unity of faith; all believe the Word of God alike; then what harmony there would be among the children of God.

OUR MAIL.

J. W. Cain, Whitewater, Wis., writes: "I like the Cynosure, and feel as though I would do wrong to have it stopped. I hope to get some more subscribers here before long."

S. C. Rice, Aztalan, Wis., writes: "I will try to be at the State meeting at Evansville. I regard the editorials of the Cynosure alone worth the cost of the whole paper. Hope I can be situated so as to do more in our cause."

Willis Porter, Warrensburg, Mo., sends for books and tracts, and writes:

"I want to work with my colored friends in Warrensburg, Johnson Co., Mo. I read the Cynosure that my daughter took last year. I am treading the wine-press alone."

Thos. C. Haines, Glencoe, Org., writes: "Secrecy has little or no opposition here. The grange has taken most of the people here. Our M. E. minister, who appears to be one of the best of men, is a Mason. I intend he shall know of the Cynosure, and if he is really seeking light, I think he will find it there."

E. B. Bell, Syracuse, Ind., writes:

"Frequently when I receive the Cynosure and Herald of Gospel Freedom, I run over them and see the good news they contain, and then fall on my knees and pray for their success. May God prosper you in this great reform work."

James Barningham, Apple River, Ill., writes:

"Our M. E. preacher in charge, Rev. J. W. Liberton, is an Odd-fellow; our Presiding Elder, Dr. Moore, of Polo, Ill., is a Mason and also an Odd-fellow, N. G. I withhold all support from such preachers and doctors. I hate their institutions. I count them enemies of God's cause. But,

'May we learn the art
With meekness to reprove,
To hate the sin with all our heart,
But still the sinner love.'"

LESSON XXXVII.—Sept. 14, 1879.—THE CHRISTIAN IN THE WORLD.

SCRIPTURE.—1 Tim. 6: 6-16.

6. But godliness with contentment is great gain.

7. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

8. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content.

9. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

11. But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

12. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

13. I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession.

14. That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15. Which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords;

16. Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen.

GOLDEN TEXT.—They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. —John, 17: 16.

[From International Quarterly.]

Define the word godliness (God-likeness). What do we need with it? What is contentment? Some have thought the word signifies "sufficiency," or what we need. What reason is given in verse 7? That is, all we acquire is a loan to us from God. What is meant by "food and raiment in verse 9? Read how this is explained in Heb., 13: 5-6. The meaning is, a little with God is far better than much without God. What other reasons can you give for this? Read Psalms 34: 10.

What does "they that will be rich" mean? He does not say those who are rich, for a man may be rich and yet serve God. But the passion for riches is a temptation. What is a snare? Name some foolish and hurtful lusts (that is, desires and sins). How are men drowned in destruction and perdition? What is the root of all evil? Notice, it is the love of it, the desire for it, the wishing to be rich, that is the root of evil, and a very poor person may have this. How is this described? 1. Covcted (greatly desired.) 2. Erred (or wandered) from faith. 3. Pierced through with sorrow. Draw the root, the tree and the fruit of this picture. What is the man of God to do? (verse 11). "Flee" and "follow" what?

"Flee" from temptation, do not parley with it. "Follow" godliness; have some noble aim, "fight the good fight of faith." What battle is this? Who are the enemies? How is it fought? What is "laying hold on eternal life?" As a rope, if you were in the sea; as a hand, if you were in danger; as a gift, offered by God. What is said about that life? What is the good profession? Who are the witnesses? What is the charge?

Four things—contented with God, fleeing from temptation, fighting the battle, waiting for the glory. When will this be? (verse 14). What will it be? (verse 15). It will all be seen by and by. What reason is found in verse 15 for all the rest? What is said of God in verse 16? And yet, in his own time, all this shall be seen and shared by those who love him.

GENERAL NOTES.

7. "We brought nothing into the world." Worldly possessions are not our lawful property, but a loan at our birth to be surrendered at death.—Lange. 8. "Let us be therewith content." Having food and raiment, of which Christ's followers may be sure; let us be content for riches do not necessarily bring happiness, but often bring temptations and snares. 10. "And pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Many have been so filled with the love of money, and the desire for riches, that they have erred from the faith, and have fallen into sin, that they might gain riches. Failing in their aim, they are led to see their mistakes, and are filled with sorrow. 14. "Without spot." Pure from sin. "Until the appearing of our Lord." Until that day when the Lord comes for his own.

CONTENTMENT.

Contentment is not lazy shiftlessness, or dull indifference to improvement; it is a calm satisfaction with the things of this life, which God has bestowed on us—a state of mind which manifests itself in freedom from murmuring and complaint. The Apostle is speaking of Christians, for they only have godliness or piety. No one can be contented with a life of sin and its consequences. Those who rest in God's loving care are the only ones who can be content. But even Christians sometimes find it difficult to exercise this grace. Paul himself tells us, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." It is a lesson which must be learned. To help us learn it, the Apostle mentions some reasons, which should lead to contentment.

1. We should be content, because contentment with its necessary companion is great gain (v. 6). It is the possession most to be desired, for it does more to promote happiness than wealth can do.

2. We should be content, because worldly possessions can be enjoyed only a little while (v. 7). We brought neither clothing, nor jewels, nor gold, nor property of any kind, with us into the world (Job 1: 21); and it is just as evident that we can take nothing with us when we leave the earth (Ps. 49: 17). Our possessions are only lent to us for a few days; and it is the height of folly to worry ourselves about those things which we must shortly leave behind.

3. We should be content, because those wants which worldly possessions can supply are few (v. 8). Our real wants are fewer than we sometimes think. The greatest estate can give to its possessor only food, raiment and shelter; and a very small estate can furnish equally nourishing food, suitable raiment, and comfortable shelter. And if our few real wants are supplied we ought to be satisfied.

4. We should be content, because there are many evils which grow out of discontentment (vs. 9, 10). The discontented are described not as those who are rich, but as those that will be rich; that is, those who are determined to be rich, no matter what may be necessary in order to accomplish this end. It is not wealth, but the inordinate desire for wealth which is so dangerous. Those discontented ones who cherish the desire to be rich as their leading purpose, find it difficult to be honest; they fall into temptation; they are tempted to do sinful things to gain wealth. They fall into a snare; they become involved in care, worldliness and sin, as a bird is entangled in the meshes of the fowler's net. They fall into many lusts or inordinate desires, such as fondness for display, feasting, the social glass, bad company and riotous living.

These desires are foolish, because they are contrary to reason; they are hurtful, because they are injurious to the body and the soul; they drown men in destruction and perdition. The figure is that of a sinking ship. A controlling desire to be rich brings a man to destruction here, and perdition hereafter. It leads to the total ruin of happiness, of virtue, of reputation, and of the soul; for the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil. The Apostle does not mean that all sins grow out of avarice, for there are some evils which cannot be traced to this source; for example, the evils which grow out of ambition, intemperance, sensuality, hatred to God, etc. His meaning is that all kinds of evil grow out of the love of money. It should be observed that it is not money, but the love of money which is the great source of evil in the world. No one can doubt the truth of this. Illustrations are too numerous and too well known. Many in Ephesus and in every other city have coveted after wealth, and they have erred from the faith, wandered off from all the hopes and joys which faith in Christ would have given. These covetous ones have also pierced themselves through with many sorrows. Their sorrows have wounded them through and through on every side. There is a sufficient commentary on these words in the fearful remorse of the many defaulters of the present day, who have abused their trusts and ruined their hopes for this life and the next. If such evils grow out of discontentment, we should learn to be content with such things as we have.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPT. 4, 1879.

What is Proposed for the Congregational Churches.

After saying that such evils as these are inseparably connected with the lodge: waste of time and money, frequent substitution of another religion than that of Christ, and dangerous and corrupting interference with elections, legislation and courts, the Advance answers our question, how it is proposed to relieve the churches of this load, with the following:

"The Cynosure inquires how the Advance proposes to rid the churches of the incubus of the lodge. We do not arrogate to ourselves much power in this matter. Probably what we may do or say will seem to the special advocates of the anti-lodge movement almost a work of supererogation since it will be so little as compared with the Cynosure. But we have great confidence in the principle so well stated by Dr. Bushnell, "the expulsive power of a new affection." If we can do anything to promote the love of Christ and his church we shall expect that that will tend directly to lessen the hold of the lodge upon the members; and as the churches show themselves more and more adapted to save men, and thus extend their general influence in the communities where they exist, we shall hope to see the lodge become less and less a substitute for the church. We are not convinced that harsh words or ecclesiastical discipline against those who may be both members of the church and of the lodge would be expedient or effective."

The State Congregational Association of Illinois in 1846 exhorted Christians to have no fellowship with an organization which, in the words of the Advance, frequently substitutes itself for the church. If the Advance in the above truly represents the sentiment of the Illinois Association to-day, that body has no doubt gone back on its former position toward the lodge.

We believe, too, in the "expulsive power of a new affection," but see no reason to hope that any new affection will ever expel a sin which Christian teachers not only fail to rebuke but with which they are in willing fellowship. In no way can any evil practice be more heartily endorsed than by saying that it does not deserve church discipline. The course recommended by the Advance filled the churches of the South with slaveholders and would fill all the churches with Freemasons.

Rank Ecclesiasticism.

The letter of the clerk of the Wheaton Congregational church and the reply found in our religious columns deserves careful notice. Nothing probably has been printed that will give the public a clearer view of the Wheaton difficulty.

It shows in brief a minority body of a divided church setting itself to dictate to the whole ecclesiastical world what shall be done with the College church, a body whose membership and congregations are about thrice the number, and which has been owned of God with gracious revivals of religion. By means of the fraudulent action of that minority church, endorsed by the local and State Congregational Associations, the attempt has been made to place the editor of this paper in the position of a church outcast. But to see on how slender a thread this ecclesiastical ring has built its cob-house provokes surprise and grief that men should so easily allow themselves to be deceived. The whole rests on the non-recognition of the body worshiping in the College as a Christian church. When it shall be, the fabric falls to pieces to the shame and exposure of its builders. To prevent such recognition seems to be the chief end of the Wheaton Congregational church; and its efforts appear in the letter before us; in letters to railroad officials, to prevent customary favors to Prof. Blanchard; in threats of discipline to its members for attending at the College, etc., etc., we have not room nor wish for more. Probably twenty letters have been granted by the College church, and in every case but that of Dr. Goodwin's church in this city, they have been received and the church issuing them thus recognized. By but two churches, therefore, has this recogniton been refused—and we doubt if Dr. Goodwin allowed a vote of his members. But recognition of the College church means recognition of President Blanchard as a member of it, and so the great ado by the ex parte council ring echoed in the Elgin and State Associations will in the end only trouble those who made it.

—The editor of the Cynosure, accompanied by Mrs. Blanchard, returned from Peoria last Wednesday. He is still quite feeble, having experienced a partial relapse since his return; but is not wholly confined to his room. A long rest will be necessary from active labors in the College and our reform work before full restoration to health is expected. Let the friends everywhere request this blessing of the Lord.

—The expositions and county convention at Warren and Nora, Jo Daviess county last week, are reported successful and the friends are much encouraged. Bro. Stoddard with Elders Rathbun and Browne will attend the Wisconsin State meeting this week at Evansville.

—We find the following paragraph in an exchange: "The Rev. Mr. Ross of East Williams, Ontario, Canada, has forbidden Freemasons to approach the communion table in his church, on the ground that at Masonic funerals the name of Christ is not used in supplications to Deity." Probably this is only part of the truth. Freemasonry being opposed to Christ as a system was the reason of the prohibition. The omission of the name of Christ at Masonic funerals is but one of the facts that establish the anti-Christian character of the order.

—Minnesota friends are getting their work into shape gradually. Bro. Edward Mathews of Michigan, has been engaged, or rather the negotiation seems nearly completed by which he will enter on the State lecture work. The brethren of the Northwest will find Bro. M. an earnest and ready man full of faith and the Holy Ghost.

—Bro. J. W. Moss of Cameron, West Virginia, lately visited Mount Pleasant, across the border in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and as his custom is, the tracts were freely scattered along the way. On Lord's day, August 10th, he spoke to a full house in Bridgeport. These friends, Turney and Moss, are making a center of light in their part of W. Virginia. "May their tribe increase."

—After reading the Voice of Masonry for a few months one would very naturally expect to find a man who had passed on through thirty-two or thirty-three degrees of such distinguished morality, and had tasted all the excellencies of the order in an official career beginning in the subordinate lodge and reaching to Past Grand Master of the Illinois Masons—one would be constrained to expect in such a person, we repeat, the highest excellence of conduct, a perfect pattern of manhood, a model for the race. But what estimate must be made of Masonry when D. C. Creger, who has scaled the hights of Masonic glory, is seen playing cards in the smoking car all the way from Chicago to St. Charles, just like a common sinner.

—The Herald of Gospel Freedom (Church of God) is much interested in the approaching State Convention in Indiana, and advises the Eldership of that church to be represented by delegate in the meeting. Dr. Cook, the State Agent, lately called on Elder Bowman, the editor, on his way to Lima.

—A brother in Michigan writes to the general agent and secretary of the N. C. A., for tracts to be sent to a friend, "a bright Mason, and considered one of the best workers." He lately had a conversation with this friend who thought he could be a good Christian and a Mason at the same time; but our brother proved to him his mistake, that Masonry was a fraud and a lie from the beginning. The truth had its blessed effect, the mistaken friend left with tears beseeching the brother to pray for him. May God bless every such effort. Why should not the workers in our reform undertake more of this work; especially those who have tasted the bitterness of the lodge system and know that it is spiritual death? In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ and by the power of the Holy Ghost, brethren, engage everywhere in this good work. For to us is "committed the ministry of reconciliation."

—The Missouri State meeting will be held during the week beginning October 5th. An urgent request to Bro. H. H. Hinman for a month's work in that State has been responded to favorably. He will go to Missouri immediately after the Wisconsin State meeting, which he hopes to attend. He returned home on Friday last, greatly encouraged with the feeling of the brethren visited in respect to a free mission work.

—As a significant token to the Advance that the discussion of the Masonic question is becoming "national," the Hartford, Conn., Evening Post of August 14th, contains an article which would make between two and three columns of this paper, entitled "Secrets of Masonry." The article is reprinted from the Truth of London, England, and begins with this sentence from the great Times newspaper of that city: "Perhaps, if Freemasons disclosed their secrets they would lose little worth keeping and the world would acquire little worth acquiring." The writer in the Truth goes on to say that he is not a Mason but has often amused himself by passing for one. He describes minutely the arrangement of a lodge room, the formalities of opening and the initiation of the three degrees, quoting part of the oath, with a few trifling variations from the ritual as published in "Freemasonry Illustrated." We say it is significant when influential papers of this class begin to print Masonic expositions.

—An Amherst, Va., letter tells a queer story in which the painful and ludicrous are strangely mingled. An old and highly esteemed colored woman died, and her funeral took place at Union Hall church in Amherst county. The old lady was a member of a secret order known as the Society of the Sisters of Sarah, who asserted their privilege to attend to the burial services and provide their preacher for the occasion. The relatives, however, unwilling to yield their natural rights, ordered otherwise and provided another person to conduct the exercises, and got him into the pulpit first. The house was filled with an immense crowd when the funeral concourse arrived. A dispute arose about the preacher. The "Sisters of Sarah" threatened to throw the strange man out of the window. A fierce fight followed in which men and women joined; the coffin was knocked over and the body rolled upon the floor. The relatives were victorious at last and drove the troublers of their peace from the house to the injury of several parties. The preacher meantime had fled but the services proceeded. The row in the Masonic camp over the Rounseville case falls little short of this Virginia difficulty. The Voice of Masonry yet fills column after column with its attacks on White, the Knight Templar who has been suspended from office in the order for his lack of Masonic zeal in the matter.

Exchange Notes.

—The officical report on the condition of labor and laborers in Europe just published by the State department, will afford interesting and profitable reading for our working people. One of the conclusions arrived at is that "more misery results from strikes, drinking, socialism and communism, in England and in Germany, than from all other causes combined, hard times included." Here is a startling fact which should be remembered by every working man when he is tempted to follow the lead of the reckless agitators who are constantly seeking to stir up strife in this country between employer and employed.—Christian Instructor.

—In an editorial article on the struggle between the Romish church and Freemasonry in Brazil, the Christian Statesman has this reference to the great work of the National Christian Association:—"The Freemasons now have triumphed and the church will doubtless lose the hold she has heretofore maintained upon the government. But the Masonic order, which itself carefully avoids any recognition or acknowledgement of Christianity, will not favor such recognition by the State. There is imminent danger, therefore, that the Brazilian Empire in repudiating its connection with Popery will repudiate the Christian religion. Events like this set in a clear light the importance of the work which the National Reform Association and kindred agencies seek to do in America, and which America must yet do for the other nations of the earth. Among these kindred agencies none is more important than the movement in opposition to Freemasonry and other anti-Christian secret societies, whose influence is as pernicious in the United States as in Brazil."

—The Telescope has a very important note on the "Secrecy Question at Chautauqua:" "This question will come to the front everywhere, no matter who tries to keep it down. At the Chautauqua assembly it has repeatedly come up in the various exercises of that great gathering. In one of the meetings it was asked What are the false religions of the world? Among other answers it was replied by Rev. L. N. Stratton that Freemasonry is one. Hisses and other commotion followed. But Bro. Stratton established his point by quoting authority. In another meeting it was asked who built Solomon's temple. Some one replied that the Freemasons built it, and there was no objection raised. In a lecture on theological education, Dr. James Strong, of Drew, used the following language: 'From the days of the Egyptian and Eleusinian mysteries down to those of Freemasonry and Spiritualism, inauguration into successive profundities of awful secrets has been the highest ambition and labor of a life-time.' From this we suppose that the Dr. places Masonry in the same list with Egyptian mysteries, Spiritualism and other false religions. If Dr. Strong and Bro. Stratton are the guides of Chautauqua on this question, the outlook there is hopeful. But we have reason to fear that Dr. Vincent and others of influence there are not to be looked to for any help in the proper treatment of the secrecy question."

—The Lutheran Standard quotes a paragraph from Dr. Hall which justly claims the attention of Drs. Humphrey and Goodwin of this city when they remember Marquette. In speaking of the liberalism of many Protestants the Standard says: "Even Romanism, notwithstanding all its anti-Christian abominations is regarded as a form of Christianity to be fraternally tolerated as at most a weakness into which good men may fall, and its condemnation is thought uncharitable. The words of Dr. Hall are worthy of note in this regard. He says: 'If any one supposes that mere traditional dislike of Romanism will protect men from it he makes a grave mistake. It is well adapted to the human heart, and its arguments plausibly put to the ignorant and producing a revulsion—as if an innocent and beautiful system had been calumniated—will secure a favorable judgment. We have to teach the people on the subject of apostacies of whatever kind, according to Paul's directions to Timothy. Failing in this we fail to be good ministers of Jesus Christ. It is true, men of the world; ambitious men, with an eye to the 'Catholic vote;' sordid men, with an eye to the 'Catholic' dollar, will dislike this, and with a fine æsthetic assumption will pronounce it ungentlemanly or narrow-minded. But whenever ministers come to the acceptance of their standard they may as well retire.' "

Literary Notices.

The Evangelical Repository, always sound and judicious, feels the pressure of the new management, and grows month by month in value and influence for good. Several issues have contained articles on the lodge question of force, originality and true merit. It is a review in which the United Presbyterian brethren may take a just pride and whose circulation should be wider than denominational lines. The September number contains: "The College and the Church," by Dr. Wallace; "Training and Education" by Dr. Jeffers; "The Psalms," by Rev. R. B. Taggart; "The Prodigal Son," by Rev. J. A. Grier and "The Charity of the Secret Orders Compared with the Charity of the Gospel," by Rev. N. E. Brown. The Sabbath-school department is always good and to it the Cynosure is much indebted. R. Stewart & Co., publishers, Philadelphia; $1.50 per year.

—The Holyoke Manufacturer is a new monthly devoted to manufacturing interests, especially those gathered about Holyoke, Mass. It is rich in the latest and best information respecting the immense business interests of the country. Published at $1.00 by Walden & Conley, Holyoke, Mass.

—Vick's Monthly for September is a rich floral offering. A finely illustrated article describes the publisher's farm near Rochester where his flower seeds are grown and prepared for market. The hyacinth has a special article and letters from many readers full of suggestions and sketches that are of the greatest value to the gardner fill the pages. James Vick, publisher, Rochester, N. Undenominational Free Missions.

The Associated Churches of Christ are not a sect. It is hoped that they will never become one. A missionary organization that shall represent them ought not, and can not have a denominational character.

It is eminently desirable that we should have such an undenominational missionary organization for the following reasons: First, the work of Christian reform is one in which all Christians are interested, and in which all are entitled to bear a part. Those who feel that their proper religious home is in one of the denominations ought not to feel compelled to sacrifice that home while they unite with us to build up not a rival sect, but to seek for that wisdom that is first pure and then peaceable, as the guiding and animating principle of all churches.

2d. Such an undenominational missionary organization would be a standing protest against the spirit of sectarianism so contrary to the mind of Christ, but which, more than all other things, blinds the eyes of Christians to the necessity of and hinders the progress of our reform. True Christian union, the aspiration of every truly Christian heart, and the prayer of our Saviour can never be secured by working for a denomination. It is the corruptions in the churches that have caused the divisions, and the divisions in turn perpetuate the corruptions. Purity is the first condition of peace. Reform the churches and they can come together, not as members of a sect, but as parts of the body of Christ, and as members one of another.

3d. We have several missionary societies which have as a part of their denominationtial work the promotion of our reform. They all deserve far more sympathy and aid than they are likely to receive, but they must fail of securing the end in view, because they are denominational. We could not all be Wesleyans, or Covenanters if we would; simply because education and conviction has made us something different; but we can all unite the work of reform which those denominations have at heart.

4th. There is a large and increasing number of Christians who can not give to the support of the denominational mission boards of the churches with which they are connected, because such mission boards commission Freemasons and other wrong-doers, and aid churches that refuse to execute discipline. Such Christians will hail with joy an undenominational missionary society that sustains a pure Gospel; and there is a large number of Christian ministers, who, breaking through the trammels of denominational restraint, do not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, and therefore suffer reproach and often the loss of all things. These will gladly hail any Christian sympathy and any material aid which a reform missionary society can give them.

And lastly, there are many locally independent and many undenominational churches which have no "home" but in the heart of Christ, who would find in such an undenominational missionary society that unity and liberty which would make them one without being a sect, and enable them to "bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

From Bro. Michael—A Correction.

On the day of my trial I was compelled to leave Jersey City before the verdict was rendered. I was assured, however, that the result of the investigation would at once be sent to me. I supposed that this meant a correct copy of the committee's report; but here I was mistaken, for the letter simply stated that the charge was sustained and that I was suspended until the next session of my conference. I then wrote to my presiding elder, who was the president of the trial and the author of the letter referred to, asking for a copy of the report which would state whether all the specifications were sustained, and if all were not sustained, which one was rejected. To this I received the following reply:

"The verdict of the committee was, that ALL the specifications were sustained, and that the specifications thus sustained, sustained the charge. All voted thus in regard to the first and third specifications and the charge. One voted otherwise in regard to the second specification. The committee suspended you.

"W. Tunison.

"Jersey City, Aug. 16, '79."

This is the information upon which is based what I said concerning that part of the second specification which referred to the lecture at Frenchtown and any one can see that, if the presiding elder's statements are true, my conclusion was strictly correct.

In response to an earnest request, I have just received from the same source a verbatim copy of the report, in which I read that that part of the second specification which refers to the lecture was not sustained. Here is a contradiction. The presiding elder's statement is untrue, or he has incorrectly copied the report. Believing the report to be correct, I have written this in order to avosd even the appearance of unfairness.

Home Circle.

Sabbath Evening.

How calmly sinks the parting sun!
Yet twilight lingers still,
And b autiful as a dream of heaven
It slumbers on the hill;
Earth sleeps, with all her glorious things,
Beneath the Holy Spirit's wings,
Ard, rendering back the hues above,
Seems resting in a trance of love.

Round yonder rocks the forest trees
In shadowy gronps recline,
Like saints at evening bowed in prayer
Around their holy shrine;
And through their leaves the night winds blow
So calm and still—their music low,
Seems the mysterions voice of prayer
Soft echoed on the evening air.

And yonder western throng of clonds,
Retiring from the sky,
So calmly move, so softly glow,
They seem to fancy's eye
Bright creatures of a better sphere,
Come down at noon to worship here,
And from their sacrifice of love
Returning to their home above.

The blue isles of the golden sea,
The light arch floating high,
The fl>wers that gaze upon the heavens,
The bright streams leaping by,
Are living with religion--deep
On earth and sea its glories sleep,
And mingle with the starlight rays
Like the soft light of parted days.

The spirit of the holy eve
Comes through the silent air
To feeling's hidden spring, and wakes
A gush of music there!
And the far depths of ether beam
So passing fair, we almost dream
That we can rise and wander through
Their open paths of trackless blue.

Each soul is filled with glorious dreams,
Each pulse is besting wild,
And thought is nearing to the shrine
Of glory undefiled!
And holy aspirations start
Like blessed angels from the heart,
And bind—for earth's dark ties are riven—
Our spirits to the gates of heaven.

The Old, Old Music.

The New Testament is the Christian's chief book. It contains two hundred and sixty chapters. But in these chapters the Lord's coming is named three hundred and eighteen times. There are, therefore, more allusions to the second coming of Christ than there are chapters. This being so, why is it that the professed disciples of him who is to return are so reluctant to think and speak of his appearing? Why are they so shy and still, so reticent and dumb, or so apathetic and indifferent—not to say often hostile—when this eminently Scriptural topic is introduced? In private I have seen their lips instantly close when I spoke of Christ's coming. In public religious meetings I may have been frowned down for quoting Scriptures relating to this last glorious event. There is nothing that will shut the mouths of a company of lukewarm professors, and send a chill to their hearts so quickly as to introduce into a parlor-circle this tabooed theme. Who can explain this state of things with thousands in the church? Can we love an absent Saviour and not desire his presence? Can we love an unseen Lord and not long to see him? Can the thought of Christ far away in heaven be pleasant, and at the same time the thought of him near at hand and visible, be irksome and dreaded? Is not that Christianity to be suspected that indulges itself in such contrarities? In fine, is it not a Christian grace to love our dear Lord's appearing? 2 Tim. iv: 8.

Beloved, we are to think of whatsoever things are pure; and is not that epiphany pure? We are to comfort one another with these words (1 Thess. iv: 13–18)—were not the words all about that advent? Is the wife loyal to her lord who dislikes, when he is absent, to think or speak of his return? When the Lord ascended and angels proclaimed his return; when Paul wrote to the church at Thessalonica, and they wrongly interpreted his letter as teaching an instant coming; when the closing promise, "I come quickly,"—his latest message,—was first read by the early believers, I doubt not "Maranatha!" "The Lord cometh!" was shouted from mouth to mouth, and all hearts thrilled with thoughts and hopes of "that last advent long desired!" He that doubted that coming was an anti-Christ; he that failed to love it, an apostate.

Where now is this old, first love? Tertullian wrote that the judgment trump perpetually sounded its solemn, joyful strain in his ears. What wonder, when, as often as once in every chapter, as often as if it were on every page of the sacred Letters, there is the ringing cry, "Behold, He cometh!"

In sympathy with this Scriptural expectation, Luther said to a friend, "I would readily eat up this necklace (of white agate) to-day for the judgment to come to-morrow," while Calvin, catching the same spirit said, "Ardently desire the day of Christ's coming." "I half call his absense cruel—O when shall we meet?" cried Rutherford. "If the Lord return not, I profess myself undone," signed Alleine. With exulting pertinence, Baxter asks, "Would it not rejoice your hearts if you were sure to live to see the coming of the Lord?" Do you respond affirmatively? In harmony with these divine echoes from the past, how refreshing to hear this strain of music taken up and prolonged by a few to-day. Cumming, Spurgeon, Bonar, Muller, Radstock, Varley, Palmer, Guinness, Brooks, Burnham, Tyng, Seiss, Bosworth, Buddington, and Moody: God bless them for echoing the old glad message—"The Lord cometh."

The Earl of Shaftesbury says that "for many years the coming of the Lord has been on his heart, and in his inmost soul, as the very joy of his life." "It is more Christian-like and Scriptural," writes Dr. Buddington, "to think of the coming of Christ than of the coming of death. Near as the last is, the first may be nearer." "The sooner Christ comes, the better," echoes Dr. T. H. Stockton. "The glorious doctrine is reviving again throughout all Christendom," writes Dr. E. P. Marvin. God grant it! we cry. "Thy saints shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power." Psa. cxlv: 11.—The Christian.

Defying the Resurrection.

A young German countess was a noted unbeliever, and especially opposed to the doctrine of resurrection. She died when about thirty years of age, and before her death gave orders that her grave should be covered with a solid slab of granite; that around it should be placed square blocks of stone, and that the corners of it should be fastened together with iron clamps, and these should be fastened to the granite slab. Workmen made the tomb as secure as possible. Upon the covering this inscription was placed, "The burial place purchased to all eternity must never be opened." All that human power could do was done to prevent any change in that grave. God frustrated this design of this impious woman, and of these builders. He permitted a single seed from a tree to fall into a crevice of this tomb. It grew; the rain nourished it. Between the granite slab and the stone walls of the tomb it steadily grew, forcing its way until the iron clamps were torn assunder, and the granite lid raised, and is now resting on the trunk of a tree, which is large and flourishing. People of Hanover regard it with almost a kind of superstition, and speak in lowest tones of the wicked countess.

A similar injunction was given respecting a tomb at New Haven, on which is piled enormously heavy stones, the occupant in his lifetime having planned this scheme to defy the resurrection power of God. The above is from the Christian Herald, and shows the folly of mortals who disavow the teachings of the Bible. "The weakness of God is stronger than men." A tiny seed, sown without hands, opens the tomb which was to be closed to all eternity. Such persons forget that he who is the resurrection and the life had his tomb sealed and watched by night and by day, yet all in vain. A mighty angel rolled away the stone and sat upon it, and the keepers became as dead men. There shall be a resurrection both of the just and unjust, and no power of man can prevent it.—Christian Press.

Beer Shortens Life.

Dr. N. S. Davis, Chicago, says: When beer is taken in small quantities, repeated daily, the individual usually slowly increases in weight, not from increased nutrition, but from retarding the waste and retaining the old atoms longer in the tissues.

Hence, to introduce into the living system any agent that will retard atomic change, is equivalent to retarding the phenomena of life, and if by retarding the atomic changes, cells or atoms are retained in the tissues longer than the natural duration of their activity, such retention may increase the bulk and weight, but in the same ratio it embarrasses the tissues with the presence of material which is constantly becoming inert and tending to degeneration.

Consequently, the individual who thus increases his bulk and weight, by taking just enough of the weaker alcoholic drinks daily to retard the process of secretion and waste, in the same proportion diminishes his activity, his ability to resist the effects of morbid agents of every kind. This is abundantly illustrated by the thousands of beer and wine drinkers who, from twenty to twenty-five years of age, were muscular, active, capable of any reasonable endurance, with a weight of 150 pounds, but who, after moderately retarding atomic changes, and retaining old atoms by the daily use of wine or beer, have acquired a weight of 200 pounds or more, and have lost their muscular activity and endurance to such an extent that an active exercise of twenty minutes would make them puff like a "heavy horse." It is this sedative effect of alcohol on the organic or molecular changes in the tissues, retaining waste and effete matter that ought to have been promptly thrown out, which impairs the vital properties and predisposes or prepares the system to yield to morbid influences of any kind to which it may be exposed. And especially does this sedative effect of alcohol on the organic changes, when maintained by a moderate and continued use of the article, favor those degenerate changes, which result in tubercular, caseous and fatty deposits in the lungs, liver, kidneys, heart, and arteries of the brain, and in materially shortening the duration of life.

Beer cannot be used without injurious effects proportioned to the quantity used and the frequency of its repetition. Its use as a remedy in the treatment of disease can be wholly dispensed with without any injury to the sick.

"Friendly Criticisms."

Under this head the Indianapolis Daily Journal takes the churches and ministry to task for what it calls "Six broad and distinct divergences, which are sufficient to break down any system of church worship, however devout and attractive, if persisted in." Here they are:

1. The construction of very large and expensive church edifices.

2. The renting of pews, and giving exclusive privileges to occupants in consideration of monthly or annual payments.

3. Fairs and festivals, devised to add to the exchequer of the church.

4. The habit of attending church in fine apparel and gay adornments.

Vacations.

A young girl who is now eighteen has for four years stood at a table ironing clothes. A single half holiday at long intervals has been her sole release from the monotony of her toil. A toil pursued so unremittingly that her shoes have worn a hole in the floor where she stood. All this time she has been regularly at Sabbath-school and church, and the few flowers that bloom at the front door of her mother's cottage tell of a care she gave them during the moments of time she snatched from her goading work. At length she is having "her vacation," and away on an excursion to visit friends and breathe new air, she is trying to call back some of the life she has expended and prepare herself for the work that is to follow. She is one person that will really rest. What to many others will be all unmeaning, will be to a joy and benefit beyond expression, because along with the refreshment of the change she will have the consciousness that her pleasure is so well deserved. It is they that work who have the right to rest. It is they, also, who know how. To all others the summer vacations are but a pretence affording them simply a change of dissipation or condition of sloth, and into which they must carry the inevitable restlessness and ennui.—United Presbyterian.

Keep Cool.

It never did and never will Put things in better fashion—
Though rough the road and steep the hill
  To fly into a passion.

And never yet did fume or fret
  Mend any broken bubble,
The direst evil, bravely met,
  Is but a conquered trouble.

Our trials—did we only know—
  Are often what we make them,
And molehills into mountains grow,
  Just by the way we take them.

Who keeps his temper calm and cool,
  Will find his wits in season;
But Rage is weak, a foaming fool,
  With neither strength nor reason.

And, if a thing be hard to bear,
  When brain and nerve are steady,
Let fiery passions rave and tear,
  It finds us maimed already.

Who yields to anger, conquered lies—
  A captive none can pity;
Who rules his spirit greater is
  Than he who takes a city.

A hero he, though drums are mute,
  And no gay banners flaunted—
He treads his passions under foot,
  And meets the world undaunted.

O, then, to bravely do our best,
  Howe'er the winds are blowing,
And meekly leave to God the rest,
  Is wisdom worth the knowing.

After Many Days.

[CONCLUDED.]

Times began to revive soon after that. Young Bruce had a commission to paint the portrait of the mayor, and so became well known. Presently his landscapes were sold. Slowly and surely he went on his way to fortune, carrying his dear old mother and Jennie with him; and after a little a wife and baby were added to the happy household.

There were one or two little incidents in his after life which I wish to recall.

Many years after he had gained fame and prosperity he visited a brother artist of yet higher standing than his own, who lived in a bleak district of New England. His host had but one child, a boy of about eleven, who was carried into the parlor by two men, seated in an easy chair. He was worn to a shadow, but his face was full of sensitive feeling.

"My boy has been an invalid from his cradle," his father said. "For months in the year he is not able to leave his bed."

Bruce, during his stay, became much attached to the little fellow. One day his father said to him:

"This month of August is Charley's one glimpse of freedom. During the fall and winter, he never leaves his room, and is not able to read, to amuse himself with toys, or even to listen to music. By the way, I found rare pleasure for him last winter, most unexpectedly, in an old-fashioned wall-paper, of a singular design of leaves, wild flowers and birds flying here and there in the summer light. He used to lie and look at it with real delight. 'It just takes me right out of doors, papa,' he said; and he would fancy stories about the birds and tell them to his mother by the hour. There is really remarkable artistic merit in the paper. I should like you to look at it."

"I should be glad to see it," said Mr. Bruce, who was troubled just then by some far-off memories.

When he carried little Charley into the chamber after a while and heard him explain his "winter garden," his pale face reddening with pleasure, the tears came to Bruce's eyes.

Five years later, in looking over a western paper Bruce found this paragraph:

"By the confession of Jim Budd, last week, just before meeting his fate on the gallows, it was proved, as our readers will remember, that Oscar Arnold was innocent of the crime of forgery, for which he was sentenced five years ago. Arnold was an old man, a farmer whose life had always been inoffensive before his trial. His pardon was sent at once to the prison, but arrived just too late. The old man had died the day before. He had been confined in his cell for months, and some kindly soul had covered the wall with a cool summery paper, with birds flying here and there through the grass. The prisoner, as his mind failed, took as great a delight in these pictured walls as a child, fancying himself, poor fellow, free and in his own fields again."

Not long afterwards, Bruce passed through the city where Arnold had been confined, and visited the prison. The wife of the jailer told him the whole pathetic story, and showed him the white daisies and song-sparrows on the wall.

"He fancied himself out of doors, among them, poor soul," she said, "and so died calm and happy. The Lord put it into the heart of somebody to paint that paper, I think. I wish the designer could know the good it has done."

Bruce stood in the cell himself a gray-haired man, looking at the work of his youth; and he thanked God for every stroke which had made wild flowers or birds more real or true. He remembered old Ben's motto, "Good work always pays the worker, soon or late." But he thought no work ever paid him as this had done."—Youth's Companion.

Ants at Their Toilets.

The agricultural ant of America, writes the Rev. H. C. McCook in the "Proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia," is one of the neatest and tidiest of creatures in her personal habits. Out of the number he had imprisoned for observation, he never saw one remain long in an untidy state. When, after some very active work in digging, little particles of earth would adhere to their bodies, these were at once most carefully removed. The whole body, too, is most thoroughyl and frequently cleansed, a duty which is habitually attended to after eating and after sleep. In this duty these ants now and then assist one another, and when a "general washing" is in progress, it is an exceedingly interesting sight. The ant to whom the friendly office is being administered (the cleansed, she may be called), is leaning over upon one side as we begin the observation. The cleanser, (as the other party may be called), is in the act of lifting the fore leg, which is the first which is licked, the cleanser's mouth passing steadily from it up to the body, then over the neck, then the head, then the little jaws (mandibles) being at this stage held apart for the more convenient manipulation; from the face the operation passes to the body, along each side, each leg being attended to in succession; then to the other side and the other set of legs. All this while the creature being cleansed is evincing the most intense satisfaction, and in this way resembles a family dog when one is scratching the back of his neck; she rolls gently over on her side, sometimes quite over on her back, and presents altogether a picture of ease. The pleasure which these creatures take in being thus "combed" and "sponged," is really enjoyable to the observer. Several times an ant wanting to be cleaned was seen to approach a comrade, kneel down before it, and thrusting forward its head, then drop down and lie there motionless, expressing as plainly as sign language could her desire to be attended to. The ants, when engaged in cleaning their own bodies, have various modes of operating. The forelegs are drawn between the mandibles and also apparently through the lips, and then are passed alternately to the back of the head, and over and down the forehead and face, by a motion which closely resembles that of a cat when cleaning with her paw the corresponding part of her head. The strokes are always made downward, following thus the direction of the hairs. Nothing can surpass the grotesque attitude which the ants assume when cleansing their bodies. Their hind legs are thrown backward and well extended, the middle pair standing nearly straight out, so that the body assumes almost an erect position; the tail is then turned under the body and upward toward the head which is at the same time bent over and downward. The body thus forms a letter C. The forefeet now begin the operation, during which they are constantly put into the mouth, from which moisture is conveyed, thus giving a glossy appearance to the body. It is possible that these ants do not devote so much time to their toilets when in a state of nature; it is probable that, as with men, an artificial condition of society gives an inducement to a somewhat larger devotion to their personal appearing.

Cutting Glass with Scissors.

Many persons may not be aware that glass can be cut under water with great ease, to almost any shape, by simply using a pair of shears or strong scissors. In order to insure success, two points must be attended to—first and most important the glass must be kept quite level in the water while the scissors are applied; and, secondly to avoid risk, it is better to begin the cutting by taking off small pieces at the corners and along the edges, and so reduce the shape gradually to that required, as if any attempt is made to cut the glass all at once to the shape it will most likely break just where it is not wanted. Some kinds of glass will cut much better than others, the softer glass being the best for this purpose. The scissors need not be at all sharp, as their action does not appear to depend on the state of the edge presented to the glass. When the operation goes on well the glass breaks away from the scissors in small pieces in a straight line with the blades. This method of cutting glass has often been of service when a diamond was not at hand, for cutting ovals and segments, and though the edges are not as smooth as might be desired for some purposes, yet it will answer in a great many cases. The two hints given above, if strictly followed, will always insure success.—Woodworker.

Neglect of the Eye.

Whatever an ounce of prevention may be to other members of the body, it certainly is worth pounds of cure to the eye. Like a chronometer watch, this delicate organ will stand any amount of use, not to say abuse, but when once thrown off its balance, it very rarely can be brought back to its original perfection of action, or if it is, it becomes ever after liable to a return of disability of function or the seat of actual disease. One would have supposed from this fact, and from the fact that modern civilization has imposed upon the eye an ever-increasing amount of strain, both as to the actual quality of work done and the constantly increasing brilliancy and duration of the illumination under which it is performed, that the greatest pains would have been exercised in maintaining the organ in a condition of health, and the greatest care and solicitude used in the treatment when diseased. And yet it is safe to say that there is no organ in the body the welfare of which is so persistently neglected as the eye.

I have known fond and doting mothers to take their children of four and five years of age to have their first teeth filled, instead of having them extracted, so that the jaw might not suffer in its due development and become in later years contracted, while the eyes, the most intellectual, the most apprehensive and the most discriminating of all our organs, receives not even a passing thought, much less an examination. It never seems to occur to the parent that the principal agent in a child's education is the eye; that through it it gains not only its sense of the methods and ways of existence of others, but even the means for the maintenance of its own; nor does it occur to the parents for an instant that many of the mental as well as the bodily attributes of a growing child are fashioned, even if they are not created, by the condition of the eye alone.

A child is put to school without the slightest inquiry on the part of the parent and much less on the part of the teacher, whether it has the normal amount of sight; whether it sees objects sharply and well defined, or indistinctly and distorted; whether it be near-sighted or far-sighted; whether it sees with one or two eyes; or, finally, if it does see clearly and distinctly, whether it is not using a quantity of nervous force sufficient after a time not only to exhaust the energy of the visual organ, but of the nervous system at large.—Dr. Edward G. Loring, in Harper's Magazine.

—At the College church, Wheaton, on Sabbath evening after a brief discourse by Prof. C. A. Blanchard about 125 of the congregation remained to pray for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, not only then and there and upon all the church, but especially upon the College from the very beginning of the year. It was a time of drawing nigh to God in prevailing prayer. The brethren at Wheaton believe that they have already the foretaste of a glorious visitation from on high. A number of students, already come for the term which opens on Tuesday, were present at the meeting.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman preached on the morning of the Lord's day for the Free Methodist church, Wheaton. On Monday evening he attended a consultation of the members of the committee for free missions residing in Wheaton. He expects to attend the Wisconsin State meeting this week and then go to Missouri for a month. On Sabbath, August 24, Bro. Hinman preached twice at White Oak Grove in the United Presbyterian church. On Monday evening he lectured in the town hall. All were excellent meetings. On Tuesday evening he lectured at New Rutland. He visited Streator and Homer and returned home on Friday last.

SOUTHERN MISSIONS.

—A letter from sister Tapley asks for the arnest prayers of God's people upon their work at the present time. It is the season when protracted meetings begin. Pray that the Holy Spirit may descend upon these friends and their meeting, and that Satan may not be permitted to turn the rejoicing of the children of God into extravagance and folly. The following acknowledgment is made of donations from friends:

COLUMBUS, Miss.

Mrs Paley, Morrison, Ill.,	$2.00
Mr. O. Sholes, " "	1.00
Mr. Philo Carpenter, Chicago,	10.00

And from the latter a box of books of perhaps $30 value. This money and the contents of the box are highly appreciated, and will assist us much in the furtherance of our work. Friends, you have our warmest thanks. Our hearts are cheered by your kindness and the daily remembrance of it increases our faith and courage, and we feel more strong to go forward in the work of the Lord. MRS. E. TAPLEY.

WESLEYAN.

—The Illinois conference meets at Wheaton, September 17th.

—Bro. Kinney, business agent of the connection, is now on his annual visit to the fall conferences. He attends two of these meetings in Ohio, one each in Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and two in Iowa.

—Bro. W. S. May, Iowa conference evangelist visited Minnesota during harvest. At Wilton his labors were blessed with many conversions and fifteen additions to the church. At Spring Valley the Spirit of the Lord came down and twenty were brought to Christ and thirty came forward to unite with the church.

—Editor Stratton of the Wesleyan has been to Chautauqua. He failed to get the physical benefit desired for he was sick part of the time, but when on his feet he made some telling blows for truth as will be seen elsewhere.

—Prof. E. G. Paine of Minnesota, writes hopefully of the outlook for Wasioja Seminary. He says: "Our prospects for a large attendance at the Seminary this fall are good, notwithstanding the small crop in this section. Our greatest drawback here now is the hard times, which prevents our collecting the interest due us. The Masonic opposition to the school has ceased, openly at least, and the Masons of the place are beginning to respect us for our adherence to principle and for our success in the face of opposition. 'Nothing succeeds like success,' you know. They even take hold and help us on our improvements on the Seminary grounds and have sent their children all along."

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. W. H. Brewster of Blue Island, Ill., is expecting soon to remove to Maywood, a few miles west of this city and reside with his son.

—Rev. Warren F. Day of East Saganaw, Mich., stopped briefly in Wheaton on his way home from a vacation trip. Both Mr. and Mrs. Day are graduates of Wheaton College.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Bro. J. W. Hott, editor of the Telescope, has returned from Virginia to his office in Dayton. Prof. Tobey his associate has been spending a short vacation at Chautauqua.

—The Rock River conference meets at Lebanon church near Fenton, Whiteside county, Ill., September 10th. The loyal brethren of the conference are roused by the strange demonstrations of the Polo faction. This matter will probably be thoroughly examined and disposed of in a way that shall honor Christ and disappoint the devil.

BAPTIST.

—The Baptist churches in Japan have formed an association for mutual help and Christian work, and have recently held their first annual meeting. The association lunch, consisting of fish and rice, was spread on the floor of the mission house and eaten with chopsticks. It will be remembered that Dr. Nathan Brown, formerly editor of the American Baptist, is laboring at Yokahama, Japan.

—Among the colored people who have already reached Kansas is an entire Baptist church of three hundred members, led by the pastor and deacons. With their families the party numbered six hundred souls. They were from Delta, La., and reached their destination in a state of great impoverishment.

—The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Consolidated American Baptist Missionary Convention will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, beginning October 9.

GENERAL.

—It is announced that Messrs. Moody and Sankey will hold meetings at Cleveland during October, and then go to St. Louis for the winter, where Mr. Moody will rent a furnished house, put his children at school, and make his home till next summer.

—The revisers of the authorized version of the New Testament have recently held their ninety-first session. It is expected that the entire revision will be completed within a year, and that publication will speedily follow.

—Among the churches of Chicago which lately have rolled off a burden of debt is the First Reformed church, corner of May and Harrison streets, Rev. B. DeBey, pastor. A few weeks ago these brethren paid off a debt of $6,000 with genuine satisfaction. An addition to this church of 120 members was one result of Mr. Moody's work here three years ago. The Reformed churches are closely allied with the Reformed and United Presbyterians, using the Psalms in worship and rejecting the secret orders.

—A St. Petersburg correspondent reports that in order to colonize the Central Asian provinces Russia has promised all her subjects residing therein unlimited land grants, and exemption from military service and the payment of taxes.

—The colored teachers of Kentucky have adopted a memorial to the Legislature asking for important modification or amendment of the school law. They ask for an equalization of the per capita and limit of school age for the children of the State, without regard to color and for the establishment of a normal school for colored teachers.

THE WHEATON CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Some weeks ago several members of the body lately known as the First Church of Christ in Wheaton, asked letters from that organization to the College church. After consideration the following letter and certificate were forwarded to one of the families included in the number, and the others were told that they could have similar documents if they desired. They asked for them and received each a copy of the one here printed. The persons concerned feeling aggrieved, prepared an address to the church in question, which they forwarded to the pastor, Elder L. Taylor. As no attention has been paid to this address, signed by ten persons who were lately members of the church, it is herewith submitted to the candid candid consideration of the Christian public.

The three letters thus sent were alike with the exception that the first, in the handwriting of the chairman of the prudential committee, purported to be from "The First Church of Christ," the others, signed by the clerk, were, one from the "First Congregational church," "heretofore called the First Church of Christ," the other from "The First Congregational Church" simply. Though thus differing all bore the same date and were, with the single exception, as follows:

LETTER.

The First Congregational church in Wheaton Ills heretofore called The First Church of Christ of Wheaton to———

In reply to your request for letters of dismission and recommendation to the College Ch. we return the following answer.

While we fully recognize your liberty to go out from us at your pleasure, and we give you our Christian good wishes in so doing, nevertheless, we cannot in fidelity to yourselves and to that good order in the church of God which it becomes us to defend, give you the letters you desire. For you deliberately choose to join yourselves to a body declared to be walking disorderly, not only by us including yourselves, but also by Congregational Churches generally, in accordance with the action of Council, and therefore cut off from the communion of our churches. For you to do so, is to endorse such disorderly walking and to violate the command of God which requires us to withdraw from those who thus walk and who says "neither be partaker of other men's sins."

Against such acts we feel that we are called of God to enter our solemn protest.

At the same time being anxious not to tramel your liberty or detain in our church those who are discontented to walk with it, we have voted to you the following Certificate leaving the responsibility of its use upon you, wishing you at the same time grace mercy and peace from God and praying you to do right in his sight.

CERTIFICATE.

This certifies that—— —— —— ——, are regular members of the First Congregational Church in Wheaton Ills, (late First Church of Christ) and at their own request are dismissed from us, and when they have joined elsewhere, our church relation to them will cease. By order of the church July 31, 1879.

I. A. HART, Clerk.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

To Rev. L. Taylor, chairman of the Prudential Committee of the First Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.:—

Your reply to our requests for letters to the College church is at hand. While we regret that there should be such wide differences among Christians, and especially among those of the same church, and believing that all controversy in respect to the unpleasant state of affairs in our midst should cease; still, in justice to quite a large number of us who have felt it our duty to withdraw from your church, a few words in reply seem to be necessary.

In the first place we wish to correct a few statements which are in the letter of your handwriting, proporting to be a letter from the church.

You first state that "In fidelity to that good order in the church of God which you must defend, you cannot grant the letters asked." In this you have allowed your ideas of Congregational usage to take the place of Christian love and courtesy, taking as your guide some human contrivance and its queer interpretation, in place of the Word of God, which should be the Christian's only rule of faith and practice. The assertion that your church cannot give letters to the College church is unwarranted, for it is evident to all unprejudiced persons acquainted with that church, that it is owned and blessed of God and is doing better service for him than many others in this region. But you say it has no ecclesiastical connection. Why? Simply because by false testimony before a prejudiced jury it has been wickedly deprived of that connection. But this is no reason for refusing the letters. Would it not be orderly to grant letters to Mr. Moody's church of Chicago, which is not connected with any association? or to the hundreds of Congregational churches of New England, as Dr. Bacon's, which are independent? Are not you "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men?"

Secondly, you say we deliberately choose to join a body declared to be walking disorderly, by your church, including ourselves, and by Congregational churches generally. Now here you make two false statements. We have never declared, nor have we been of the opinion, that the College church was disorderly, nor was it so considered by your church until it seemed to be necessary to so consider it in order to accomplish other things.

This hostility and want of Christian regard for that church, has been one of the chief reasons for our withdrawal from your church. We have repeatedly denounced your attitude toward that church as un-Christian, and of this you are not ignorant. Nor is the College church considered by Congregational churches generally to be a disorderly body, but only by a few who took part in an ex parte council and were thereby deceived.

You say further that this church was cut off from the communion of ourchurches. The Christian church communes with God and he always receives his own. "I am the Good Shepherd and know my sheep and am known of mine." (John 10: 14.)

You say further that by requesting letters to the College church we violate the command of God, "Neither be partakers of other men's sins." Now it was for the sake of obeying that very command that we made the request. We have all felt and have not been backward in saying from the first, that the pretended excommunication of President Blanchard was unwarranted and wicked, believing that it was done to injure the character and influence of a good Christian brother in order to gratify the feelings of revenge possessed by certain members of the church who had personal grievances. And in giving our reasons to the church for our withdrawal, we distinctly stated that we did not wish to share the responsibility of the church in that action.

You say further that you feel called of God to enter a solemn protest against our act of joining the College church. Paul said in speaking of his wickedest acts, "Verily I thought I was doing God's service." And we fully believe that you will yet see your wrong as Paul did his. For the reasons already noticed you say: We have refused the letters asked and voted certificates. But these certificates are not such as Christian churches generally give, nor even such as a secular society would give to its members. A cold, bare statement of fact, rather implying that those making the request were not fit to belong to a church. Not the first word or sentiment of Christian confidence and good will, but the same uncharitable spirit is shown that has been characteristic of the church and its pastor toward the College and its friends for the past year and a half. Thus those who would be considered by you and the church as worthy members, if they only possessed the same feelings towards the College church that you have, are virtually denounced and wronged by you, and all under the mistaken idea of doing valiantly for Congregationalism, or from ill will. This will not injure us, nor the church to which we go. But it will be a stumbling block in the way of some who might desire to find the true way. It may gratify you and cause the worldly to chuckle, but it will not receive the sanction of Christians nor the approbation of God whom we strive to honor. We asked the letters that we might leave you orderly. You have taken a responsibility in the matter which you must meet before God.

Trusting that you and the church in your charge may yet see these wrongs as they are, and correct them, we go from you, not with malice and hard feelings, but with Christian good will; believing that in his own good time God will heal all differences, and enable his children to work together for the one great object, the advancement of his kingdom. Respectfully yours,

News of the Week.

—It appears from a letter written by the Hon. John W. Foster, American Minister to Mexico, that American agricultural machinery has been successfully introduced into Mexico, and that important results are likely to follow. Mexico has a large area of wheat lands, but for want of proper implements and machinery has not been able to produce enough grain for home consumption. Hitherto implements and machines of American manufacture have not had a fair trial; but, under the influence of the new era of commercial friendliness, plows, cultivators, drills, corn-planters, and reapers have been introduced, and have been well received. This gives a new impetus to Mexican agricultural industry, and opens a new field to American manufacturers.

—Quite an excitement was caused at the Ripley farm near Forest, Ohio, last week by thirteen threshers being poisoned while taking supper at the farm-house. Upon examination it was discovered that strychnine had been used in making biscuits instead of soda, by mistake. The whole party are reported to be in a critical condition.

—The immense export of fresh meat to European markets from the United States is attracting the attention of the world. Nearly every steamer has more or less of her cargo made up of this production of the great West. There never was a period in the history of the United States when the supply of every valuable production was so near inexhaustible, and, at the same time, the demand so great. It is a year of sunshine to the American people.

—The W. U. ship Shan missionary case, which for the last year has attracted much attention, has been finally decided by the British court at Shanghai, China. The missionaries complained of the alleged outrage by a mob near Foo Chow, declaring that their property was wantonly destroyed and their premises invaded. The Chinese claimed that the missionaries had aggressively encroached upon the Native Temple grounds until the populace were aroused to violent measures. The Chinese confidently submitted the case to the English tribunal. The result was a complete vindication for them, and the overthrow of the whole missionery position. The result is considered important as establishing precedents for numerous similar affairs.

—Diplomatic relations between the Austrian and Russian Cabinets are less cordial than between any two cabinets in Europe, and the friendly intercourse which existed between the two courts for many years has also entirely ceased.

—The case of the executors of the Brigham Young estate, who were imprisoned August 4 by Judge Boreman for contempt, and taken before the Supreme Court of the Territory on a writ of certiorari, was decided to-day. The order of the lower court was reversed and the prisoners discharged.

—The American ministers to Peru, Chili, and Bolivia have been instructed to represent to their respective governments that the United States will be ready at any time, when requested by each of these nations, now at war, to use its good offices to bring about peace. This step has been taken by our government as an evidence of its friendly feeling towards these nations, and in the interest of South American commerce.

—Colonel Polk, State Treasurer of Tennessee, is in Washington and will have an interview with the President to urge him to supply the destitute people of Memphis with government rations during the remainder of tne epidemic season. The National Board of Health claim that they have no authority to feed the people except for ten days quarantine. A large portion of the $500,000 controlled by the board is being fooled away paying so-called inspectors $10 a day each and expenses to run about over the South.

—At a meeting of the Association for the Advancement of Science, last Saturday, at Saratoga, N. Y., Commander E. P. Lull, United States navy, read a paper on the inter-oceanic canal problem. He said a canal from Lake Nicargua to the Pacific would be 16 3-10 miles long, only seven of which would be difficult. The estimate makes the canal seventy-two feet wide on the bottom, with twenty-six feet depth of water. The locks are 472 feet long. Estimated cost, $66,000,000; but it may come to $100,000,000 as the outside cost.

FOREIGN.

—A dispatch from Warsaw states that the Czar of Russia arrived there in safety, accompanied by his staff, Saturday night. The city was brilliantly illuminated. There was every appearance of enthusiasm, but it is said that the illuminations were prepared in compliance with the specific orders of the authorities, and that the crowds on the streets who welcomed the Czar with cheers, were composed chiefly of persons who were employed for this purpose.

—The pressure upon the laboring classes in England is indicated in these items of last Wednesday: "The executive committee of the North and Northeast Lancashire Masters' Association will meet on the 2d of September to consider a proposal for a further reduction in wages. The masters allege that some step toward the alleviation of a depression in trade is absolutely necessary, but a general reduction is not likely to take place.

The Oldham spinners declare for a systematic emigration if reductions in their wages continue, and recommend a limitation of production for the present, until the improvement of trade.

The steamer Helvetia took out eighty farmers for Texas, dissatisfied with the agricultural prospects of England.

—A Rome dispatch reports that, on the publication of the last encyclical, which left the Jesuits the alternative of revolt or submission, the Jesuits sent the Pope a memorial entirely submitting to his Holiness. The sincerity of the memorial is questioned at the Vatican.

—It is stated by Russian papers that in consequence of the supplies sent by Russia, Bulgaria will soon be in possession of 47,000,000 ball cartridges for rifles, with which all the militia are armed.

—The bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance last Wednesday, £382,000—$1,910,000, is for shipment to New York. The steamship Bothnia, from Liverpool, brought £181,000 in gold to New York.

American Produce in Europe.

Pending the appointment of a royal commission to inquire into the depressed condition of agricultural interests in England John Bright made an important speech concerning the ruinous effect of American competition. The following extract, as containing the views of one of England's first statesmen regarding the prosperity and vast influence of the United States, is especially interesting and instructive:

"The member for Lincolnshire has spoken on the influence of American produce upon English produce. He says the English produce decided the market, but that the produce from the United States, or it may be from the Dominion of Canada will henceforth fix the market in this country, and there is a great deal of truth in that. But let this commission inquire, if it can, how it comes that the landlords of this country and the farmers are not only alarmed, but in terror at the produce in corn and cattle that has been brought 4,000 or 5,000 miles from the other side of the Atlantic. This is a question, I think, that they may fairly examine, and I confess I am not sure that the statements made have been extravagant or exaggerated. I have met, within the last two or three weeks, two gentlemen very intimately connected with these matters in the United States, and I have been very much startled by some facts which they have related to me. The land that is being occupied in Minnesota, in the United States, and in the Dominion of Canada is of magnificent quality, I am told, for the production of wheat. Liverpool at this moment is as near to these farms as New York was a short time ago.

The gentleman I spoke to the other day was chairman of one of the most prosperous and best managed railways in America, and he said that the change that had taken place in the cost of transportation had been astonishing to him and it must be astonishing to everybody who looks into it. I know there are some people who do not like to hear these things. A farmer who was very much troubled and distressed on the subject, said: 'Well, you know, I wish that cursed country had never been discovered.' The fact is that the country has been discovered, although they are trying to find out where the discoverer was buried. But Columbus lived and discovered America, and from being peopled by savages the country now has nearly fifty millions of our own English-speaking people on the northern continent, and it will increase in the course of thirty-five years more, in all probability, to not less than one hundred millions. Now, I will tell honorable gentlemen opposite, and it will not add to their comfort, that the growth in the Western States is such that land in the Eastern States is decreasing in value. There is one reason for it which is not here. There the protective system of the United States had diverted all capital in the Eastern States into the manufacture of protected articles with the expectation of getting increased profits, and the capital has therefore been to a large extent withdrawn from those States; and, therefore, you find in the New England States and in New York, and I believe to some extent in Pennsylvania, that there is much land which men do not think it worth while to plough, and which is annually lessening in value and going gradually out of cultivation. If these Western States have had so much effect on land near them, what will be the effect on land in this country?

When they have 100,000,000 of population they will have paid their debt, their taxes will be at minimum; they take almost no army and no navy, as we have in Europe; they have no 'spirited foreign policy'—taxes, in proportion to their population, will grow less and less; and how England and Europe will stand the competition of America in regard to the policy of European nations, with regard to armaments and taxes, anybody might try to imagine it, but I will not try to describe it. There are farmers in America as you know, who have no rent, no tithes, no poor rate. You have all these. With you labor has risen. Labor is very dear in America. You are glad that the laborers are well paid; they will have to be still better paid. You complain of the education rate and the schools. The effect under the present state of things must be to drive the educated and spirited young men from the country into the towns, or to emigrate. There are matters which I trust this commission and the house will well consider."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

BY REV. DAVID Mc DILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the snbject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

Topics of the Time.

Mr. Langstaff, president of the Howard Association of Memphis, came to Chicago Saturday night to engage the contributions of the benevolent for the relief of that fever-stricken city. The work of relief is almost wholly in the hands of this association and their treasury is exhausted. There are 1500 whites and 11,000 colored people yet remaining in the city upon whom the fever feeds. The death rate remains low compared with last year, but reaches some days twelve or fifteen. Our northern cities will again respond to this call, but it cannot be denied that with their benevolence will come the memories of former gifts which for a time have awakened gratitude in former enemies, who, acknowledging the dole, yet persist in that course of political hostility which they deprecate when trouble compels them to look north for aid. It cannot excite surprise that there are some natural feelings of repugnance expressed at this conduct. They are yet, however, only natural; a higher law, which commands to love our enemies, and hold all men as "neighbors" who stand before God equal with ourselves, calls for good deeds toward all without the intervention of spurious oaths or the incantations of the lodge.

The important political events of last week were the California elections, which show great Republican gains throughout the State. The Kalloch-DeYoung tragedy of three weeks ago had the natural effect to elect Kalloch mayor. His wound proved less dangerous than at first supposed and his recovery is probable. In New York, Conklingism is still supreme. In the nominating convention he carried his points against Vice President Wheeler, who was chairman of the meeting, and all others, and nominated for Governor A. B. Cornell, who was put out of the New York custom house for notoriously using the office of collector for political rather than public purposes. So the machine seems to grind merrily in New York. So long as the "dear people" freely put into the hopper the Knight Templar politicians will look after the crank and the grist of "spoils." But as the "Liberty singer," George Clark, has it—

"There's a good time, a good time,
A good time coming on."

We will work and wait for it.

Any conflict of authority by which for the time laws are rendered nugatory, is an occasion of triumph on the part of the communists, who thus show their place to be with the dangerous classes of society. Such a conflict good men have to regret in this city. The State law, in force July 1st, against the unauthorized bearing of arms by organized bodies of men, has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Barnum, one of the successful candidates of the Democratic-communist coalition of last spring, when politics, not the honest judgment of our citizens, managed our judicial election. The difficulties that now threaten may be terrible realities as a result of such neglect and mismanagement. Gov. Cullom refuses to accept the decision of a partisan court and will maintain the law until the Supreme Court gives a final opinion. The State militia are under his command and are liable to be called out in case of a mob, when complications of a grave character may arise. The position of the Governor is generally approved. What kind of a judge Barnum is, may be conceived from the fact that he granted an injunction to a liquor-dealer against the commissioners of the park where the State encampment was pitched last week. Thus restraining them from ejecting the nefarious business, although by State law no liquor is permitted to be sold in public parks.

History is repeating itself in Afghanistan. Saturday's dispatches bore the terrible news of revolt at Cabul, the Afghan capital, before which the Ameer was powerless. The British embassy and its guard, were cut off, it is said, to the last man, after a desperate defense. In 1838 the British troops fought their way to Cabul to reinstate a deposed prince. The main army then retired, leaving 8,000 troops and an embassy. Early in 1842 these foreign troops were compelled to withdraw towards India by a revolt; and the whole force, then numbering 4,500 British troops with 12,000 followers were massacred before reaching Jellalabad. Only one man escaped. After the first burst of indignation has subsided the good sense of the English nation will assert itself in the present affair. It has already. The pretext of a "scientific frontier," has been forcibly shown in its true nature. The old frontier was far more defensible. The Afghanistan war was for conquest and as an offset to Russia, and has been well compared by eminent English statesmen to the seizure of Naboth's vineyard by Ahab.

Rev Mr. Murray since his fancy horse business has been broken up by the sheriff, has formally withdrawn from the pulpit, and will now be free to follow his tastes to the stable and the race course. Mr. Beecher, however, still continues to be the center of attraction for Sabbath desecrating excursions. In illustrating the "progress of that grand amalgamation of the church and the world" a New York correspondent gives as an instance the sight of Mr. Beecher as chaplain of the New York 23d regiment "on horseback in uniform, marching with his employers to a Sunday military excursion, might be considered as perfect a side tableau as the man of sin could desire to adorn his hellish state." The Christian Intelligencer thus notices a sermon by the same chaplain which was advertised as the chief attraction for a Sunday excursion: "Mr. Beecher, without any preliminary exercises, announced his text—John 3: 5-7, 'Ye must be born again.' 'This involves,' he said, 'no introduction of new elements into the being.' 'Conversion neither gives anything to a man, nor takes anything away from him.' 'You may be born again a dozen times over, if you will.' Obedience to the law of heredity, he declared, 'would change the world more than anything else; in a thousand years we would have a race of almost perfect men and women.' In concluding he urged his hearers to 'live to a higher manhood and womanhood,' 'no matter what their belief; that is a mere personal matter which does not touch the larger question.'" And yet, while Mr. Beecher is away on such errands of disloyalty to Christ, it is grievous to see such men as Dr. Roy and the elder Van Wagner, names well known at the West, filling his pulpit so that he can be free for the excursion business.

Ebenezer's Sermon.

ANON.

(Concluded.)

To Ebenezer, right away,
He told his difficulty.
'Twas Masonry—so he did say -
With all its sin and folly,
That he must give up, ere the way
Was clear, to be saved fully;
And, there, he gave himself, to be
The Lord's, for aye, and wholly.
Thus Ebenezer came to know,
At first, about the Masons,
And since he found these books were true,
He's studied all our reasons.

In his remarks, he next struck out
'Gainst clause in obligation,
To secrets keep, whate'er about,
Of brother Master Mason;
Except it be, without a doubt,
A murder or a treason;
And these are left to Mason's choice
To keep, or to reveal them.
He quoted Scripture where the voice
Of Judge is raised to call them
Who know the facts—whate'er their vows—
Of crime, to come and tell them.

Leviticus, the fifth and first,
Is where this law is mentioned;
And he who disobeys is cure'd
As one who fraud has sanctioned.
He said,—"'For this vow, in these climes,
No one can find a reason,
Except that rascals are, oft times,
In need of help receivin',
In swindling cowan, or profane,
Or other crimes atrocious;
And that these rascals may retain
Their freedom—though so vicious.

"And then, to make the thing still more,"
Said he, "in rascals favor,
They've sworn, each one, when in their power
To warn a Mason, ever,
Of all they know to be, for him,
Containing aught of danger."
He said:—"To me, does nothing seem
In these days, to be stranger,
Than that so many Christian men
Can be so blind—or willful—
As e'er to claim that there's no sin,
In vows so strong and fearful."

The next point Ebenezer touched,
Was hailing sign of Masons.
For aiding rascals, this, he vouched,
Was best of obligations.
Whene'er one sees this hailing sign,
From one who help is needing,
He's bound, at once, his aid to join,
If prospect of succeeding.
In saving life of him who hails,
Is greater than the chances
Of losing his who heeds the calls,
Whate'er the circumstances.

But then, he said, he hadn't time,
To push the subject further,
And quoting something from a rhyme,
'Bout loving one another,
He promised us another blow,
Before his time for leaving,
That cowans all might fully know
How Masons are deceiving.
I'll tell you what it's pretty tough!
But then we daren't resent it.
I'd be for using him quite rough,
If that would but prevent it.

I guess the best that we can do,
Will be to take it coolly
Until his year with us is through,
And then we'll show him fully
That we don't hire any man,
To preach against the Masons.
If that's to be his future plan,
He'll go elsewhere for rations.
There's Elder S—— will come at once,—
If we but vote to call him;
And he will fully meet our wants,
With no such whims to spoil him.

The Old Men are Anti-Masons.

BY PROF. E. G. PAINE.

EDITORS CYNOSURE: — I seldom find a man who lived in the time and region of the Morgan murder who is not an Anti-mason. While visiting recently with Father Dunbar, now nearly seventy-seven years old, the conversation turned on secret societies. After exchanging opinions upon various phases of the subject, he gave me a history of the Morgan abduction and murder, and the subsequent political action; after which I asked him to give me an outline for publication, which he did, substantially, as follows:

I, J. Dunbar, of Banks, Faribault county, Minn., was born Oct. 31, 1802, in Seneca county, New York. I have read several accounts and confessions of the abduction and murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan in 1826. My remembrance of the circumstances, the excitement, the political action, and the overthrow of the lodge-system, consequent upon the murder, is distinct, and agrees with the accounts that I have read.

I give the barest outline: Morgan was taken from Batavia to Canandaigua and placed in jail in care of the county sheriff, Chesebro by name, upon a trumped up charge of debt; but really to gain time enough to hear from Gov. DeWitt Clinton, who was then Grand Master of New York Masons, respecting the disposition to be made of him. Clinton refused to have anything to do about the matter. Morgan was then taken to Rochester, and next by the ridge road through Orleans and Niagara counties to the Niagara river. He was placed in the magazine of Fort Niagara in care of the commandant, one Giddins. On application, the Canada Masons refused to receive him. Then a council was held of seven Royal Arch Masons of whom Giddins was one, which decided to put him to death by drowning in the river. Giddins says he saw Morgan taken out into the river by three who drew marked ballots, and saw them return without him. Valance has confessed to being one of the three.

This removal of Morgan from place to place, was evidently well understood by the Masons along the route, and was accomplished in covered wagons, with attendants and frequent change of horses. Only Masons helped in the matter, and Masons of high rank, mostly Royal Arch. They were not rowdies or roughs either, but men of respectability, including at least one Presbyterian minister of Rochester.

Morgan's body was found at the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek, Orleans Co. While the coroner's jury was in session, I was traveling through that county and distinctly remember the intense excitement occasioned by it and the result of the inquest, Morgan's wife testified, before seeing the body, to various marks on the person and clothing of her husband, and to having possession of a tooth, peculiar in size and shape, drawn from his mouth. The identification was perfect in all points and the verdict declared the corpse to be the body of Morgan. The subsequent exhumation and inquest by Masons, declaring the body to be that of one Wm. Munroe, was too evidently a fraud and failed of its purpose.

It will be noticed that Father Dunbar very pointedly refuses the statement so often made by Masons and their apologists:—"That if Morgan was killed, it was done by the roughs and not by respectable Masons. Bad men get into every society, you know, even the church." He fastens the guilt on the institution where it belongs. He was not aware of the present movement and the means at hand to carry it on; but expressed himself ready to do all that an old man can to further Anti-masonry, and said he would be glad of an opportunity to vote an Anti-masonic ticket once more.

The Mission of the Church.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.—1 John 3: 8.

The first work of Satan on earth was to destroy its purity and thereby destroy its peace; and He who came to bring "peace on earth and good will to men" can never accomplish that mission, except as he restores to earth its purity by destroying the works of the devil. It is written, "He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." However Satan may offer and exalt himself against God, he shall be cast down. The mighty angel that "took up a stone like a great millstone and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down and be found no more at all," will assuredly accomplish his mission in reference to all the works of the devil. In like manner they shall perish.

This is the mission of the church of Christ. We are workers together with him. He will bruise Satan shortly under our feet. Soon the strong angel will bind him and cast him into the bottomless pit. It is not simply in seeking to save our souls that we are to save them, but it is rather in that union with Christ that makes us one with him in saving the world. "For he that seeketh to save his life shall lose it. But he that loseth his life shall keep it unto life eternal." It is the Word of God which, as a sharp two-edged sword, is to destroy every form of sin. It is the faithful preaching of the Word which is to destroy the works of the devil.

It is plain that no preaching of the Gospel can destroy the works of the devil if it is in complicity with them. If they who preach the Gospel either practice or consent to gross and flagrant violations of the law of Christ, it is plain that his law will not thereby be established. If the church and the ministry receive iniquity to their fellowship; suffer its abominations to go unrebuked; yea, allow the Old Serpent to crawl into the house of God and coil himself around the altar of prayer; yea, infuse his venom into the bread and water of life that are set for the children's table,—then Satan himself is not likely to be bruised under our feet. If one-tenth of the Christian ministry do this and the other nine-tenths silently consent to it; if, instead of rebuking those who defile the house of God, they rather rebuke those who protest against it; if it is not he that practices, but he that departs from iniquity that maketh himself a prey, then surely the church is not doing her work. The church and the ministry must be reformed before they can reform the world.

NOW WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

Freemasonry is extensively practiced and countenanced by ministry and churches. None of the great leading denominations but welcome Freemasons to their places of honor. None of the great mission boards but appoint them as their messengers and welcome them to their mission churches. It is held to be no objection to a man's being a home or foreign missionary that he should belong to the lodge, but it is held to be a serious objection that he has pronounced convictions against it. Such a man, whatever his gifts or graces, is a disturber. His name is dropped from ecclesiastical bodies. He has lost popular favor and the anathema of his church is upon him. In not one instance of an earnest advocacy of the Anti-masonic reform by any minister of any of the leading denominations, but he has suffered reproach. Alonzo H. Quint, a 32-degree Mason, has been repeatedly elected to the only permanent office in the National Congregational Council, with scarcely a word of dissent; while Jonathan Blanchard has his name dropped from the local and State Associations and from the list of officers of the American Missionary Association. What is the difference? The one practices a popular iniquity and the other rebukes it.

If Freemasonry is not wrong nothing is wrong. No man ever did or ever will undertake to defend it as in accordance with the Gospel. Like slavery and Romanism, it practically claims infallibility and denies all right to call in question its pretensions. It has been proved beyond all question that its ceremonies are immoral and profane, its oaths illegal and blasphemous; its pretended morality and benevolence a sham; and its religion a continuation of for which Elijah slew the prophets of Baal.

The truth in reference to this iniquity has been before the people for at least fifty years, and all who are ignorant of the facts are willingly ignorant. The great majority of the ministry do know the essential facts, and in a large majority of cases would rejoice if the spell were broken that binds them to silence and consent. When the shackles fell from the four million slaves in the South, the bonds were broken which had bound the pulpits of the North. Slavery had vast wealth, political power and popular prejudice, and it ruled the nation. Freemasonry has vast numbers and wealth, holds the highest places in the church and state, appeals to all the selfish and cowardly influences in human nature, and it rules the church and the nation just as did the slave power. God's people all rejoiced when the slave power fell. They would rejoice with great joy if the power of the lodge were broken. The church and the nation can never be purified and saved until this unholy spell is broken; until the church is emancipated and her pulpits and press are free. The devil of secretism, like the devil of slavery, must be cast out, though he do rend the church and the nation. No saving health can come until we are free.

WHAT IS THE DUTY OF GOD'S PEOPLE?

First, stop supporting Masonic ministers. Whatever may be true of the general character of such a minister, he is not "an ensample to the flock." He does walk disorderly, and hence the Word of God commands us to "withdraw from him." So long as secret sins are practised by the ministry, open sins will be unrebuked among the people.

Second, stop supporting missionary societies that commission Freemasons and welcome them to their mission churches. The work of home missions on our frontier and in the South cannot be over-rated. They are planting for time and eternity. The American Home Missionary Society sustains nearly a thousand missionaries. In the main, they are able and excellent men, and, considering the obstacles, working nobly for Christ. But there is also a large and increasing number of Freemasons who are used as the tools of those who "lay wait as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit." (Jer. 5:26, 27.) When the American Home Missionary Society shall make it a rule to exclude such men from its fellowship, then it will be time to give it our support.

Third, support a Gospel that embodies that "wisdom which is from above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good works." There is a large number of ministers and laymen who are faithful, who do not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Like Paul they have "counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ," and many of them have "suffered the loss of all things," so that they may win Christ. So too there are churches that have built on the rock, and are not building with hay, wood, and stubble. They have no fellowship with the unfruithful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. But these churches are unpopular and poor; their ministers are like their Master, despised and rejected of men. Now plainly our duty lies in the direction of aiding such churches and such ministers. They need our aid and they deserve it. If we fail to do our duty, Jesus will say,—"Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to me."

The Illinois State Christian Association, meeting in the College Chapel, Wheaton, Ill., Nov. 20–22, 1878, appointed the persons named below a committee on missions, connected with the Associated Churches of Christ, with power to increase their number and fill vacancies, and to act on their own responsibility, viz.: Milton Wright, J. Blanchard, J. B. Walker, J. M. Snyder, Amos W. Wheeler, A. H. Hiatt, E. B. Thompson, J. L. Barlow, J. F. Browne, Geo. R. Milton and E. L. Sheldon. The following Constitution (see Cynosure of Jan. 23d, 1879,) was adopted. That missionary committee are ready to act. They appeal to the friends of a free Gospel for aid. There is a vast field of work that is open before us. Shall we enter and reap?

ONE WITH GOD.

Extract from address by Rev. E. C. Pike, of Brimingham, Eng., at the London May meetings.

There is this unspeakable advantage in having a sound and good principle. We may follow it any where, it will never lead us wrong. Inconveniences there may be; positive suffering and loss there may be; the path may be the way of the Cross, but, notwithstanding all the sorrows, it leads to peace and joy. Whilest mere politicians, however shrewd, are often taken in their own craftiness, the stern adherent of a true principle is sure to find the issue of his conduct right. (Applause.) This firm stand for a genuine representation of truth, and to the uttermost fraction of it, seems to be the only attitude becoming us as servants of Christ. We are set between certain truths and men who sorely need them, but who are ignorant of of them. The only respectful and fair way of treating both the message and the people to whom we deliver it is to take scrupulous care that we impart no colorings of our own, and that we hide nothing of what we have received. And this is the only manly thing to do. We must not be afraid of the truth, in any case. If there is any want of harmony between us and it, so much the worse for us—truth will not suffer. Heaven and earth may pass away, but no bit of truth can perish. (Applause.) And as we would not fear the truth, neither should we be afraid of it. We may trust it to survive all opposition, and one day to surmount every prejudice. Shams, hypocrisies, human policies may tumble into the bottomless pit, but truth is stabled at the throne of God. Some may suppose that the attitude we have assumed tends to perpetuate sectarianism. It is quite otherwise. Compromises will never destroy sectarianism. No patchwork will ever pass for a seamless robe. When an intense loyalty to truth shall reign in hearts brimful of love, God and not man setting the fashion, then and not before the days of sects will be numbered. (Applause.) Without indulging in any gloomy misgivings in respect to the times in which we live, we may yet say that there is not too much of stern standing by right principles in vogue. I believe not in a golden age that has gone. I believe in a golden age that is to come. (Hear, hear.)

Yet there have been heroic times, and the hope for, the future is in men being as true and staunch as were the bravest and best of the fathers who have passed away. That spirit which made old Hebrew heroes what they were, and which has been the inspiration of the noblest of the saints in more recent centuries is wanted now and will be wanted in the end. Be it so that the age of "sweeter manners" has dawned; there was a rugged strength in the past for the loss of which no amount of polish could compensate. It ought to be like a refreshing breeze to invigorate the soul to meet here because of the grand principle upon which the society is based. (Applause.) Look back a moment through the dim centuries. There stands an apostle before the tribunal of the man who wields the sceptre of the civilized earth. They say his bodily presence is weak and his speech contemptible, and as he makes answer to the charge brought against him, not a human being is found to keep him company; but Paul quails not before the judgment seat of Nero—in his rapt vision there rises another spectacle, he sees the judgment seat of Christ. Look again four centuries nearer to our own time. There is a man contending for some of the great verities of the faith against heresy, which had power and fashion on its side: a little man with a slight stoop in his figure, and with a hooked nose; "a dwarf rather than a man," it is sneeringly said, yet withal having an "almost angelic beauty of face and expression."

"For the space of forty-six years," says the historian, "from the time of his consecration to the last hour of his life in this world they never suffered him to enjoy the comfort of a peaceful day." But, if there was "the whole world against Athanasius," there was, be it remembered, "Athanasius against it." Twelve centuries nearer to us still, and look, there is a life-like man who stands bravely against fearful odds. The vast pressure of a mighty empire is brought to bear upon him to recant what he holds, and what we hold to-day to be important and vital Scriptural truth. The man has communion with God, where, in broken words, he has laid his case where no case is laid in vain; and so, looking round upon the vast assembly of nobles and princes, he exclaims: "Here stand I; I can do no other; may God help me! Amen." Yet once more, for there are heroic souls gone forth such a little while from this earth, that one sometimes almost wonders if they can yet be far away. A little shoemaker's shop and a brown paper map of the world fastened on the wall with big black marks to tell where heathen darkness reigns, and the large heart of the shoemaker is filled with a sublime purpose—the world will laugh him to scorn when it sees him step forth on a mission to poor idolatrous peoples. Half the church will say, "Sit down—when God means to convert the world he will do it without you," and nearly the other half will feel, "If the Lord should make windows in heaven might this thing be." But let the world ridicule—and let the church be opposed or faint-hearted—the expectation of great things from God in William Carey's soul shall not be disappointed, nor shall his brave attempts be wasted efforts.

We, too, must dare to stand alone, if need be, in truth's quarrel, and so prove that the story of the past is not lost upon us to-day, and that the heritage of the ages has not fallen into faithless hands.

—The expense of supplying the pulpits of our large denominations may be estimated from the following statement of funds invested in theological seminaries:

"Union Theological Seminary of New York, has $200,000 in buildings and grounds, $750,000 in productive funds, and $50,000 income. The interest on $200,000 is $12,000, so that the actual cost per annum of running the institution is $62,000 per annum. Its graduates are thirty-five, and their actual cost for the year was over $1,700. The number of professors is seven. The theological seminary of the Presbyterian church, at Princeton, has $925,000 in property, and $48,000 income, which added to the interest on buildings, makes $58,000 per annum. It graduated thirty students, which cost nearly $2,000 at the year of their graduation, or as the course includes three years, about $1,500 each year. Lane seminary, at Walnut Hills, reports $160,000 in buildings and grounds, and $230,000 productive funds (this report is for 1876), and $16,000 income, which makes $25,600 in all. It graduated fifteen students in 1876, which, in the year of their graduation, cost $1,700 each, and as there were twenty-eight students, counting them for each year, makes about $900 per annum. Besides building, grounds and professors, the seminary of the Presbyterian church has a library of 28,000 volumes, Union Theological Seminary at New York 33,000 volumes, and Lane Seminary 12,000. The Congregational Seminary of Chicago has six professors, and an endowment of $217,000 for which an additional $150,000 is being raised.

The Sermon.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Sabbath morning, August 31st, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

CHRISTIAN COURTESY.

TEXT:—Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous.—1 Peter 3: 8.

God does not want men to be all of one mind in the sense that they are to like and dislike precisely the same things; express their thoughts in precisely the same manner, or clothe themselves in the same kind of garments. Variety in unity is the law of the universe. Men differ in stature, in color of the hair and eyes, in gait, in ability, in weaknesses, in everything. God is the author, not perhaps wholly, but largely of these differences and hence when he exhorts us, as in this case, to be of the same mind we must interpret his word by his works. It is not in reference to all things, nor in unimportant matters that Christians are to be of one mind, but on those great questions which underlie the hopes of men for eternity. Men are lost. The Lord Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Whosoever will may come and take the water of life freely. God is of purer eyes than to behold the wicked or look upon sin with any allowance. If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his. The wicked go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal. These are the questions on which we are all to be of one mind.

Of course it is pleasant and profitable for Christians to agree on all minor questions which are connected with Christ's kingdom on earth. If we could agree on baptism, church government, the sort of songs to use in praising God, the use of instrumental music in church service, etc., etc., it would be desirable, but it is better to have Christian charity for one another on these matters, than to attempt a union which only results in the denominational Babel which now disgraces Christianity, and seems determined to drive it out of the world.

WE HAVE COMPASSION

on those who are in trouble or difficulty. If we stand side by side while some one passes, and you say to me: "Don't you pity that man?" I at once ask: "What is the matter with him?" By what evil is he afflicted? I see no reason to pity him unless he is in some trouble. But here in this tent we are told to have compassion one for another, and to be pitiful. This is an intimation that all Christians are proper objects of compassion, i. e., that their circumstances are such as to make it proper for us to sympathize with them. Each one for ourselves, we know that this is true. The parents who live in some rude cabin on the distant frontier, and whose children, fair cheeked and strong armed, grow up about them, wish that they had the advantage of school and church for the training of the immortal souls committed to their charge. The parents who live in populous city, where school-house and sanctuary peal out from hour to hour the call to instruction or worship, too many times see their dear ones caught and crushed by the temptations to idleness, dissipation and vice, until their hearts are so wrung that they could be glad to see the children, for whom they would die, lowered into the grave. This is only one among the thousand sources of trouble which come to the Christian. Man is born to trouble as sparks fly upward.

"There is no heart but hath its hours of anguish,
There is no eye but hath with tears been wet;
There is no voice but hath been heard to languish
O'er hours of darkness it can ne'er forget."

Take now these dark hours in your own life, no matter what your trouble has been, whether misfortune, or your own sin, or the sin of others, and remember that this experience is not peculiar to yourself, that all men carry their load. That every Christian brother and sister is oftentimes stooped to the earth by a burden that seems too heavy to be borne, and then, perhaps you can obey the injunction of the text. "Having compassion one for another, love as brethren, be pitiful."

Courtesy is, when genuine, the expression of love and compassion. It is a treating of men according to their conditions and needs. It is doing to others as we would that they should do to us. There is a counterfeit courtesy which differs from the genuine in that there is no kindness behind it. It is the thin veneering which covers the mean, ugly timber of a selfish heart. This counterfeit may sometimes be an aid to society, a satisfaction to those upon whom it is practised and who do not detect the imposition; but in relation to the person employing it, it is like any other hollow and deceitful pretense. But as there may be an outward show of kindness while the heart is supremely selfish, so there may be and there are hearts full to the brim of kindness which do not bless the world as they might, because the love that is within finds no expression without.

In a popular poem a husband declares in giving an account of a reconciliation between himself and wife, that she kissed him for the first time in twenty years. And yet during these twenty years he had loved her and she him, but instead of expressing this love they had tucked it away down out of sight, and of course the result was "arguments and a separation." The kiss of Judas is a bad thing. Deceit and sham are no better in courtesy than anywhere else, but true courtesy is a blessed angel that goes from heart to heart and home to home, healing the sick and almost giving life to the dead. It comes down and troubles the pool, by whose margin a worn and spent one lies, and if he steps into the waters, in a moment the heart ache is gone and he is cleansed.

COURTESY HAS A CASH VALUE

to men, churches and institutions of every sort. Instances are not hard to find, they are thickly scattered along every walk in life, where men or institutions of sterling integrity have been shorn of their strength for the lack of this one thing. On the other hand there are many cases where men of inferior powers or institutions less true to the truth have practiced and prospered by making this virtue or its semblance almost their whole stock in trade. Men like to be kindly treated. All men do. They will not trade in a store or go to a church where they are not kindly treated. In general, perhaps always, they ought not to do so. When A. T. Stewart in New York found a clerk who was discourteous to customers, old or young, rich or poor, he said to him that he had no further need for his services. He one day went himself into his store and asked a clerk, to whom he was unknown, for a certain piece of goods. The clerk taking him for some old man in moderate circumstances, contemptuously threw down the piece required. Mr. Stewart took hold of the cloth and drew it toward him as if to examine it more carefully. The clerk pulled it back and rudely said: "Old man, you can see here on the counter if you want to look at it." Mr. Stewart simply replied: "Young man, if you will call at the cashier's desk he will pay you for your work. We shall not require your services after this time."

This was the word of a good business man. He had so far as the public know, no religion. He seemed to live for the world, but he knew that a courteous treatment of others was the way to success, and so he said to his clerks as does the Scripture: "Be courteous."

So also every village is witness to the fact that courtesy in churches is a paying investment. If there be two organizations in one neighborhood the one where members are most courteous, will, other things being equal, and sometimes when they are unequal, be most prosperous. I recollect to have once asked a friend to come to church. He replied: "The last time I was in your church I didn't have a very pleasant time." "Why not?" said I. "Well," he answered, "I was shown into a pew and took my seat. Directly some persons came, stood at the end of the pew and looked at me. I kept my place and they kept looking at me until I got up and took another seat. I had been here but a short time when another party came in and we went through the same performance. I took another seat and staid through the sermon, but I didn't feel well and have never been back and don't ever expect to go back again." He is not here to-day. The incident occurred years ago; the persons who were thus uncivil are, so far as I know, not connected at this time with this congregation, but the evil seed which they planted is growing a strong and vigorous plant. This friend is not here nor is he anywhere else in the house of God. He is at home at work or at rest, but not in any Christian congregation. Can we not henceforth be more careful to be compassionate, pitiful and courteous.

THE RELATIVE IMPORTANCE OF THIS DUTY

may be inferred from the prominent place which it occupies in the Scriptures. Take your concordances and run over the words love, charity, compassion, etc. You will find that they count up to hundreds. The Holy Ghost thus indicates the great need of this Christian grace. Love is of little use unless it be expressed, and the expression of love is courtesy.

The greatest of Christian graces is charity. Not the spirit that shuns faithful rebuke and atones for cowardice and negligence by an unlimited amount of private slander; but the spirit that is careful, prayerful and unwearied in its seeking and saving what is lost. Jesus says that he will judge us and send us either to heaven or hell, according as we love our fellow men or not. And John declares that the man who affirms his love for God and loves not his fellow men, is a liar. For, if a man love not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love his brother whom he hath not seen? As the rising sun sheds its glory over the world, and reveals the charms of mountain, ocean, tree and flower, so the grace of love and practice of courtesy throw a glory over all other virtues and cause the Christian to shine as a light in the world.

SATAN WANTS MEN TO SIN.

Especially Christian men, he takes, methinks, more delight in one little slip of the Pilgrim, than in the blasphemous mouthings of a legion of devils in hell. He hesitated not to grapple with the Captain of our salvation. Forty days upon the desert mountain he plied him with temptations, until our Lord was wearied with the terrific struggle. He who sought to win our Master to his dark empire will not suffer us to escape without a trial. We need not think it strange concerning the fiery trial that is to try us, as though some strange thing happened to us. Fiery trial is the test of discipleship. We cannot escape the trial, but we can triumph in it and over it. Daniel could not avoid the lion's den, but he could come out of it. The three could not go around the furnace, but they could go through it. Joseph could not escape the prison, but he went from it to the presence of the king. This is the way it is with the children of God.

But when we refuse to sin, Satan is quite well satisfied if he can get us to make mistakes. Hence if we do love one another, if we are pitiful and compassionate, he seeks to make us discourteous so that men will not know the fact. He wants us to act so that men will count us cold, unloving and proud. If we will serve God ourselves he wants to arrange matters so that we shall not succeed in getting any one else to do so. Thus on the one hand we have a parcel of courteous hypocrites, on the other, a number of discourteous, but honest Christian men. Hence, it often happens that friends who would die for one another, walk through the world almost strangers, if not enemies.

IN THE HOUSE OF GOD.

we should be most careful of this precept. Here if anywhere we will be all of one mind, having compassion one of another, loving as brethren, being pitiful and courteous. And yet it is notorious that many times those who are courteous everywhere else, are ill-mannered in the house dedicated to the worship of Jehovah. When a stranger presents himself at our doors, we hasten to meet him, to inquire of his welfare and his needs, and to do all in our power to make him at his ease. Too many persons come to the house of God as if the only persons in the world for whom they had the least concern were themselves. They sit in their own hired house as Paul did in Rome. Only instead of preaching as he did, they sit still, look at the minister, and when service is over pass rapidly and quietly out as if they feared some one would dun them for a debt or ask them to stay to Sabbath school. If strangers come they are left to the tender mercies of the janitor, and the only seats in the church which are considered free.

Now it seems to require no argument to prove that this course of treatment is unchristian and should be discontinued. Who can tell how many souls weary and heavy laden with their sins, longing for some friendly word and hand, have come up to the sanctuary only to go away chilled and hopeless, perhaps to plunge into despair, perhaps to plunge into sin, in either saying, and at least with a show of reason, "No man cares for my soul."

Robert Raikes coaxed in his Sabbath school children with cold potatoes. Modern Sabbath school workers have proved the magnetic attraction of sugar plums and peanuts in like cases and yet there are churches all over the country where the stranger who comes of his own accord is almost driven away by the frigidity of his reception. You have all read of the man who stood on the bank and saw another drown. A man came rushing up to him and said: "Can't you swim?" "Yes." "Did't you see the man drowning?" "Of course." "Well, why didn't you jump in and pull him out?" "Well, I did want to, but the fact is I hadn't been introduced." This was good common sense compared with the folly that waits for introductions to men that gather in churches. Carefully, prayerfully, we ought to act, doubtless, but the rule should surely be in all such cases: "Run, speak to that young man."

WE MUST DO THUS THROUGH THE WEEK.

Another care which we should constantly take is to show a kindly disposition through the week, toward our brethren and the strangers who meet us in the house of God on the Lord's day. If we love men, we shall be pleased to meet them, even for a moment, in the street, the place of business, or the gathering for pleasure, and if we are pleased our feelings will be manifested in some manner. No man likes to be forgotten, to be passed by with a cold nod or a pre-occupied stare. We do not like it ourselves and other men like it just as well as we do. Now, the pleasing of men where it can be done without a sacrifice of principle is just as much a duty as honesty or truthfulness. We are bound to please all men to their edification. If they refuse to be pleased with that which is for edification we are not bound to please them, but kindness in speech and look is generally pleasing and always for edification.

The prevailing mistake in this matter is an exclusive thought of ourselves. We have around us our own thoughts, ambitions, wishes, and burdens. We do not wish to hurt others, we simply forget them. God help us hereafter more than heretofore to be of the same mind, having compassion one of another, to love as brethren, to be pitiful and courteous.

Reform News.

THE EXPOSITIONS IN NORTHWESTERN ILLINOIS.

NEAR NORA, Ill. }
Aug. 29, 1879. }

DEAR K:—What I have seen and heard in this county since coming here has convinced me that good and efficient work has been done. Bro. Browne is indefatigable in labors and wins his way to the hearts and confidence of all good people. Bro. Rathbun's work has had a telling effect and the haughty sons of Hiram are terribly stirred and much cast down in the eyes of the people. Bro. R. is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. He has given the first and third degrees at Fulton, Elizabeth, Galena, Warren and Nora, since coming to Illinois on the 18th inst; and although somewhat wearied is still in good working trim. I witnessed his work at Warren on the third degree and on the first and third at Nora. At Warren the stage was small, but despite the difficulties the degree was well rendered. At Nora accommodations were better, and I have seldom if ever witnessed more effective work.

I left Warren the day after the working of the third degree and all appeared quiet, but I learn that since that time when we were supposed to be at a safe distance, the agitation is fierce. Bro. Browne is accused of having poisoned his wife, etc., etc. Hiram's friends in Warren performed one of their characteristics feats by stealing the pantaloons of the candidate and his pocket-book with all the money he had. The sneak-thief lodge agent either concealed himself in a back room, or by some means obtained access to the hall and bore away his prize as a trophy and specimen of craft work, and up to date no return has been made to the young man for his loss.

While Bro. Rathbun was working the third degree, the rabble outside the hall groaned and hissed and swore like dutiful sons of their Grand Master, and it remains to be seen whether the Masonic ministers of the place will rebuke the shameful conduct or approve the past and encourage its future repetition by their silent approval. Inside the hall the order was excellent and the attention all that could be desired. At Nora, where their is no lodge to incite and direct the malicious and evil-designing, everything within and without the hall was orderly and quiet. The contrast with the conduct in the lodge-governed town of Warren made the quiet, orderly meetings at Nora all the more remarkable. I do not believe Nora has a Mason who is mean enough to steal the money and clothes of a poor young man, but had they enjoyed the benefit of Masonic teaching and preaching to the same extent that Warren has, and had there been a secret lodge in the place to which a culprit could flee for refuge and comfort, it is possible that some of the honest young men of Nora might have become as proficient in deeds of darkness as their highly Masonized neighbors at Warren.

I preached here last evening at Chelsea; am to speak again to-night. To-morrow I expect to preach in Warren, and on Monday go with Bro. B. Williams across the country to Evansville. Bro. Browne is also expected at Warren Sabbath evening. Bro. Rathbun is assisting the Wesleyan church here at their quarterly meeting. There will be a number from this region at Evansville, God willing. I have been too much pressed with duties to furnish the promised notice of Father Norton's death, but will write as soon as possible. J. P. STODDARD.

FIRST OF THE STATE MEETINGS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5th, 1879.

Many incidents of interest and of deep significance have occurred during my brief trip of eleven days. I cannot even allude to them all. Never have I witnessed more enthusiasm and settled purpose on the part of friends, or greater evidences of trepidation and alarm on the part of opponents. They evidently believe that some men's sins go before them to the final judgment and that their time is at hand. At Warren, at Nora, at Chelsea, Ill., and at Evansville, Wis., it was apparent that our cause is marching on.

I had an opportunity at Warren, Nora and Evansville to witness the working of the first and third degrees of Freemasonry by Bro. Rathbun, and was much pleased with the way in which the work was rendered. The craft were busy as usual in seeking to throw confusion into the ranks of their opponents and to blacken and defame the character of Bro. Rathbun, but utterly failed of their purpose. Bro. R. met them fairly and treated his brethren and co-workers with that Christian courtesy which is becoming a gentleman, and one in whose purpose the interests of a righteous cause and not personal interests are uppermost.

The meeting at Evansville was worthy of the first in a series of State gatherings. There were, of course, differences of opinion as there always will be among men of independent thought, but without collision; the whole convention moved on from its beginning to its close, under the guiding impulse of one Spirit; and the enemy will gain no advantage by being able to point to a single instance of discord among the brethren.

The officers of the Association were all in their places at the opening session, and the reports and business of the Association were in readiness, so that everything moved off without friction or delay. The secretary will send a full report in due time, and such a report as will, I am quite sure, rejoice the heart of every true friend.

On the second evening of the convention Bro. Rathbun opened his lodge in due and ancient form with the following as officers: W. M., Rev. D. C. Talbot; S. W., Rev. W. B. Golden (a seceder of three degrees); J. W., Elder F. J. Crowder; S. D., Elder J. F. Browne; J. D., Dea. M. R. Britten; Treas., Elder E. Collins (a seceder of three degrees); Sec'y, Rev. H. H. Hinman. Brethren Barlow, Mathews, Williams and a number of other clergymen were present on the stage or wedged in among the audience that packed the hall to its utmost capacity, and remained for two and a half hours as orderly as could be expected in such a jam.

On the next evening an admission fee of ten cents for adult gentlemen was taken at the door, which helped out with the expense without diminishing the crowd. Bro. Rathbun's work on the third degree was worthy the occasion and met the demands of the hour as may be judged from the fact that every foot of standing ground was occupied and the audience, with scarcely an exception, remained until nearly or quite eleven o'clock, and then were dismissed with the benediction and retired in good order and deeply impressed with the wicked abomination of the things that are done of them in secret.

Bro. Rathbun has won for himself, as a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, a large place in the hearts of the Christian men and women who met him at the convention and in their homes; and has shown himself worthy the love and support of all who love the truth.

Some of the craft in Evansville are happy in what they have witnessed, hailing this as the dawning of the day of their emancipation from a system they abhor; while others, evidently of the baser sort, are so stirred in their minds that they lie awake nights to hate the man who exposes their vile system and plan for his destruction.

I would gladly give a long list of the names of friends, including Bro. Stevens and wife, Bros. Bancroft, Suidter, Hoard, Harris, Whitmore, Sister Harvey and many others, but I must leave the space for Bro. Golden's report. Bro. Browne and his excellent wife, seconded by Bro. and Sister Sutphen, and a few who are not under lodge bondage, are deserving of great praise for their untiring and successful efforts in preparing the way and providing for the wants of delegates and friends from abroad. As for Bros. Hinman, Mathews and myself, we were cordially welcomed at the home of Bro. Standish, an old time reformer, where we lacked for no good thing. The kindness of Bro. S. and of his family will long be held in grateful remembrance.

Should other State meetings prove as harmonious and as effective as that of Wisconsin, the year's campaign will tell fearfully, yet gloriously on the wavering columns of our enemy. Brethren and sisters, God will do his part, will you do yours; and will you pray for me that I may have grace and wisdom to do mine? May God bless and strengthen us all for an onward movement to victory. J. P. STODDARD.

FATHER TAYLOR AT WORK.

DRESDEN, O., Aug. 28, 1879.

ED. CYNOSURE:—Father Taylor has been in our bounds for the last two weeks, and some notice of his work here may be acceptable to the readers of the Cynosure. He came among us August 20th, and has been lecturing and preaching wherever the way was open to him.

On Thursday evening, Aug. 21st, he lectured in the Reformed Presbyterian church to a very good audience—good in size and appreciation. We can not give a full outline of his lecture, but he showed very plainly the origin of Freemasonry and its development. Mr. Taylor spoke for about an hour and a half, the audience giving the closest attention.

At the close of this lecture a general desire was expressed that on Friday evening the lecturer work one of the degrees. Accordingly the announcement was made to that effect. On Friday evening a large crowd assembled to see the lecturer "enter the lion's cage," for a good many present thought it was about as safe to go into a lion's cage as to thus publicly expose Masonry. But Father Taylor "dug into the wall" (Ez. 8th chapter) and showed us some of the "abominations" done behind the walls of secretism. He got along with working the third degree so far as the killing of Hiram, when Hiram not desiring such a typical death, jumped out at the window and made good his escape, leaving quite a rent in the celebrated Masonic drawers! This unexpected absconding of the candidate interfered with finishing the degree to the end, and the hour being late, the crowd was dismissed.

Of course the usual weapons were employed by the Masons to hinder and mar the good effect of such expositions, viz:—"He's crazy;" "he's a fool;" "that's all a lie;" etc. One man told me,—"You had better have that man caged;" "It's as good as a circus." Still, the great majority of the audience got a sight of the inside of the cage. They saw the foolishness and wickedness of such abominable work.

On Sabbath afternoon, after preaching in the Presbyterian church close by, in the morning, Father Taylor preached in the same place, (Ref. Presbyterian church), from the 8th chapter of Ezekiel. Being a rainy, wet evening but few came out to hear him, but those who did were well repaid.

On Tuesday night (Aug. 26th) Mr. Taylor lectured in Dresden to an audience composed mostly of Masons. They treated him very respectfully and paid close attention to the truth he uttered concerning the institution.

On Wednesday night he lectured in Tonica church (Reformed Presbyterian) about five miles north of Dresden. On account of work that kept me at home I was not present. He was to lecture to-night at the same church, and on Sabbath, Aug. 30th, he preaches on the Religion of Freemasonry at 4 o'clock.

One word and we are done. Has anything been done? We think there has been considerable done.

1. His lecturing here has shown just how the people stand as regards the subject of Freemasonry.

2. It has shown who are the true friends of this reform.

3. It has instructed and stirred up many who were cold and indifferent towards the cause.

4. It caused the enemy to prick up their ears, any way. They scent the hunters coming nearer.

5. It gave us encouragement.

Had I time I would have given a fuller notice of this series of lectures by Father Taylor, but this must suffice for the present.

Hoping he may be instrumental in destroying many of Satan's strongholds and advancing Christ's cause, I remain his friend,

W. S. FULTON.

A Word of Exhortation.

TO THE FRIENDS OF REFORM IN IOWA:—Dear brethren and sisters, elect and precious, called and chosen of God in Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath ordained that you should go forth letting your light shine out into the moral and spiritual darkness around you, that God should be glorified in you as you reflect the light of Jesus Christ; not allowing the darkness for a moment to comprehend it. To you, whose souls are lighted by wisdom from on high, is the call made to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. The day is near at hand for the marshalling of the Lord's hosts against anti-Christ. Come up, then to Morning Sun to the State meeting, that we may be cheered by your presence, and that we may be of one heart and mind in this work of the Lord. We send missionaries abroad to enlighten those who worship heathen gods, and shall we not enlighten by the light of the Gospel here, those who worship the god of the heathen.

Come, then, and let our hearts be warmed together as we prepare to go out and carry the Gospel to those around us. Shall we not be ready to co-operate, and move all around the silent camp of God's enemies, and we acting in concert break the pitchers like Gideon's band, and let our lights shine. The light is of little use if it does not shine. Good desire and well wishing is all very well; but the cause of Christ demands more. We have the foe to meet and we must go out to battle. We must carry the warfare against anti-Christ into his own camp as did Gideon. I believe the time has fully come when God calls upon every loyal Christian, every one who is on the side of God and Christ to come out in open defense of God's cause. Our weapons are not carnal, but are the mighty truths of God. And ye his servants are light in the Lord, and can let God's truth shine by showing your faith and zeal for the defense of his truth by making his truth known in the distribution of tracts against secrecy, and sustaining and encouraging the circulation of the Cynosure and other papers that oppose the secret workings of anti-Christ. You can come to the State meeting, or you can send a delegate, or you can send a pledge of financial support to the cause, and thus be represented in the field of the battle of the Lord against the hosts of Baal. You can exhort those around you to take a stand for Christ. You can refuse to fellowship those who worship the sun and sacrifice to devils. You can pray for them, and exhort them daily to turn from these lying vanities. But you cannot let them pass on unrebuked, neither can you go any longer with them. You are a soldier of Christ, and you cannot retreat so long as the Captain leads you on. And never were true soldiers of Christ needed more than now. Can the Captain depend on you? O, put on the whole armor of the Lord. Ye that are of a fearful heart, be strong in the Lord, Jesus bids you onward go.

Do you say I, cannot go abroad? In many cases it is not necessary in order to find work. Do you ask where shall I begin? Begin right in your own place. Ask yourchurch to send a delegation to the State meeting. Ask for collections to aid the work opposing secretism; aud when the dart of the enemy comes saying, the Bible and the general truths are enough, repel those by assuring the well meaning that God uses special truths and means against special sins, and then urge special effort of the church against the special effort of anti-Christ. Ask your church to be opened for discourses on the Religion of Freemasonry and the anti-Christ of secretism, that its real character may be brought to the light. We know that whatsoever hateth the light is of anti-Christ, is not of God, but is of Satan. If we would carry this Gospel of the kingdom to those in the highway and hedges, we shall find it necessary to go where they do not send for us.

And now shall we come up to the help of the Lord, and send this Gospel of good news into the regions beyond. I have been endeavoring to bring the artillery of God's truth to bear on the religion of anti-Christ by delivering discourses on the religion of Freemasonry. And while I have endeavored to secure the use of churches for this work, and found such a spirit of time serving on the part of Christians, I have been made to realize more than ever the need of missionary work in this special direction. It has seemed to be with fear and trembling that they were opened at all. It was said in the days of Christ that the common people gladly heard the word of God, and it was also said of the Jews, "seeing that ye count yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo! we turn to the Gentiles;" and I have found a Freemason who freely and cheerfully opened his hall for the discourse, and so gave his influence that I had a large audience. He freely offers it to me for more lectures, and for the degree work if I want it. Now here is a fearful contrast between this and many Christian churches. But we must carry the light to the people, and as the light shines upon the darkness of secrecy they will come up. The fearful and weak will gain strength. Pray for the work, exhort one another daily, keep it before the people, and expect God to bless you in it. He does me. Praise his holy name. JOEL H. AUSTIN.

Certain Prohibition.

"If a soul sin, and hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear his iniquity." Lev. 5: 1.

Looking at the above words I am unable to see any difficulty in their application to common events around us.

Suppose a case in court. The accused has a friend in a witness who is desirous to screen him. The witness evades, or conceals, or "does not utter" a part of the truth which he had "seen or known," and thus the accused escapes. The witness thus incurs the guilt which the passage specifies and shall "bear his iniquity." He may escape punishment by the law of man, but he cannot escape the penalty of the law of God.

What! Is there no mercy for such men? Yes, if they confess and forsake their sins. Then the law of Moses required him (v. 5) to "confess that he had sinned in that thing," viz., any of the sins named in verses 1, 2, 3 and 4. The sin in v. 4 being so accurate a description of the Masonic oath that it seems impossible how intelligent Christians when shown it, can avoid the duty of confessing and forsaking the fraternity which binds men by an oath so clearly prohibited by their God through Moses. Still less are they permitted to take such oaths under the Lord Jesus Christ their Lord and Master, whose command "swear not," certainly prohibits such oaths as these required by this secretist brotherhood. ?

The Beast of Revelations.

FLINT, Mich.

Having carefully note the question relative to the Image of the Beast, by Hannah D. Chapman, and also the reply to it, in the Cynosure of July 24, I would briefly and respectfully submit one or two facts in connection, which I hope will prove of interest to this candid sister. Please take the Bible and turn to Rev. 13, and study the symbolic diagram of the two beasts and image, and I think you will find the image symbol should not be applied to popery; that the first beast having seven heads and ten horns is a symbol of civil government, and should be applied to the Roman Empire in its divided state; and, that the two-horned beast is the symbol of ecclesiastical government, and should be applied to the Roman hierarchy is conceded by all commentators whose opinions are entitled to any weight. The ten-horned beast in his civil character arose out of the sea (which always in prophetic style denotes people) by a commotion of its elements, political strife, wars, etc. The two-horned beast came up out of the earth, and had two horns like a lamb, denoting his peaceful origin and ecclesiastical character; but he afterwards becomes fierce, speaks as a dragon, and exercises all the power of the first beast before him, causing the earth and them that dwell therein "to worship the beast whose deadly wound was healed." You will notice this same power deceived those who dwelt on on the earth, saying to them, that the should make an image to the first beast; that is, the ten-horned beast, or Roman empire.

Masonry the parent stalk, from which grew all the branches of secretism, although as old in principle as Baal worship, cannot be styled the image, until after it merges into speculative Freemasonry, by the life given it by the two-horned beast, or popery. Freemasonry is a secret artificial empire, universal in extent, as was the Roman empire at one time, in power. That Freemasons aspire to universality in power, no rational mind with any knowledge of their political intrigues, can, for a moment, doubt.

I am pleased to witness a growing interest in this work; and, from a Scripture stand point. Masons should be shown the part they play in prophesy, the judgment and final doom awaiting them, by pointing them to the last message of mercy to this world in its present age, that of the third angel of Rev. 14:9-12.

I am glad there are a few women who have the moral and physical courage to openly denounce the dangerous power lurking in the heathen temples, scattered broadcast over the world and dedicated to Satan, the arch enemy to God and man, whose work is to dethrone Christ in the hearts of men, and his church. Women, who dare speak and write (and all should be fearless for Christ, who said, "whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall find it. Mat. 16:25,) may wage a successful warfare against Masonry. I should be glad to hear from this dear sister often; and should there be any objection to the views herein expressed, I will prayerfully consider them. NINA GREGORY.

Our Mail.

K. A. Orvis, Antwerp, N. Y., writes:

"I have just been reading Bro. Miller's trial in the last Cynosure, and I wish every minister in our church could read it. * * I read the Cynosure and then give it to those that I think it will be of benefit to—sometimes to ministers and Masons or to Anti-masons. I think some begin to feel the danger of the dark institution. May God bless you in your noble work of diffusing light."

J. C. Bartholomew, Ely, Linn county, Iowa, writes:

"The Lord willing I intend to meet with the friends at the Iowa State anniversary. I gave a lecture at the county-seat last Wednesday evening."

John Shuh, Columbia City, Ind., writes:

"May the Lord bless his work of reformation. The church of our Lord being entangled with secrecy is one of the greatest sinful conditions. I judge in the spirit of Christ."

Rev. E. Weyman, Studholm Parish, Apohocqui Station, writes:

"I think much of the principle and spirit of your paper. I believe all secret societies bound together by solemn oaths to be injurious to church and state. My prayer is that God may work a thorough work of revolution throughout the continent and the world. It must be done before the world can be much better. I suppose we are living under the sixth vial and the three unclean spirits like to work to oppose the Lord Jesus in his work."

H. Upton, Decatur, Mich., writes:

"I hope to be a life subscriber."

Alfred Osgood, Lostant, Ill., writes:

"H. H. Hinman lectured in my hall last Monday evening on the evils of secretism. Samuel Holmes, Esq., followed telling us what he had seen and known of the evil works of Freemasonry in the courts and churches in the State of Iowa where he resides. It had a good effect on the congregation."

A. J. Loudenback, Glidden, Carroll county, Iowa, writes:

"I am not discouraged yet. I never intend to give up while life lasts, and the Lord wills, for I believe it is his work."

A. W. Sackett, Godfrey, Bourbon county, Kan., writes:

"We will do all we can for the reform."

He orders "Freemasonry Illustrated" and a large number of tracts, suiting the action to the word.

J. L. Eddins, Doe Hill, Highland county, Va., writes:

"I am sorry to say the people here have no light on the subject of the secret orders. I wish I was able to put a hundred copies of the Cynosure into this office. My friends tell me my life is in danger if I say anything against the idolatrous worship. * * May God give such men as J. P. Stoddard, Rathbun, J. M. Scott and George Richey the will to press forward to tread down the foe which is the ruin of our courts and of our country."

John K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo., writes August 23rd:

"I am going to deliver two or three lectures on the first and second nights of September in this county. I suppose they will be the first of the kind ever delivered in these parts. * * I can but oppose such a vile system and ask the prayers of all Anti-masons, that the good Lord will overturn Masonry in this land and may the day be hastened."

J. Barnhart, Mansfield, Piatt county, Ill., writes:

"May God bless you in your noble effort of bringing to light the hidden things of dishonesty. I hope God will raise up men all over this country to oppose the works of the devil."

J. S. Rice, North Pownal, Maine, writes:

"I want to say in reference to the Cynosure that I consider it one of the best, if not the very best paper published in the country. It should be in every family. In my feebleness I have done all I could for it and intend to keep on doing. I am sorry that I can't send along a lot of subscriptions for it now. I am glad to know that the light is shining and the work goes on even in this State where so little is done to check the onward course of Freemasonry and so much to strengthen and advance its wickedness. I find in the report of the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Maine that their membership has fallen off the year past 212. This is encouraging in view of the circumstances. Every effort is put forth to gather in all that can possibly be persuaded to join the dark night working order. I converse all I can with church members, especially professed Gospel ministers. I find some who have been through the mill who think no better of the institution than I do, but they dare not express their views openly for they know they will suffer for it if they do. One three degree Mason, a preacher, told me that if it was not for his bread and butter he would show up Masonry. Another of the same class told me that I could not be engaged in any better business than distributing Anti-masonic books, papers, etc. We are hoping that Bro. Stoddard or his equal will be along again this fall, many want to hear him."

Those who read the Publishers' Department will remember Mr. Rice's past success in working for the Cynosure.

Sabbath School.

LESSON XXXVIII.—Sept. 21, 1879.—THE CHRISTIAN CITIZEN.

SCRIPTURE.—Titus 3: 1-9.

1. Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work.
2. To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men.
3. For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.
4. But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,
5. Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;
6. Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;
7. That, being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.
8. This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.
9. But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain.

SUGGESTIONS.

Titus, to whom this letter was written, is not mentioned by name in Acts. He was a Gentile, converted under the preaching of Paul (Gal. 2; 1, 3; Titus 1: 4). He was a companion and fellow-laborer with Paul, one greatly beloved (2 Cor. 2: 13), and the bearer of the second letter to the Corinthians (2 Cor. 8: 16, 17, 23). "He was located in Crete, subsequent to Paul's first imprisonment, and shortly before the second imprisonment. Tradition represents him to have died in Crete, at an advanced age."

The Epistle to Titus. "When and by whom these churches were founded is quite uncertain. In Acts 2: 11, they are enumerated among those who heard the utterance of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, and it is probable that these churches owed their origin to the return of individuals from contact with the preaching of the Gospel." It is supposed this letter was written from Ephesus, A. D. 67. The letter concerns order, which Titus was to maintain. There were many churches, and Titus was to see that elders were ordained, and the churches duly instructed. Chapter 2 contains directions for doctrine and life, and verses 11-14 are an admirable statement of the former. Chapter 3 brings the subject of our lesson before us, and it may be stated as follows, viz: A Christian is one who has become a citizen of another country, and one who owes his allegiance first to the King of kings. He cannot therefore be under obligation to obey any law that is contrary to the law of God (Acts 4: 19; 5: 29.) When we cannot obey the laws because they are against the laws of God, we are to bear as Christians the penalties imposed upon us, even as did the Apostles. It cannot be doubted that the view commonly held on this subject is wrong. We have no right to do evil that good may come. But in the discharge of all duties consistent with God's law, the Christian should be first. His example should be such as to commend his profession. But we are always to live as citizens of heaven, and pilgrims on the earth.

GENERAL NOTES.

1. "Put them in mind to be subject." The people of the church at Crete, especially the Jewish portion, were disposed to disrespect the authority of the Roman rulers under whose power they were.

"To obey." It is necessary for the sake of preserving peace and good order, that subjects obey their rulers, as far as they can without disobeying the law of God.

2. "Unto all men." Whether they believe as we do or not. Even to our enemies we should show forbearance and kindness.

8. "This is a faithful saying." True and worthy of belief.

9. "Contentions." Disputing over unimportant matters.

"Unprofitable and vain." These matters of contention can never be decided, and would not be important if they could—would not pay for the time and temper lost.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPT. 11, 1879.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—One of your correspondents says that if we ask for "the visible church," "we find only a shadow," and recommends obedience to Christ as the best way to find this "visible church." Is this not rather indefinite, when so many as he says cry, "Lo here and lo there?"

Would you allow me to ask what the institutions are to which he directs obedience. If he means baptism and the Lord's supper, are they not observed by every denomination except, perhaps, the Quakers or Friends? The differences of opinion prevalent regarding the manner of observing these, seem to me to be the real difficulty. Now, as all admit them, and yet differ in their ways of obedience, how are we to decide which is best? Young people can't be expected to know all the arguments on every side, and hence are they not justified in adhering to the faith of their fathers?

ENQUIRER.

The above queries are very natural, and yet it is ever true that the Lord Jesus did give his people directions that they might obey him in their meeting together as a church. The church of the present dispensation is strictly under Christ as its risen Lord and Head. The special power of the Gospel in the day of Pentecost began its world-wide warfare, and three thousand converts were its first trophies. We do not know how to direct any enquirer in fewer words than to say, Study the founding of churches as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, and in the instructions to the churches given in the letters which follow.

To expect people in one day, who have been brought up in different Christian bodies, to surrender every point, is not reasonable. We think it enough if they agree upon the primal truths declared in the sermons given in the Acts, and agree to differ on all that is not made essential in the apostolic letters to the churches.

The danger of the church in every age has arisen from man's wisdom substituting something for the plain commands of God. Let believers treat things of man's wisdom as merely expedient at best, and not as authoritative or necessary as the bond of Christian brotherhood, and a great step towards the visible unity of God's people will have been made.

We cannot imagine that those who said, "I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Peter," did not also regard themselves as "of Christ." But the names of any other than Christ was called "carnal;" therefore, as it was wrong then to be "of Paul," etc., certainly it cannot be right now to adhere to the name of any modern teacher or form of church government.

We may here say, however, that the mission of the Cynosure is not to discuss sectarian differences, but to unite all Christians upon the acknowledgement of Christ as their only Lord, and the necessary result that the Masonic lodge and its Christ-excluding worship, should be a matter of discipline or exclusion from the church. For every intelligent Master Mason necessarily supports "another gospel," and incurs the curse pronounced upon its teachers.

BRO. SHUEY CAPTURES A CONFERENCE.

Brethren Hott and Tobey, the able and respected editors of the Religious Telescope, with Dr. Davis of the Union Biblical Seminary, a man worthy to be revered among his people as was Samuel among the Hebrews, were at the late meeting of the Miami conference of the United Brethren church. They were not members, only visiting brethren. We can imagine their feelings when the following was added to the report of the conference on publishing interests:

1. That we observe with regret that the Christian Cynosure should lend itself to the work of attacking the bishops and other officers of the United Brethren church, and by implication, innuendo and open declaration, holding up our conferences and conference actions to ridicule and reproach.

2. That we are grieved that the Telescope has allowed its columns to be used to make statements reflecting on the conduct of the First United Brethren church of Dayton and its pastor for several years past, not borne out by the facts, and quite discreditable to said congregation and pastor. We regard this as a very reprehensible use of the church organ. We also regard as highly improper the statements made in the Telescope, from time to time, reflecting on the management of the Printing Establishment, which management passes semi-annually under the supervision of a large and competent Board of Trustees appointed by General Conference. These and similar outgivings from time to time make it exceedingly difficult to get subscribers for our church paper, and render the paper distasteful to those who do subscribe and pay for it.

Since Rev. W. J. Shuey, publishing agent of the denomination, and Rev. E. S. Chapman, pastor of the first church of Dayton, were members of the conference it cannot be wholly supposition to say that the conference did their pleasure in this matter. The position of these two brethren on the lodge question is well enough known to our readers, and the Cynosure considers itself in good company to be reproved for zeal in a good cause alongside the Telescope. It does not appear how this paper could do otherwise than rebuke church leaders who were confessedly breaking down the rules of their own church, nor can we promise not to lend our columns to correspondents who are able to put in a proper light such misdemeanor. If the conduct of this paper is to be investigated, all we ask is for a fair chance, and that until next meeting the members of Miami conference read carefully its "attacks," etc., for themselves.

The most astounding and grievous part of the Telescope matter is that Bro. Shuey has had the use of its columns to an almost unlimited extent to explain his position of hostility to the law of his church and to "attack" brethren who defended it.

THE IOWA CONVENTION.

President Kent, of the Iowa Association, who is just recovering from severe sickness, has been doing all in his power for the success of the Iowa State Convention. He writes to Bro. Stoddard of a notice sent by him which did not appear in the Cynosure. As we have printed everything of the kind we could lay hands on, the notice referred to must have been lost in the mails, or else Bro. Kent has overlooked his letter published August 28th. The letter speaks hopefully of the prospect of the meeting, and sketches a plan of work for the year, which, as it will be under discussion at Morning Sun, will be read with interest by all who expect to be present, and may induce some to come and share in the deliberations who might otherwise remain at home.

He writes:—"The local committee at Morning Sun are wide awake. The best hall in the town hai been secured; free entertainment to all who will come is guaranteed. The notice will be thorough; our corresponding secretary is prompt and busy. Bro. S. E. Starry is working the degrees in Jasper county. He and Bro. Ferguson will be at the meeting, and it is hoped that a general rally of the friends will be made and that success will crown our efforts.

In answer to one of your suggestions, I would say that we send brethren Starry and Austin into the field together, one to lecture and preach, the other to work the degrees, to support themselves by admittance fees and contributions from the friends.

2nd. That Bro. Rathbun and a good financial agent be authorized to labor together, also to support themselves by their labor; the State to be districted or otherwise as the State Association think best. Those agents and lecturers could be instructed to appoint suitable persons in each county who together would form a finance committee who should report and remit to the treasurer of the State Association."

—Pres. Blanchard is slowly gaining in strength, and expects to start for Omaha on Friday of this week, and on Monday leave there for San Jose, California. Mrs. Blanchard will accompany him. They will remain at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Thomas E. Kennedy, in San Jose, until it shall please God to grant a return of health and vigor. A trip to California has been for two years in contemplation and arrangements have been begun once or twice, but were providentially put aside until now, when it is taken, not as a necessity, but as a means of restoration which combines also the fulfillment of former plans of visiting friends and relatives on the Pacific cost. The Cynosure readers will receive frequent word from their editor, who will communicate with them as often as will seem advisable during his absence.

—Bro. Stoddard returned from Evansville, Wis., last Friday, full of hope and good courage from the result of the Wisconsin State meeting. He reports, in this number. Next week he goes to Iowa.

—A letter from Pres. S. B. Allen of Westfield, last week, says that the Wabash conference has been fixed at the same time as the State convention. As most of the brethren at Westfield wish to attend conference a change in the time of the State meeting is necessary. President Allen has been written to and will inform us if the convention can be held a week earlier, that is, October 7 to 9.

—V. A. Seavey, chief of police of this city, died last Saturday after a long and painful disease. He was a 32 degree Mason and member of the Oriental Consistory of "Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret;" which, under the present management of our public affairs was sufficient reason for his rapid elevation from a simple policeman to the head of the department.

—At the request of Bro. Hinman an informal meeting of such members as could be gathered of the committee appointed at the last Illinois State meeting for free missions, etc., was held at Wheaton last week Monday. The brethren were much gratified with Bro. Hinman's report. He has undertaken this work voluntarily, trusting that God will supply means for his personal support while in the work. He finds wherever he has gone great interest manifested and a determination to send missionary money through a better channel than societies that compromise with the lodge. He was encouraged to continue his efforts among undenominational churches and others whose church boards are contamimated with secretism. A full meeting of this committee should be held ere long to consult for the enlargement of the work under the marked favor of God.

All who successfully canvass for the Cynosure are allowed something for their labor even when they send in clubs at our lowest club rates. But the chief reward of those who circulate the Cynosure, we believe to be the consciousness that they are working for the welfare of their country, of their fellowmen throughout the whole world, and above all for the glory of God.

—There is an interesting record come down to us of the old Salem church in Massachusetts. The election and ordination of the first pastor and teacher of the congregation was reported formally to Gov. Bradford of Plymouth, which record shows the care taken in those early days to conform all the outward observances of the solemn setting apart of these brethren to the work laid on them by the church. The account reads:—"Every fit member wrote in a note his name whom the Lord moved him to think was fit for a pastor, and so likewise whom they would have for a teacher; so the most voice was for Mr. Skelton to be pastor and Mr. Higginson to be teacher; and they accepted the choice. Mr. Higginson, with the gravest members of the church, laid their hands on Mr. Skelton, using prayer therewith. This being done, then there was imposition of hands on Mr. Higginson."

—The Rev. Dr. McMurdy, the Episcopal clergyman whose haughty defense of Freemasonry was the only interference of the kind during the session of the Illinois State Convention, held in this city in 1874, has been put to shame by his own works at Niles, Michigan. His intimacy with a divorced woman, while not believed to be criminal, yet led him to write her a number of scandalous letters. He has resigned under a cloud. Mr. McMurdy is, if we are not mistaken, a Knight Templar and a high official in the Grand Lodge. He was also one of the charter members of the Masonic Hall Association of Washington City, and helped found Mackey's National Freemason, now defunct. Bro. Farout of St. Louis, Mich., measured swords with this Masonic champion with the disadvantage of being fettered by a Masonic editor. He made McMurdy feel, however, the weight of his blows for truth.

—The attention of the Voice of Masonry is called to this case of McMurdy. He has, perhaps, violated no tenet of the lodge, but his folly has brought the profession of morality into contempt. He is certainly as prominent a Mason as the late William Rounseville, or as Alexander White, upon whom the vials of Masonic wrath are being poured. Now, since it is considered for the good of the order to abuse the latter month after month for refusing to bury a man, why should not the picadilloes of McMurdy receive attention and the corrective powers of the Voice be thoroughly applied, for the good of the order and the sinning clergyman. If there is no attempt at such a good work we shall be obliged to confess that Masonic wrath takes no notice of moral delinquencies, but is expended on the heads of those who keep not the false oaths of the lodge.

Married.

Hudson—White.—In Wheaton, on the evening of Sept. 5th, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mr. Carlton W. Hudson, to Miss Myra C. White, both former students of Wheaton College. Ceremony by Prof. C. A. Blanchard. The happy pair left on the afternoon train of Friday for their new home in Indiana.

Thompson—Kinne.—At the home of the bride's mother in Bartlett, Ill., August 23rd, Alexander Thompson of Manitowanning, Canada, and Mrs. E. M. Kinne of Wheaton, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson started by boat the same day for his present home in Manitoulin Island, Lake Huron.

A Grand Temperance Camp Meeting.

Such a gathering has just been held at the lovely "Silver Lake" grove in western New York, running through eight days and evenings, with some six sessions each day.

A large number of the most able speakers addressed the throngs of people who attended. Among the most prominent, eloquent and effective were Rev. Dr. Huntington, Dr. Ives, Dr. Niles of New York, Dr. Nobles of New Jersey, Hon. Neal Dow of Maine, Hon. Mr. Carswell, Mrs. Youmans of Canada and Miss Willard of Chicago.

Wednesday evening the veteran temperance and anti-slavery lecturer and singer, George W. Clark, a white-haired old gentleman, nearly seventy, gave a very pithy, characteristic speech and a song in honor of water. During his performance he held in his hand a glass brimfull of water without losing a drop—an illustration of the effects of a temperate life upon the nerves. He was frequently applauded. He concluded with a toast to the man who cleared the land and planted the corn and raised the goose that bore the quill that made the pen that wrote the first pledge to abstain forever from the use of intoxicants.

Miss Willard was then introduced, and took her subject in hand with characteristic skill and force. She alluded in a most affecting way to the song just sung. She said "Rock of Ages" was the song of the woman's crusade, and spoke of the experiences of herself and others in that notable movement. She traced the crusade from its rise to its end. Fifty days of the crusade, she said, did what fifty years of legislation had failed to do; but there came a falling away. Men who had seemed firmest in determinations for a new life, went back. The trouble was, temptation had not been removed, the saloon doors were all open. Miss Willard gave an account of further efforts of Illinois women in a new direction. They began to look about for the source of the evil, and found the bad stream gurgling from under the State capitol—the members were countenancers of the liquor traffic. Then originated the famous Home Protection petition in Illinois, asking the passage of a bill giving women the right to vote in matters of local license or prohibition. The history of this petition, the remarkable success in obtaining signatures, and the cause of its failure, as told by the eloquent lecturess, was very interesting. She thought the line of petition the right one. She argued with great ability the right of women to vote on license questions, and gave some interesting instances of their efforts to obtain influence in the matter in Western towns. Two things were at the root of the rum evil, she said—the appetite of the patron and the avarice of the dealer. The antidote to the poison is the instinct of self-preservation in women. The speaker referred touchingly to her mother on the Wisconsin prairies, and of the encouragement she had from her, and said "offset the drinker's love for liquor by his mother's love for him." Miss Willard believes heartily, and with reason, that the great motive power in temperance reform must be woman's influence; an engine is needed, and that must be the woman's temperance ballot.

After Miss Willard's address the audience was again favored with a song by Bro. Clark, "Clear the Way."

To the Friends of Reform in Michigan.

There is a question of very great importance to be answered by you, dear friends, and that is, Shall our State meeting be made a success? This question must be answered by you, and answered not so much by what you say as by what you do. If the friends will send in their suggestions in reference to the place, we shall be able very soon to decide upon the location, and we hope to make it as central as possible, so that all can attend who will; and we wish to hold it at the time suggested by Bro. Stoddard, which is the last week in October. Now, what are you doing to prepare for this meeting? Are you making arrangements to attend, or are you saying that you would go if you were able, or that you couldn't be of any use and they can get along just as well without you? What we want is, not so much your good wishes as your presence and help. The moral effect of our meeting upon the place where it is held depends in great measure upon the number who attend; for the people will naturally measure the importance of the work and the interest felt therein by the number of delegates present. There are enough professed friends of our cause in this State to send five hundred delegates to the convention. We should commence at once to make arrangements by canvassing such territory as we may be able, to secure the means to run the convention and also to urge upon those who profess to be interested the importance of attending the meeting. There should be two or more delegates appointed by every church and association which is opposed to secret societies, and this should be done long enough before hand to give ample time to get ready.

Now friends, don't wait for some one else to do this work, but do it yourselves and then you will know that it is done. There is a great work to be done and you and I will be held responsible according to our ability. It is not enough for me to preach and pray and talk this reform, but I must spend time and money also for its advancement. Let us do all that is in our power to do, and then and only then may we hope for the approval of Heaven.

When you read this do not wait till to-morrow, but sit down and write me a card giving your name and address, and then push the work in your own neighborhood, praying all the time for the help of the Holy Spirit, and our meeting will be a grand success.

Rev. W. H. Ross,
Cor. Sec., M. S. C. A.

OBITUARY.

In the New York Examiner and Chronicle, of Aug. 21st, I find the following notice of the decease of my venerable uncle, a staunch Antimason in olden times, though not so indicated in said paper:

"Died, at Great Valley, Cattaraugus county, New York, July 26th, Abraham Wright, aged 90 years. Father Wright was one of the constituent members of the Humphrey Baptist church in 1845. He loved her doctrines and her ordinances. He had a rich Christian experience. Of God's love and mercy to him—a poor helpless, and wrath-deserving sinner, he never tired. In the arms of Jesus, the embodiment of the Divine Love, he still rests."

Let me add to the above, from certain knowledge, that the deceased came from a long line of New England ancestors, most of whom exceeded eighty years. The oldest one known was Lieut. Abel Wright, of Springfield, Mass., born in 1631, who lived there from 1655 to Oct. 29th, 1725, a period of seventy years, where his tombstone inscription, yet extant, says he died at the age of ninety-four years. I have twice visited it and recorded this date. Large families came from him, and ten out of thirteen of his sons and daughters married there, most of whom had considerable families, as the present writer found on record, who have been useful in the middle ranks of society, and have well served their country in peace and in war for seven or eight generations,—like the two sons of this uncle who did about four years of service in our late war of rebellion. This Abraham was one of twelve children, of whom ten lived to marry. He was born Dec. 20th, 1788, at Cambridge, Washington county, N. Y., where all were born, and was son of Deacon Abraham W., born 1752; son of Ebenezer, born 1727; son of Ebenezer, born 1701; son of Ensign Abel, born 1664. The son of Lieut. Abel Wright above described who married Martha Kitcherel, daughter of Samuel Kitcherel, of Hartford, Conn., Dec. 1, 1659.

This Abraham married Lydia Guy, of Kingsbury, N. Y., March 22, 1815, and in 1819 emigrated with his younger brother, Col. Richard, and a sister, Mrs. Esther Willoughby, to the region where he lately died, spending sixty years of his life there. In Sept., 1854, I visited him and his wife, when he was verging on seventy-five years of his eventful life, and found him a live Christian, and firm in the conviction he had long felt, like many of our family, that Masonry and all secret societies were a public bane, though previous to the new uprising of the National Christian Association, in 1868. He served his generation well as a citizen and a Christian, and we doubt not has entered into rest. I am yours,

Stephen Wright.

The Promise of His Coming.

He tarries where, beneath his feet
  The stars of heaven grow dim;
From thence to crown with deathless praise
  The souls that wait for him.
Before the throne he offers up
  Faith's feeblest, faintest prayer;
And where our loved ones are at rest,
  He watches o'er them there!

Not dead but risen, for us he reigns
  With pierced hands that bless;
No soul that seeks shall find him fail
  In danger or distress.
Bright glimpses of his glory shine
  Through clouds that still conceal;
We wait the fullness that shall break,
  Patient, till he reveal!

"Intense Minorities."

We stand not in numbers, but in God. For all practical purposes, one soul with God makes a majority. With him shall "one chase a thousand, and put ten thousand to flight." (Deut. 32:30.) When God distils and instils himself into a soul, until it is full of him, "pressed down, shaken together, running over," that soul is a match for any thing God sets him at. A man does not strike his full measure of usefulness until saved to God alone. He must travel with his hand in that of the Almighty, though his friends endeavor to pull him away, and his enemies stand and jeer at him.

Bro. W. has changed the order of speaking somewhat, by calling the human sword-points of the Almighty, "intense minorities." A minority such, to be sure; the world and the devil outvoting them by a hundred or a thousand to one; but an intense minority. One composing it is able to scale the wall of difficulties with the Word of God between his teeth, till he rides in a chariot of fire over the necks of his enemies.

Christians are in a minority, any way. The fierce world is a mammoth affair, and the lazy world greater yet; and especially, if we look after intense Christianity, it is an orphaned youth, with no place to lay its head. Yet it forces attention, claims respect, and lays the trophies of its sharpened sword at the feet of the Lion of the tribe of Judah.

Moderate Christians love to be moderate. So when the child of intensity comes along, rapping into shivers every cracked vessel of grace, it is no wonder that "a man's foes are they of his own household." A procession of snails may look very well, to the naturalist; but if one of them breaks from his shell, and cuts into the solemn ranks of snailery, there is a hubbub, of course. The devil rides the church at large, as on a steed, so that many of its movements are the guiding of his cunning hand. But intensified minorities shake the king of perdition from his seat, and move on, under the strong and steady reining of the hand divine.

Intense minorities are fighting minorities. They are born for war Cowardice is a sign of carnality; but Gospel bravery is a mark of Gospel intensity. To get out of one fight, is soon to get into another. They rather like a Thermopylæ, occasionally—where faith and firmness prevail with both God and man. They are not Jehus, but Pauls—"the love of Christ constraineth us."

An intense minority dwells in the focus of God. It is in the concentrated heat and blaze of the divine feeling and divine doing. And nothing else can live there. He who gets into the focus of the Almighty, gets purified, and therefore intense; or he soon crawls away, to the best of his ability. "God is a consuming fire."

In the eleventh of Hebrews there is an old list of these intensified ones. Noble men! noble women! "of whom the world was not worthy." And the list has lengthened amazingly since that record was made. There were ten general Roman persecutions of the Christians, during which these intense minorities flourished. And they have existed in every subsequent age. We read of their holy triumphs amid the blazing faggots of Smithfield, and under the tortures of the Inquisition. Of millions no record is made, except in the heart of heaven.

There are intense minorities today. Scattered they are in different haunts; but men and women on whose hearts the truth has been engraved with steel. They do, and dare, and suffer, for him who trod the wine-press alone; he who, in the intensity of his love and fidelity, carried his cross without the camp, and dyed it with his own blood.

But these modern intensified ones. Oh, what sights of eternity they get! Oh, what longings for souls they have! They are the holy ones. They have both an inflow and outflow of zeal that works wonders. By them, souls are converted, and believers are sanctified. Hallelujah!

Over unknown spaces we reach out toward you our hand, and bid you keep intense, though in a minority forever! The intense fire in our own heart sends out, as best it may, its molten glow of encouragement. Ye dust-begrimed warriors of the Lord, get new strength and new intensity, every morning, every meridian, every evening in the throne-room of the King. Ask not where you go, nor how you go, only that you go at the bidding of him who sends men forth, as well to Pilate's judgment hall, as to the banqueting house of love.

So many lose their holy intensity by conferring just a little with flesh and blood! So many allow at least the shadow of friends, of society, or of the church, to come between their soul's intense object and God! But do not so. Be so saved that God can give you the secrets of his saving plans, and work with you. Keep intense, by keeping in the intenser part of the divine blaze. Keep with the intense minorities, that from their closets make earth tremble and madden hell. And then, with prudent Stephen, at last, you will be permitted to look up "steadfastly into heaven," and see "the glory of God," and go to meet Jesus, "standing on the right hand of God," and live with him forever.—Banner of Holiness.

Lincoln's Homely Phrases.

Noah Brooks, in Midsummer Holiday Scribner has these remembrances. In his letter declining an invitation to attend the Illinois Republican Convention, in '63, Lincoln made use of two or three striking figures. Reviewing the military events of the past year, which had been favorable to the cause of the Union, he said:—"The Father of waters again goes unvexed to the sea." And, referring to the fact that Southern Unionists and ex-slaves had done something to help on the good work, he said:—"On the spot, their part of the history is dotted down in black and white." There was something in the phrase "dotted down in black and white" which mightily tickled the popular fancy.

At the time, however, criticism was provoked by this odd figure by the president:—"Nor must Uncle Sam's web-feet be forgotten. At all the watery margins they have been present not only on the deep sea, the broad bay, the rapid river, but also up the narrow, muddy bayous, and wherever the ground was a little damp, they have been and made their tracks." Lincoln was amused by the discussion in the newspapers to which the use of the phrase "Uncle Sam's web-feet" gave rise. He explained that the remarkable feats performed by the gun boats, in making their way through sloughs and bayous, heretofore considered unnavigable, reminded him of the stealthy passage of water fowl. The pleasantry concerning light-draft steamers going where "the ground is a little damp" is familiar to every body.

It will be a long time before our people will forget his homely simile of "elder squirts charged with rosewater," as applied to the conservative programme for prosecuting the war. This was used in a letter addressed to Cuthbert Bullitt, of New Orleans, in which letter he also said that the conservatives were like complaining passengers on a ship—"The mutineers must go untouched, lest one of these sacred passengers should receive an accidental wound."

His imagination was powerfully stimulated by any reference to the history of the republic. His address at Gettysburg, now one of the great historical speeches of the world, suggests, rather than expresses, a crowd of images. To Lincoln's mind, apparently, American history was filled with noble and pathetic figures. In some of the loftier flights of his eloquence may be found traces of a strong poetic fancy—an imagination fired by love of country, and inspired by the contemplation of the stirring events that have marked its history. No more striking example can be found anywhere than in the memorable words which formed the closing sentence of his first inaugural address:

"The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battle field and patriot grave to every living heart and hearth stone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Why Is It?

Saloon-keepers put up a screen before their doors; home players shuffle their cards out of sight when the minister calls; and young men put their cigars behind them at sight of a lady. Why is it, unless they are ashamed of what they are doing? Now, boys, if saloon keepers think what is done inside too bad to be thrown open to the world, don't go behind the screen. If cards are not fit to shake hands over with the minister, let them alone. If the cigar in your lips offers an affront to the lady approaching, don't smoke it.

Moral Cowardice.

In nothing is the moral cowardice of men more clearly seen than in their unwillingness to stand by the defenceless and weak when they are being wronged by the strong and wealthy. Especially is this the case if our bread and butter depends upon our silence.

How very few are capable of standing boldly for an oppressed and injured man when such a course is likely to injure us. And how many wink at injustice and wrong when their interests are conserved by so doing. The stuff which reformers like Luther were made of seems to be a very scarce article nowadays.

How any man can profess to be a Christian when he has not the courage to defend what he believes to be the truth, and is willing to keep silent when he sees the weak oppressed by the strong, and cruel injustice done to those who can not defend themselves, passes our comprehension. What God wants of Christians, is that they should be men of strong, clear convictions and should live up to them. A true man and a Christian will say, and act accordingly, "Let the truth prevail, and justice be done, though the heavens fall, and though they crush me in their fall." This is moral courage and heroism, and any thing less than this is moral cowardice. May God help us to be true to our convictions and allow no false notions of temporary self-interest to hush our voices when truth and justice are in peril. —Golden Censer.

Which is your Lot?

Some children roam the fields and hills,
And others work in noisy mills;
Some dress in silks, and dance and play,
While others drudge their lives away;
Some glow with health and bound with song,
And some must suffer all day long.

Which is your lot, my girl and boy?
Is it a life of ease and joy?
Ah, if it is, its glowing sun
The poorer life should shine upon.
Make glad one little heart to-day,
And help one burdened child to play

Why He Did not Go.

"I don't like cirkises," said Grandma Bassett, emphasizing the remark with an extra blow of the flat-iron, as she placed it on the triangular iron stand.

"Why, everybody goes to them," said blue-eyed Miriam, coaxing the baby she had brought to show grandma how it could walk with hands outspread.

"I'm sorry for't," was the grim rejoinder.

"Sorry for what, grandma?" and a sun-burnt, laughing face appeared at the door. It was her grandson from the farm two or three miles away, and he had brought a small sack of potatoes for her.

"Sorry for what, granny?" he repeated.

"Sorry because cirkises come, and people go to 'em," was the answer.

"Oh, you're old-fashioned, granny dear! People don't have such notions now; and besides, circuses are nicer than they used to be. Why, I brought in some early apples off my own tree to sell on purpose to go to this one; and I wanted to give little Miriam a treat. I was going to ask her."

"Well, you needn't, for she can't go. I'd as soon see her buried—I'd like ter said," was the old lady's reply.

"Why, granny, how can you say so? What possible objections can you have?" asked her grandson, a little warmly. "Poor Miriam never goes anywhere. All work and no play makes little girls dull. I'm sure its very instructive—the animals and curiosities from all parts of the world; and then the music and the horses"—

"Yes, yes; I know all about it. Hevn't I had cause to? It jest makes my heart ache to hear you going on so—and—well, yes, I s'pose I might as well tell you my objections. You've never heered 'em. It's best for some things never to be spoke of only in the way of warnin'.

"I don't s'pose ye remember yer Uncle Eben? Miry here was only six months old when he died, and yer couldn't 'a' been over five, and not livin' where you do now, either. Eben was the hansomest of my boys, an' bright an' smart as he could be. There never was such a boy as he was for books.

"When he was 'bout twenty-two there came one of them soul-destroyers—that's what I call 'em—into Upton village—that's about two miles from here—an' it stayed about two months.

"I was sort o' strict, and when Eben talked of goin', I said all I could agin it; but he was of age, and I couldn't deny him right up an' down. So he went, an' from that first night my poor boy wasn't the same.

"Every day he'd be quiet an' absent-like, an' every night he'd be to Upton. Father and I grew worried, but what could we do? He didn't tell us nothing.

"One day—I guess it was a week after the cirkis had gone—what does Eben do but bring home a wife! And that wife—well, she played in the cirkis," added Grandma Bassett, with suppressed bitterness.

"She was a little creeter; but didn't I see the paint through her white veil, and didn't I feel that she wasn't a true woman, that everything about her was false as her color was?

"Poor Eben! he thought the world of her, and perhaps she meant to be good to him; but you see the power of habit was strong.

For Eben's sake we tried to like her; but we could see that the quiet of the old farm and our homely ways growed irksome to her. She wanted the cirkis life, and after her baby was born—a year from the time she fust come to us—Eben took her to a cirkis for the sake of old times, and—and—I'd a good deal rather not say it, but the fact is, it was bred in the bone. She met some of her miserable friends, and whether they persuaded her or not I don't know, but in a few days she ran away with her baby—that innocent child, to train up, maybe, for the cirkis ring."

"Indeed, that was dreadful, granny," said George in a low voice, while the fifteen-year-old Miriam looked down with motherly care on her baby-cousin, who had fallen asleep in her lap.

"Dreadful!—that wasn't the worst of it. When Eben came to know it he turned as white as a stone statue, but he never said a word. He took the best horse we had and went off. Nobody liked to speak to him, but we was all prepared like for something dreadful.

"Well, he never come home alive," quavered granny, looking hard at her iron, then setting it down and wiping her eyes with a corner of her apron.

"He was brought home—dead!—my noble, handsome boy. We never rightly knew the story, but suppose he attacked somebody, and in self-defence, so it was said, the man shot my Eben.—Christian Statesman.

Sagacity of Horses.

An old horse belonging to one of these parties had wandered about in search of grass and water—vainly, no doubt, for it was during the severe drought, from which the country is now but recovering. Coming to the great bare market place, and finding a knot of men talking there, he singled out one of them, and pulled him by the sleeve with his teeth. The man, thinking the horse might possibly bite, repulsed him, but as it was not very roughly done, he returned to the charge, with the same reception; but he was a persevering animal, and practically demonstrated the axiom, that "perseverance gains the day," for upon his taking the chosen sleeve the third time between his teeth, the owner awoke to the idea that a deed of kindness might be required of him; so putting his hand upon the horse's neck, he said, "All right, old fellow; march on." The horse at once led the way to a pump at the further side of the square. Some colored servants were lounging about the spot. One of them at the bidding of the white man, filled a bucket with water. Three times was the bucket replenished and emptied before the "great thirst" was assuaged, and then the grateful brute almost spoke his thanks to his white friend by rubbing his nose gently against his arm, after which he walked of with a great sigh of relief.—Nature.

What Ought we to do?

"Patty, come here; for I want to ask you some curious questions that my mother has been asking me. What ought we to do in March when the wind blows?"

"What ought we to do? Why, to hold our bonnets fast, that they may not be blown away."

"Yes, but that is not the answer. I will tell you what it is,—we ought to love one another."

"Very true; I did not think of that."

"Now for another question. What ought we to do in April, when the showers fall?"

"Why, to put up the umbrella, or run under a tree, or into the house."

"You have not given me the right answer now. This is the right answer:—We ought to love one another."

"That is just the same as the other."

"Yes, it is. And now for my last question. What ought we to do when May comes with the spring flowers?"

"Why, to 'love one another,' I suppose."

"You are right, Patty. Let the month be what it may—whether the winds blow, showers fall, and the flowers spring or not, just the same—every month of the year, and every hour of the day, we ought to keep the commandment of the Saviour, 'Love one another.'"

"Good Morning.

Don't forget to say "good morning." Say it to your parents, your brothers and sisters, your schoolmates, your teachers, your servants—and say it cheerfully and with a smile. There is a kind of inspiration in every "good morning," heartily and smilingly spoken, that helps to make hope fresher and work lighter. It really seems to make the morning good, and to be a prophecy of a good day to come after it. And, if this be true of the "good morning" it is also true of all kind, hearty greetings. They cheer the discouraged, rest the tired one, and sometimes make the wheels of life run smoothly.

A Dog's Suicide.—The Worcester Spy tells of a large Newfoundland dog at Lowell, Mass., which was observed acting in an unaccountable manner on the margin of the South common pond. He seemed to wish to approach the water, but to be at the same time held back by a dread of it. He apparently suffered, also, from spasms, during which he would leap high in the air and then writhe in agony. While a policeman went in search of a weapon to kill him and end his misery the dog jumped into the pond, in spite of his evident aversion to the water, walked twenty or thirty feet from the bank toward the middle of the pond, and there deliberately drowned himself.

Self-examination, accompanied with a careful perusal of the Holy Bible, will lead us daily to a more thorough knowledge of our own character.—Alexander.

Home and Farm.

—As matter of economy, use white rather than brown sugar, as it contains a greater amount of saccharine matter.

—The practice has been inaugurated in New Jersey of placing a sign at the foot of a steep hill with the following humane request: "Please uncheck your horses."

—A correspondent of the Poultry Journal has discovered that a very strong decoction of peach tree leaves is a specific for chicken cholera. I do not know of a single failure when used in time. Dose, one-half teaspoonful.

—Persons troubled with feet that perspire or smell offensively, may perhaps effect a cure by bathing them every night or offener in a strong solution of borax. Two or three weeks of this treatment will probably be found sufficient.

--French chicken producers find that feeding the fowls with boiled or steamed carrots, chopped into small pieces, rapidly fattens them and imparts an agreeable flavor to the flesh, greatly relished by epicures, and that the fowls thus fed sell more rapidly than others.

Onion Soup.--Cut up a quantity of small onions, fry them mellow in a quarter of pound of butter, add a teaspoonful of flour, as much gravy as is sufficient to make soup; season with pepper and salt; let it boil for some time, rub it through a seive, and then add two yolks of eggs and serve.

Uses of Borax.--A half teaspoonful of borax dissolved in a tablespoonful of boiling water and added to a quart of milk or cream will keep it from turning sour. If meat is to lie for several days before being used, it may be kept from spoiling by a slight sprinkling of borax water. Wash in borax water before cooking.

—Wheat that is allowed to stand until the grain is hard before cutting will make only an inferior quality of flour. When you can mash a grain between your thumb and finger without producing any milk there is the greatest quantity of gluten in the grain, and the proper time to cut has arrived. The straw will also be yellow for two or three joints from the ground, and the head tends down. After this stage of ripeness the bran increases in thickness and the gluten decreases in quantity.

—A. D. Ferry, a large dealer in broomcorn at Chicago, says that the color makes half the value in broomcorn. No man should raise broomcorn without cutting while the seed is in blossom, or at latest before it has passed out of the doughy state, and Mr. Ferry says this is so that our farmers may be benefited by it as well as himself. The stalk should be broken down as soon as the blush is developed and should be so well broken that the bush will hang perpendicularly, then the straws will hang closely together and be more serviceable than if allowed to spread before breaking.

The Practice of Fall Plowing.

Intelligent cultivators generally agree that fall plowing is of the utmost service to to the soil. Many consider it equal to a dressing of manure, inasmuch as it places the the ground in a condition to assimilate all the fertilizing properties of mineral and atmospheric plant food. Soluble matters which have leached down too far for the feeders to reach are also brought to the surface by the turning over of land. Weeds, grass and the stubble of gathered crops are covered in the soil, where they will undergo decomposition and be in the right place for the rootlets to be fed upon when the crops start.

Disintegration is one of the great secrets of the beneficial effects from fall plowing. Its action is both mechanical and chemical. Land when broken by the plow holds a greater percentage of water. It freezes when in this wet state, then it thaws and the disintegration is complete. All moisture received on the surface filters through the pulverized earth evenly, and in consequence the manurial properties in the water reach every particle of the soil and are retained.

Another advantage of plowing is the much greater surface of soil exposed. Compact ground presents but one surface to the air, while that which is well broken exposes nearly every side of every particle of soil as deep as the tilth goes. The tilth is also deepened, and clay sub soils thrown on top becomes subjected to atmospheric actions which prepare it for any solvents that may be applied.

The unearthing of pestilent insects from their comfortable hiding places in the fall and exposing them to the weather is one of the incalculable benefits arising from fall plowing. The turning under of cockle-burrs, ox-eye daisy, foxtail and other noxious weeds with the stubble of the grain fields before their seeds mature is still another benefit, as these growths are destroyed and forced to serve the land they previously burdened by enriching it.

Farmers who are constantly compiaining that plowing under certain weeds only tends to a more luxurious growth are reminded that weeds which are propagated by seed should be turned under before the seed ripens. If the process is delayed a foul crop of weed seed is planted instead of destroyed. Cultivators who understand the good effects of fall plowing, some of which, by the way, is best accomplished during the summer, will set the plows moving, if they are not already started, on lands designed for winter grains fall seedings. and for corn next spring.—*N. —A Swiss colony settled on Cumberland Mountains, Tennessee, in 1873. This colony of 115 families, about 700 people, purchased 10,000 acres of mountain land at $1 per acre, and now, in four years, each head of a family has a comfortable home, an orchard and garden with a profusion of mountain flowers. There is a large store that is managed for the colony, members of which get goods at wholesale cost; the colony has its own school, church, doctors, etc, and their own candidates govern. The colonists already have dairies and cheese factories in successful operation, and their products find ready sale at fancy prices. They have splendid herds of cattle, and their barns are built as carefully as their houses. There is also a colony of Swiss near Greenville, S. C., about as large as the Tennessee colony, and it is prospering finely.

—Rev. A. T. Wolff, of Sandy Lake, Pa., is stirring in the interest of the National Reform Association. He has already appeared at one or more and urges all to take positive action.

—The tenth quadriennial session of the General Conference is to be held in Pittsford, Michigan, commencing Wednesday, October 15, 1879. The delegates are expected to give full statistical reports; also, the precise vote of their respective conferences on each of the two proposed changes in the book of discipline. One is on Section 22, on secret societies, and the other is on the method of changing any constitutional rule in the book of Discipline. The number of votes for, and the number of votes against these changes will be required.

—Bro. Geo. Richey, the Ohio State lecturer, has taken charge of the Deersville, O., church so long ministered to by that good man Father Carter. The latter is left without appointment at his own request. Bro. R. B. Gardner of Elyria is missionary at large for the Central Ohio conference.

—Dr. McClurkin, of New Concord Covenanter church, attended the Central Ohio conference at East Orange and presented the cause of national reform. He was much cheered by the hearty endorsement of the brethren.

CALL FOR A CONVENTION.

We, the undersigned, being members of the Wesleyan Methodist Connection of America, and believing in the rectitude of our principles as a denomination of Christians, and believing that it would be for the glory of God and for the good of society that we should organize an annual conference in the State of Nebraska and adjoining territory, do, therefore invite our brethren and sisters of "like precious faith" to meet us in convention at Juniata, Adams county, Neb., Sept. 24th at 10 o'clock A. M. for the above named purpose:

J. M. Snyder, Sanford Bassett, Philip H. Meeker, Philo Elzea, J. E. Hawley, J. P. Niles, Elders.

Ira L. King, Licentiate.

B. F. Armitage, Geo. W. Ostler, —— Ostler, Joseph Milligan, Ira Nichols, Esther Nichols.

Provisions are made to meet all at the cars and give you free entertainment. Come one, come all.

DEDICATION.

The dedication of the new Wesleyan Methodist church, at Fort Scott, Kansas, will take place, D. V., September 21, 1879. Rev. D. S. Kinney, our beloved General Agent will be with us to conduct the services. A cordial invitation is hereby given to all Wesleyan ministers and laymen, far and near, to come. Come with hearts full of love, faith, and in the power of the Holy Ghost. Come sanctified to God, or to get sanctified. Come all that can and see what the Lord hath done for us, and let us have a "high day in Israel." Come prepared to help us pay the last dollar against the church, and let us rejoice together; and, if you cannot come, make many glad hearts by sending us your "mite," and pray that the Lord Jesus will gloriously meet with with us; make our hearts his temple, and "glory crown the mercy-seat." J. A. Richards.

Baptist.

—Mr. Spurgeon's congregation in London has eighty colporteurs engaged in the work of the church resulting in visits every month to about 75,000 families. During the past year 162,000 tracts were distributed gratuitously, and over $41,000 was realized from the sale of 927,000 separate publications. The total number of visits during the year was 926,290.

—Bro. W. W. Ames, who has been spending the summer in Donley county, northwestern Texas, has been preaching often amid the sparse population of that new region, never fearing to proclaim the whole counsel of God.

Free Methodist.

—Bro. C. M. Damon, writing from Kansas to his church paper speaks thus of an interesting historical character: "Boston Corbett, the avenger of President Lincoln's assassination, has been laboring somewhat in this neighborhood as an evangelist, with the M. E. church. He came to Kansas some time since and procured a claim of eighty acres of land near Concordia, where he built a little 'dugout,' and lives alone and in poverty. His manners are considered by the community as genial and engaging, but the quality of his religious labors is described by our people as extremely superficial."

—The Free Methodist is largely occupied with notes from the numerous camp-meetings now being held. From nearly all come good reports of salvation through Christ. It is a great work to maintain revival meetings in the season not generally devoted to them. May many "be added to the church of such as shall be saved."

Congregational.

—The debt of $250,000 on the Congregational house at Boston has lately been reduced by a gift of $30,000 from Mr. William Hyde of Ware, and it is proposed hereafter to put the surplusage of rent into a sinking fund.

—The two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the first Puritan church in America was celebrated in Salem, August 17th, and the readings from Scripture and the psalms used were the same that were employed at the organization in 1829. This is the first Protestant church organized in America. The church of the Plymouth colony was organized in Holland, 1620; but the Salem church, which dates from 1629, was organized on the ground by Endicott and his associates.

—Rev. F. H. Smith of Crookston, Minn., who was, according to our report, associated with Rev. John Atkins in Anti-masonic work, has resigned.

—The Advance has this item about Crookston matters: "Parties in Chicago, Minneapolis and Crookston are inquiring for one John Atkins an M. E. exhorter. He has borrowed some $92 of said parties. They wish to know whether they shall charge the loans to 'profit and loss,' or 'benevolence.' He claimed to be raising money for a church in Crookston or Warren; but no church has ever been begun by him in these places." We may be mistaken, but it looks as if the Advance had been victimized by a Masonic correspondent, who finds through its columns a way for revenge. If not, there is a possibility of some explanations on our part.

—Rev. S. B. Goodenow of Roseville, Ill., has been bereft by death of a daughter, Mrs. Emma L., wife of O. P. Howe of Earlville, Ill., where Bro. Goodenow labored eight years ago.

—The American Congregational Union, notwithstanding the frequent abuse of its funds by its agents has accomplished a great work in providing houses for worship. It is said that one-third or more of all the Congregational churches in the country have been aided by it. The receipts last year were $27,603, but the running expenses of the society seem greatly out of proportion; they were $5,866, more than 20 per cent. This society was taken in hand by the Detroit National Council and its affairs investigated. The result was a much more economical management. There is yet room for improvement so long as the funds are misused in the building of churches in small towns where already there are several, or in building so large and expensive structures that the small congregation is overburdened in maintaining it.

United Presbyterian.

—The home of Rev. Geo. K. Ormond, D.D., near Pittsburgh was destroyed by fire with most of its contents lately.

—Rev. W. P. McNary of Bloomington, Ind., was appointed missionary to Indianapolis by the General Assembly in May. His congregation was much opposed to the removal and carried their case in the Princeton presbytery, which at its late meeting refused to release Bro. McNary from his pastorate.

—The Synod of the Pacific met at Halsey, Oregon, Aug. 7th. Rev. A. Calhoun of San Jose, Cal., presided. Four churches were completed and two pastors installed during the year. The report on Narrative and State of Religion says: "Our Sabbath schools are increasing in number and usefulness. Nine schools are reported as being open during the whole year, and they have a good upply of officers and teachers, and are altogether under the control of sessions, as our Book of Government directs. The state of religion in our families is encouraging, and the attendance and interest in our public worship is all we could expect for the number of our congregations. Yet when we look at the many unoccupied fields whitening for the harvest, we sometimes feel the weakness and inadequacy of the church for the great work to be done. But we can at least pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest."

United Brethren in Christ.

—"Albany Circuit" is a new appointment set off by the Missouri conference. Rev. J. T. Allaman was assigned to this work. Thus brethren Needles and Nutting of the Freeman will have a co-worker near at hand.

—Bro. Halleck Floyd of Dublin, Ind., has been elected agent of Hartsville University, and will soon enter upon his new work.

—Rev. S. M, Hippard, formerly agent of the Biblical Seminary, at Dayton, has undertaken the same work for Otterbien University, Westerville, Ohio.

—The pastor of the Polo, Ill., church, who makes so unwise a display in Elder Hurless' report of the troubles there, sends to the Religious Telescope a glowing report in these words:—"This has been a year of toil and labor; but as a church we are getting along nobly. The Lord is blessing us indeed." When, whether for good or bad reasons, this same church has excommunicated two presiding elders without the formality of trial! Is this representative nullification?

—Otterbein University opened this year with 118 students and more in prospect.

GENERAL.

Mr. Moody lately laid the corner stone of a building intended to accommodate a girls' seminary at Northfield, Mass., very much to the delight of the people of the town. The great evangelist, it is said, expects to both give and get money for the institution and to cherish its interests as one of the purposes of his life. Mr. Sankey was present on the occasion and representatives of the New York press.

—The New Testament Revision Company, meeting at Westminster, the Athenæum states, have made such progress in their work that the New Testament is likely to be published by the University presses early in 1880. It is intended to issue in the first instance two editions—a large, handsome octavo; and a small, cheaper volume, for more general use. The English and American companies are now busy with the final revision of passages in which the same Greek words are found, so as to bring the translation into greater harmony.

—The Rev. Mr. Ward, of the Methodist South India Mission, while traversing his railway circuit near the Teloogoo country, at the beginning of the year, took twenty orphans, made so by the famine, without knowing, only trusting, how he should get them taken care of. An engineer at Goolburga volunteered to superintend their care. Thirty more orphans were added in May, and now this South India orphanage, dependent on faith, like that of George Muller, at Bristol, England, has fifty wards.

SECTARIANISM.

—Dr. Morgan Dix of Trinity church, New York, in his "Manual of the Christian Life," warns churchmen not to attend the places of worship of the denominations or sects. "Go not at all," he says, "neither to hear the preaching out of curiosity nor to oblige friends. Keep to the church alone. You have naught to do with those without the church but to pray for them and treat them with kindness."

—The Baptist Weekly says: "We once heard Mr. Spurgeon express his pity, mingled with no little contempt for a 'churchman' who having engaged a worthy member of the Tabernacle as a gardener, afterwards declined his services because he was a dissenter and attended upon Mr. Spurgeon's preaching. It would seem from the following paragraph that some bigoted official of the royal household has lately shown the same aversion to a Baptist domestic, but to the credit of the queen she promptly rebuked the act. A contemporary says: 'A short time ago some bigoted official dismissed from the royal household a domestic whose behavior the queen had observed with approbation. The queen missed her from her accustomed place, and on learning that the girl's atteadance at a Baptist meeting-house had led to her removal, her majesty immediately commanded her restoration to her former position.'"

THE COLORADO U. B. CONFERENCE.

The action of the Miami conference is referred to elsewhere. Not only are the thanks of those immediately connected with this paper due the Colorado brethren who favored the resolution below, but of all who love the great principles which we advocate. They meant, not the paper, but the great work for which it stands, and which they also would maintain.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—You published some time ago how this conference last year voted down a very tame resolution in regard to our law on secrecy. That same element still lives to vote down another this year as I want to show. The committee on publishing interests, had a preamble and resolutions, the fourth and last of which read as follows:

"We have great reason to regard the Christian Cynosure, published at Chicago, Ill., and so ably edited by the great Christian reformer, Rev. J. Blanchard, as one of our warmest friends and ablest advocates of our church law on secretism, and would therefore give it our earnest sympathy and support when we can.

ST. CLAIR ROSS,
H. R. MILLER,
Committee.

This resolution was opposed and was made a test question. The yeas and nays were called for, as we wish to keep track of men and know how they vote and where they stand, and the following shows how every man voted. For the resolution: St. Clair Ross, Abraham Hartzell, Wm. Osborn; against it: L. S. Cornell, W. H. McCormick, E. J. Lamb, G. W. Rose and R. A. Cornell. These votes you may not see in the published minutes, but they are on the journal all the same and will stand for future reference. During the discussion a similar resolution was read, where the Dakota conference last year voted to adopt with only one exception. Now we would not spread these truths before the public were it not that we are in an unhealthy state and would not join the secret clan by covering up, for here we think lies the cause of our trouble; for notwithstanding there has been more missionary money given this conference for the last three years than any three prior, the work is running down; from seven fields of labor three years ago to four now; territory less; an annual decrease for the last three years, and when the stationing committee's report was read, beside the presiding elder there were only two itinerants ready and willing for the four fields of labor (and one of them a man just sent here by the Board.)

Now in conclusion, I want to say that while this element is thus running the life out of this conference, there are a few loyal ministers here who have helped build up the church in Colorado, and never joined hands with the worshipers at the shrine of earthly Grand Masters; and more, ninety-five hundredths of the church members in this conference are sound to the core with the doctrines of this church in regard to secrecy and all else. Now is it not a pity that this element could not find its equilibrium and get home and let us rest in peace?

ST. CLAIR ROSS.

News of the Week.

—The Illinois militia were in camp in South Park, Chicago, last week.

—The Washingtonian Home in this city is said to be financially involved through mismanagement of funds.

—Two men and a team were blown to atoms by a nitro-glycerine explosion near Bradford, Pa., last week.

—An Adrian, Mich., man is said to have a beard seven and a half feet long.

—Two farmers were killed in this State last week by falling into the cylinders of threshing machines.

—The Howard Association of Memphis have appealed for assistance, as follows:—"The Howard Association of Memphis, after having battled for the last two months with the dread destroyer in their midst, find every dollar in their treasury exhausted, several hundred sick and convalescents to be provided for, and a large number of nurses to be paid. We were hopeful in the beginning that with the funds then on hand, at the outbreak of the epidemic, we would be able to provide and care for the sick that would be thrown on our hands; but the fever has continued to spread, and, with two long months yet before us, leave no alternative but to appeal to the charity of the nation for substantial aid. The generous people throughout the Union will not fail to respond to this call for help. We feel that we are performing a sacred duty to the impoverished and distressed people among whom our lot is cast. The bounty of a common people was showered upon us in 1878, and to those same willing givers we appeal. If help is not speedily furnished we will be compelled to abandon the work we have been engaged, in and leaving hundreds to suffer and die for want of a Howard's helping hand."

—The Colored Refugee Board of St. Louis has held a meeting, at which reports were made going to show that there has been little falling off in the negro emigration northward, and that the number may be expected to increase after the crop is gathered. The members of the board state that a better class of colored people is coming, and that the demand for assistance is not so pressing and so general as it has been. Many of the later immigrants are from sections remote from the river.

—A late Washington special says the most convincing evidence yet received in Washington in regard to a general revival of the iron industry in this country has just been developed by correspondence with some of the largest iron firms in relation to the material needed by the government for the completion of the new War, State, and Navy Departments buildings. A majority of the firms addressed say their private orders are already so numerous that it would be impossible for them to supply the desired material within the time mentioned.

—The excursion steamer Alaska, of the Detroit and Put-in-Bay Line, when a few miles from the mouth of the river in Lake Erie on her down trip, a few days since, exploded the dome of her boiler, instantly killing both engineers and one deck hand, and seriously scalding ten other deck hands, two fatally; of the passengers on board only one, a lady, was injured, and that slightly. One man is missing. The steamer City of Detroit, but a short distance from the Alaska at the time of the accident, immediately went to her assistance, and took off the passengers and crew, and towed the wrecked steamer to Amherstburg, near the mouth of the river. The two steamers were racing at the time.

FOREIGN.

—It is reported that the recent visit of the Emperor of Germany to the Czar had only been decided on twenty four hours before the Emperor left Berlin, and that the visit was undertaken at the urgent invitation of the Czar. The preparations were made with the greatest secresy. When the Emperors met, both the railway station and the street leading to it were cleared by the police, who were stationed at every twenty yards. Special dispatches from Alexandrowe, where the meeting took place, mention among the extraordinary precautions adopted by the police on the occasion of the meeting of the Emperors, that a street communicating between the Imperial residences was macadamized, that the presence of conspiritors might be easily detected, and their escape prevented in the event of attempted flight.

—Violent storms in the Gulf of Finland have caused the river Neva to rise to the level of the streets of St. Petersburg. The canals in the center of the city have overflowed, and the Faubourgs are under water. Iron roofs have been blown from houses and churches in all directions. The guns of the citadel have been firing all Thursday night, and to-day notices have been issued warning the inhabitants to take precautions against the floods.

—Over 4,500,000 bushels of wheat were shipped to Europe last week from the principal Atlantic ports, and during the six weeks ending last Saturday the exports of wheat exceed those for the corresponding period of 1878 by the enormous amount of 9,970,000 bushels.

—The steamship Labrador, from Europe, last Tuesday brought $1,000,000 in gold bars and $300,000 in 20 franc gold pieces—a total of $1,300,000.

—There were seventy-eight deaths from yellow fever last week in Havana, a decrease of seventeen compared with the previous week. In consequence of the unusual violence of yellow fever the present summer and the fatality of the disease on board vessels which left Port Royal, the order of Nov. 28, 1848, has been revived and will be enforced. It provides that no vessel carrying above sixty persons, including passengers and crew, shall leave port without having a physician and clergyman on board.

—A banquet was recently given at Limerick, Ireland, to Mr. Parnell, the Home Rule leader. At this banquet, when the toast to the Queen was proposed, it was received with violent hisses and other expressions of disloyalty. It is now reported that the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has ordered the Superintendent of Police of Limerick to make a report upon the circumstances leading to this unpleasant and unparallelled demonstration.

—A correspondent at Yokohama, Japan, telegraphs as follows: The Swedish exploring steamer Vega, belonging to the Nordenskjold expedition, has arrived at this port having successfully accomplished the northeast passage. The health of the entire ship's company is excellent.

—Thomas H. Powers, senior partner of the firm of Powers & Weightman, manufacturing chemists, who died a few months since, was the richest man in Philadelphia, his estate being estimated at $8,000,000 or $10,000,000, and his income at three-quarters of a million annually. The firm has been in existence sixty years. Powers had been a member forty years, and the firm name had been the same thirty-one. The firm was founded by Farr, an Englishman, Kunzi, a Swiss, who, after long investigation, discovered a process for the manufacture of quinine, which for a long time had been known only to a few French chemists. On this was founded the prosperity of the firm, and for the benefit of this and one other house quinine has been protected ever since we have had a tariff. It is said that each partner drew out $25,000 per month irrespective of any profits, and divided at the end of the year. For a long time the firm has never permitted its balance in bank to fall below $100,000. Powers was the richest layman in the Reformed Episcopal church, and gave liberally for its maintenance. Nearly all his property is in real estate, and he kept on building in order to give work to the poor. He was the sole owner of the Episcopal Recorder, and read all the proof before allowing the paper to go to press.

—The fisheries of Canada are of greater extent than many have been led to believe; it possesses a coast line of some three thousand miles, so fish should be plentiful and the industry important; the fisheries give employment to 200,000 men, 1,000 ships and 17,000 smacks; these are manned by 7,000 sailors and 26,000 fishermen. In 1870 the fisheries were valued at $6,600,000, and in 1874 at $11,200,000. Few appreciate the rapidly growing commercial value of Canada. In 1876 the imports were about $100,000,000, of which $40,000,000 were from England. The exports that year were $80,000,000, England receiving more than $42,500,000. Canada generally imports more than it exports, showing a steady profit on its foreign trade.

—In 1878, no less than 2,811 head of short-horn cattle were sold by auction in Great Britain; the total money realized was $805,210; the average per head, $286; the highest price for a single animal was $13,500; the average for the year was $15 per head higher than that of 1877; the number sold 350 more than last year. This shows that the great depression among United States breeders has not yet extended to Great Britain. In that country and in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and France, prices of really desirable strains of cattle still continue to rise, notwithstanding the hard times, while in this country the business has bankrupted numbers.

—A writer in the London World gives an interesting account of the operation of the electric lights, now in use in the London Times printing office. In stepping from a room lighted with gas, he says, "we emerged suddenly into what seemed a flood of daylight, which came from six small lamps placed at intervals round a large room, in which the compositors and others were busy at work. These lamps were suspended so as to be raised and lowered at will. In compliance with a wish of one of the gentlemen present, one of these lights, selected at haphazard, was turned out by means of a tap, and it remained out without the slightest perceptible increase in the volume of light in the other lamps. Then another light at a distance was treated in a similar manner and with a like result. These two were then relit by a turn of the tap the reverse way and turned on full power. Then one was slightly 'lowered' so as to give about a third of of its full light, as with ordinary gas. In short, we found there a useful and agreeable light, which can be moderated and arranged to suit all circumstaces. This is the Rapieff light. M. Rapieff says he can burn ten light, in one circuit; that his carbons will burn for ten hours; that they can be easily renewed, and without extinguishing the lights. He further estimates its comparative cost with gas as less than a third."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

SERMON ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP AND OTHER SECRET SOCIETIES

BY REV. J. SAILER, Pastor Evangelical Lutheran Church, Leechburg, Pa.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A DISCUSSION OF THEIR CHARACTER AND CLAIMS.

BY REV. DAVID Mc DILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David Mc Dillin Six Chapters treats of 1 "Their Antiquity."—2 "Their Secrecy."—3 "Oaths and Promises,"—4 "Profaneness."—5 "Their Exclusiveness."—6 "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

Topics of the Time.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams and his wife celebrated their golden wedding at their home in Quincy, Massachusetts, September 3. This is the third golden wedding of three successive generations held in the same house. Two of these were of ex-Presidents of the United States, and the last would have been if the Anti-masonic votes had been as numerous as their will was good. So remarkable a history has probably no precedent. President John Adams and his wife celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on the 25th of October, 1814; their son, President John Quincy Adams and his wife on the 26th of July, 1847. The intervals between the three occasions are respectively thirty-three and thirty-two years, it will be observed, which is very near the average lifetime of a generation. The respective ages of these three illustrious Americans and Christian statesmen at the interesting occasions mentioned was 79, 79 and 72.

Fortunately for the meeting of the Masonic Grand bodies of Illinois in this city this month and next, a missionary from China has just arrived here. Having learned that Chicago was the wickedest city in America, he has come to convert us to Confucianism. His philosophy contains none of the elements of superstition which disturb the peace of American churches; it will bring civilized nations to a higher state of perfection. He will make his headquarters in Chicago while he remains in this country, and as soon as he can procure a church or hall will open as a revivalist of the religion of philosophy and reason. If he remains with us a few weeks he may learn enough about another religious system which claims as great antiquity as Brahma himself, and superiority as a system which supplies to man all that his soul can desire, fitting him by means of a "common gavel" for a future of immortality and bliss. Rev. Wong Ching Foo, thus finding his mission forestalled, may be induced to look more carefully into the "supernatural" "sectarian" system known as Christianity, and to find that alone among the religions of earth it is the true one, and only presents to mankind a reasonable service. (Rom. 12: 1).

Gen. Grant is expected by Japan steamer in San Francisco this week and the city is alive to receive him. The Union war veterans have resolved to fire a national salute for their welcome from the open grounds made historic by the communist Kearney as the "Sand Lots." As Kearney has promised to burn Grant in effigy when he arrives, on this very spot, and as his "honor" among the rabble will be compromised if his word is not made good, there may follow a disagreement which will result unfortunately for the great communist.

A grand farce was concluded last Thursday at De Kalb, Miss. Over two years ago thirty-two men of Kemper county, Miss., were indicted by the grand jury for the murder of Judge Chisholm, his daughter and son, in the county jail. These parties have never been tried. They have never been arrested. Neither court or sheriff dared touch them. They only requested them to make their appearance if ever wanted. Arrangements were lately made for the trial, and Hon. Stewart Woodford, of New York, accompanied Mrs. Chisholm to the scene of the tragedy and trial. Gully, the man who shot the daughter was first tried. The evidence was clear against him, and little pains was taken to confute it. The Mississippi plan worked better. The town filled up with the followers of Gully who drank and flourished their revolvers, and the beaten jury took but fifteen minutes to decide between a verdict of not guilty and their own assassination by the same mob that killed Chisholm. The verdict was given, and Southern justice and law satisfied! Like the Yazoo assassination this farce will have the effect of opening to the world the terrible state of society in many parts of the South, and confirm the stories of the fleeing blacks. Already men are beginning to wonder why the yellow fever does not wipe out these districts where lawlessness is rife. God waits long often, as in the days of Noah, but his time of justice will come.

These developments at the South are having an effect on Northern elections. California aud Maine return Republican majorities such as they have not shown for years. In New York the Democratic party, bitterly divided between Tammany and Tilden, are attempting a useless campaign against a united opposition; and should there not be a radical and entire change in the Southern policy toward the freedmen, there will be an emphasis in next year's elections which has not been heard since Lincoln passed the second time by the votes of a loyal people.

If Mr. Talmage, who is making the popular speakers on this side the Atlantic jealous with his great crowds in England, expects to escape severe criticism for playing special correspondent for one of the flimsiest of New York story papers because of his "eccentricity," he will be mistaken. The lending of his name to circulate such moral poison as fringes his letters is better cause for discipline than his presbytery formed in his famous trial. If he thinks to emulate Beecher in the race for popular favor, let him remember the race run by the latter since he wrote for the New York Ledger. Few men are apt to enjoy such popularity as that of Beecher and Murray.

The Cubans promise to settle the Chinese question without consulting Kalloch or Kearney. An association of planters from that island, are asking King Alphonso for permission to import from 25,000 to 30,000 Chinamen yearly, whom they consider best adapted to endure the climate and fatigues of Cuban field labor, and to bring from Spain and the Canary Islands 10,000 workmen, continuing in this manner until the number shall have reached 400,000 men. These will be paid their passage and be supported for ten days after their arrival, during which time it is considered they may find work. The association calculates the expense of bringing 40,000 men here yearly will amount to $3,000,000, which it is proposed shall be raised by general taxation, as immigration would benefit the whole country.

Heroes.

O to side with truth is noble when
We share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause brings fame and profit,
And 'tis prosperous to be just.
Then it is the brave man chooses, while
The coward stands aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

Count me o'er earth's chosen heroes,
They were souls that stood alone,
While the men they agonized for hurled
The contumelious stone.
Stood serene, and down the future saw
The golden beam incline
To the side of perfect justice, mastered
By their faith divine.

Governing Men by their Vices.

BY JONATHAN W. MOSS.

Historians inform us that when the workers in the temperance cause visited the army under the Duke of Wellington, with their pledges for the soldiers to sign, that the great captain expelled these philanthropic laborers from the camp and ordered the whisky rations to flow more freely.

The Duke of Wellington was a great man in his way, the way of the world, and doubtless his country owed him much; and, as Byron pithily remarks in Don Juan, "Paid him too." (His income was princely.) But why did he expel the men who circulated the temperance pledge? His own explanation was this: "It is easier work to govern men by their vices than in any other way. Men free from vices become too independent; and those who are not addicted to some vice should be taught one."

The great Duke, looking upon the soldier as a mere tool in the hands of his superiors, very naturally regarded hearts that feel and brains that think and souls to be saved as altogether unessential, if not decidedly objectionable factors, in the production of that great killing machine called an army.

If the military despot finds it easier to hold his human cattle in subjection by their depraved appetites, ignorance and depravity is an indispensable condition to lodge dominion.

Without the guilty looking forward to a time when lodge protection should be needed to shield him from the hand of justice, or the ignorant expectation of good whence no good can come, how could the blinded dupe be got into the trap and therein kept in subjection? And what is the explanation of the strange phenomena, that the slippery eels of society, whose consciences, like Napoleon's, are "pliable to every touch of interest;" to whom an oath is but the idle puff of a cigar; whose hearts say of an obligation, "it is naught, it is naught;" with whom a contract only binds the other party; insolent, obstinate, and defiant of all right authority; who, when you think you have hold of them, wriggle out of your grasp with a facility only increased by your exertions to hold them,—how is it, I say, that such men can not only be caught, but held fast, governed, controlled, kept in subjection, made to bow in servile obedience down to the most pitiful minutiæ of helpless degredation in the lion's paw grip of the lodge? Ah! here is the secret. Some darling vice has fastened upon the victim. It may be only a little wart upon the skin, to the eye of the world; but its roots strike deep and are fastened on the heart like the arms of a cuttle fish. Thereby and thereon the hand of the lodge rests, and the whole creature becomes docile as an ox, and is made a vessel never of honor, but always of dishonor.

Is it the vices of the fleshly appetites? Yes, but not most. Not the reeling drunkard at whom the finger of scorn is pointed, for the lodge delighteth in a good name almost as much as it does in lies, ridiculous ceremonies and robbery. It is the man who only takes an occasional glass, but must have so much. Is the lust of uncleanness the vice of the lodge slave? Yes, but he is not generally the known and recognized debauche, but is not unfrequently the sleek-faced preacher, who prates of entire sanctification in this life in the pulpit; but in the lodge, after having played he was rotten and stinking, refresheth himself and boon companions from the hard labor thereof, by anecdotes of personal experiences that show that he is only on a level with the rest of them. But most, the vices of the mind—the lust for gain without labor; for social position without merit, and power without right.

The man without some darling vice upon which to place the controlling hand, some besetting sin to weaken him down to the proper degree of helpless pliancy, is fearfully apt to be to the lodge-master a tool without a handle—ugly to manage.

Harmony of Freemasonry.

BY REV. J. C. BIGHAM.

"Masonry is moral light, and at whatever moment the first gleam of goodness brightened in the heart of man, Masonry was born."—Key to Masonry.

"Ever since symmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms, our order has had a being."—Preston.

"When first the golden morn aloft
With golden breezes whispering soft,
Sprung from the east with rosy wing,
To kiss the heavenly, first-born spring;
Jehovah, then, from hallowed earth,
Gave Masonry immortal birth."
—Preston.

"Our first father, Adam, deny it who can,
A Mason was made as soon as a man."
—Ahiman.

(A singular lodge; father Adam the only member, mother Eve, the only "cowan" and "eaves-dropper"—is that the origin of her name?)

Mackey, in "The Book of the Chapter," introduces his remarks on the seventh degree, with this quotation from Oliver:

"A degree indescribably more august, sublime, and important than any which precede it, and is in fact, the summit and perfection of ancient Masonry."

And then he garrotes Oliver in the following style:

"Of course no one can indulge in the absurdity of supposing that the Royal Arch degree could have existed contemporaneously with the Master's at the time of the building of the first temple. Neither degree, in fact, in its present form, is to be dated even at a later period than the building of the second. The events which they record of course, occurred at the correct historic period, but the organization and establishment of these degrees, as records, or memorials of these events, must have been a subsequent invention, when, we know not."

Of the degree of High Priest, Mackey says:

"No allusion to it can be found in any ritual works out of America, nor even here, anterior to about the end of the last and beginning of this century. Webb is the first who mentions it and gives it a place in the series of capitular degrees. It is probable that it was established by Webb."

Weishaupt, a distinguished German Mason says, (Masonry, p. 352):

"I challenge all mankind to contradict my declaration that no man can give any account of the order of Freemasonry, of its origin, history, object, nor any explanation of its mysteries and symbols, which does not leave the mind in total uncertainty on all these points. Every man is entitled therefore to give any explanation of the symbols and doctrines that he can render palatable. Hence have sprung up that variety of systems, which have divided the order. * * Our ignorance in this particular, frets me. Consider our short history. Who will show me the mother lodge? Those of London we have discovered to be self-erected in 1717; as for their archives, they tell us they were hurnt. They have nothing but the wretched sophistications of the Englishman Anderson and the Frenchman Desagulliers. Where is the lodge of York which pretends to the priority, with the archives which its king Bouden brought from the east? These, too, are burnt." (Written in 1777.)

The German Masons having heard that in the caves of old Aberdeen, Scotland, the venerable mysteries were known, and the treasures of Masonry were hid, sent a deputation to inquire. But their embassadors found the Masons of Aberdeen ignorant of all this, and eager to learn from their German visitors what was the true origin and meaning of Masonry. So the coveted secret has been sought from country to country, but never found. They cannot trace their history beyond the beginning of the eighteenth century. So Steinbrenner says, so Dalcho says, and so Weishaupt.

"If from our moral principles, we date the origin of Masonry, we must fix its era coexistent with the Almighty."—Tourn.

That is, we have adopted in our organization some truths that are eternal. The evasion is notingenuous. It is a poor society, either moral or religious, that cannot say as much. Better hold on to the challenge of Ahiman,

"Our first father, Adam, deny it who can,
A Mason was made as soon as a man."

The Book of Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Mass., A. L., 5798, A. D., 1788, quoted in Freemasonry, page 45, claims that John Locke found in the Bodleian Library, a manuscript of the time of Henry VI. explaining ancient Masonry by questions and answers:

Question. "What mote it be?"
Answer. "It beeth the skill of nature, the understanding of the might that is therein, and its sundry workings particularly, the skill of numbers, of weights and measures, and the true manner of forming all things for man's use."
Question. "What arts have the Maconnes techedd mankind?"
Answer. "Agriculture, Architecture, Astronomia, Geometria, Numberas, Musica, Poesia, Kymistrie, Government and Relygyonne."
Question. "How came the Maconnes more techers than other men?"
Answer. "They only have the gift of finding out new arts, which gift the first Maconnes received from God, by which they find what arts they please, and the true way of teching the same, what other men do find out is only by chance, and therefore, hut little, I know."
Question. "What doth the Maconnes conceal and hide?"
Answer. "They conceal the art of finding out new arts, for their own profit and honor. They conceal the art of keeping secrets, that so the world may conceal nothing from them. They conceal the art of wonder-working, and of foresaying things to come. They also conceal the art of transmutation of metals; the way of winning the faculty of magic, the skill of becoming good and perfect, without the helpings of hope and fear, and the universal language of Maconnes."

This "Bodleian" manuscript, more than anything yet discovered, lets us into the merits of "Maconnrie," and what mints of precious knowledge we stupid outsiders are losing, according to this venerable revelation: Had John Locke discovered such a paper and believed its claims to be true, he would have esteemed it most valuable, and commended its benefits to his friends, but turning to history, we read his words of advice to his friends and pupils in his dying hours, as follows:

"Study the Holy Scriptures, especially in the New Testament. Therein are contained the words of eternal life. It has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth without any mixture of errors for its matter."

How do intelligent Masons esteem these pretenses? The author of "Freemasonry" says:

"They are fables which, though they deceive not the learned, do miserably impose on the multitude, at best white lies, which are apt to lead to those of a darker hue."

Dr. Dalcho, who was in the early part of this century, "Sublime Master of the Degree of Perfection," and "Sovereign Inspector General," two pretty high offices for one mortal to hold, declared the story of Hiram Abiff, "Founded on the grossest errors of accumulated ages."

Weishaupt said in 1777:

"The world is already familiarized with the idea that nothing of importance or worthy of attention can spring from Masonry."

These claims of great antiquity and of profound wisdom, are merely the irresponsible ravings of Masonic writers, the store-house from which amateur orators get their material for orations on self-admiration days, when the platform is their own. But intelligent writers have grown careful on this point, and are clothing their protege in the fashion of youth, and at times, even in the suspicious garb of a foundling of mysterious origin, and of uncertain age. Advancing light has robbed them of their prestige, and left only the vague antiquity of the sentence already quoted: "If from our moral principles we date the origin of Masonry, we must fix its era coexistent with the Almighty."

What has Freemasonry done?

In his theological dictionary, article "Illuminati," Dr. Buck says:

"A name assumed by a secret society, founded on the first day of May, 1776, by Dr. Adam Weishaupt, Professor of Common Law, in the University of Ingolstadt. The avowed object of this order was, 'To diffuse from secret societies, as from so many centres, the light of science over the world, to propagate the purest principles of virtue.'"

But the real object, as we are assured by Professor Robinson and Abbe Barruel, was, by clandestine arts, to overturn every government and every religion, to bring the sciences of civil life into contempt. Freemasonry being in high repute all over Europe when Weishaupt first formed the plan of his society, he availed himself of its secrecy to introduce his new order.

Weishaupt takes a different view of the repute of Freemasonry, but states the same fact. He says,

"In secrecy our strength principally lies. On this account we should always conceal ourselves under the name of some other association. The inferior lodges of Freemasonry are the most convenient cloaks for our grand object, because the world is already familiarized with the idea that nothing of importance, or worthy of attention can spring from Masonry."—Freemasonry, page 334.

They took possession of it as thieves or counterfeiters take possession of an empty building, and, as they believed "Every man entitled to give any explanation of the symbols and doctrines that he can render palatable," they turned it to their own account. Through Professor Robinson and Abbe Barruel, the first a Scottish professor, the second a French clergyman, and both Freemasons, we have our principal knowledge of these Masonic Illuminati. They wrote at the same era without consultation, not having the same sources of information, and their conclusions agree.

In those days Voltaire, Robinette, Condorcet and Mirabeau, were leading Masons, also Weishaupt, Knigge, Zwacke and other conspirators of the French Revolution. In the first degrees the conspirators talked of liberty and equality; in the higher degrees they developed their intentions.

I quote first, rules for the direction of the "Brother Recruiter," one of whom was in each lodge. (Freemasonry, page 341*):

"Begin by descanting on the extreme felicity of being versed in sciences which few can approach, of walking in the paths of light, while the vulgar are groping in darkness. Remark that there are doctrines solely transmitted by secret tradition, because they are above the comprehension of common minds."

"Let your first care be to gain the confidence and esteem of those persons whom you are to entice into the order. Let your whole conduct be such that they shall surmise something more in you than you wish to show; hint that you belong to a secret and powerful society. Excite little by little, and not at once, a wish in your candidate to belong to a similar society."

"Assure him that he will find nothing among us hurtful either to religion, to morals, or to the state."

If the candidate prove to be tractable, and easily led, and trustworthy, he was informed at length that this was only a pious fraud and that their object was the overthrow of all religion and all government.

"If to overturn Christianity and every religion, we have pretended solely to possess true Christianity, remember, the end sanctifies the means. The sage must use all those means for good purposes, which the wicked do for evil. The means we employ to rid you and mankind of all religion, are but a pious fraud, which we always intended to reveal to you when capable of understanding it."

"All we have done for you hitherto, was only to prepare you to co-operate with us in the annihilation off all magistracy, all government, all laws and all society."

"True morality is no other than the art of teaching men to shake of their wardship, to attain the age of manhood, and thus to need neither princes nor governments. May our principles become the foundation of all morals. Let reason at length be the religion of men."

Those doctrines were taught in the Masonic lodges of France. There, the conspirators formed their plans, trained their men, and at length deluged France in blood.

Weishaupt also devised a Priest's degree, of which he says:

"One would almost think that this degree, as I have managed it, is genuine Christianity. It teaches that Freemasonry is concealed Christianity, and as I explain things, no man need be ashamed of being a Christian."

"You cannot imagine what respect and curiosity my Priest's degree has raised, and—which is wonderful—a famous Protestant divine who is now of the order, is persuaded that the religion contained in it is the true sense of Christianity. O man! To what mayest thou not be persuaded. Who would imagine that I was to be the founder of a new religion."

Describing the degree to Zwacke, he says:

"It is all one whether it be true or false, we must have it that we may tickle those who have a hankering for religion."

The whole system was exposed in 1786, by the capture of Knigge's correspondence. The doctrines of Illuminism went down for the time, in the blood of France, but the machinery through which they were made practical, still exists. Weishaupt used to say to his initiates:

"Should you ever be a traitor or a perjurer, assure yourself that every brother will be called upon to arm against you. Do not flatter yourself with the possibility of escaping, or finding a place of security. Wherever thou mayest be, the rage of the brethren shall follow thee."

We may be struck with the false pretence, the Jesuitic deception, here confessed, and defended as a "pious fraud." This, perhaps, was Masonry in its worst estate, but at its best it is burdened with false pretense.

1. It pretends to great antiquity.
2. It pretends to possess secret and sublime truths.
3. It pretends to practice great benevolence.
4. It pretends to fit men for heaven.
5. It pretends to world-wide magnanimity.
6. It pretends that Enoch, and Moses, and Solomon, and Jesus, and John the Baptist, and John the Evangelist, were Masons.
7. It pretends to possess the true name of God unknown, except in the lodge.
8. It pretends to give in the second degree, a thorough course of education.
9. It pretends that its secret emblem crossed the flood in Enoch's subterranean temple.
10. It pretends that Solomon discovered these secret emblems, and God revealed to him their meaning.
11. It pretends that Solomon determined the oaths and penalties of the first three degrees.
12. It pretends that God revealed his Masonic name to Moses on the mount.
13. It pretends to revere the Bible, yet flourishes among Mohammedans, heathens and savages.
14. It pretends to be a harmonious brotherhood, while disputes and divisions have been frequent.

It is practically true that every leader may fill its empty forms, with whatever doctrines or traditions he can render palatable.

*The work from which I make these quotations, written by a Master Mason, and printed in 1827, gives several chapters in full, from the books of Robison and Barruel. The writer has not seen the original works.

The Sermon.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Sabbath morning, September 7th, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

Not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ. Phil. 3:9.

Every man wants some one's righteousness on when he is found of Christ. There is in all men a fearful looking for of a judgment. Whether men be Christians or heathens, they believe that the hour of death, instead of being a simple snuffing out of a candle, is the entrance on a new and wider field of existence. They believe that the life here affects the life there, and that there is to be a judgment and a Judge to decide on the case of every mortal.

Thus far all go together, but here we divide. The Christian wishes to be found in Christ not having on his own righteousness. This does not mean that he does not want to do all the good he can. It does not mean that God does not notice all the good which he does, but it does mean that the Christian would expect to be condemned if he had no goodness but his own on which to depend, and that he expects to be saved only for Jesus sake.

The heathen, on the other hand, admits to himself if not to others, that he cannot see God in peace without holiness, but this holiness he expects to acquire for himself. Sometimes in one way, sometimes in another, but always the work and the glory of his salvation is to be his own. To this end we see the costly temples which men rear out of ill-gotten gains; the wearisome pilgrimages of India and Italy; the ostentatious charities of rejecters of Christ. In every case men are in their inmost souls trembling at thought of a day when the books of their lives will be balanced, the accounts made up, and their fate settled for a long eternity. They want to be found having some righteousness. Nay! having enough to assure them of a happy and glorious home. The Christian wants to be found having Christ's, the man of the world wants to be found having his own; which is wiser of the two?

ALL HAVE SINNED AND COME SHORT.

Stamped deep into the forehead of every act which men perform is that awful yet truthful verdict,—"Weighed, but found wanting." We oft-times flatter ourselves that this is not true; that our acts, some of them at least, are very good, and will triumphantly endure the test of the last day. But a more candid and thoughtful view of the case will always convince us of our error if we are willing to see. We sin many times, and even when we do not sin we come short of the glory of God. Actual transgression, our "not doings," which are many times dark deeds indeed, and sinful, envious, wicked thoughts crowding their way into the sanctuary or the prayer-closet, these are the common experiences of Christians.

If our own obedience to the just and holy law of God were perfect, we might desire to stand erect in our own good deeds at the judgment bar of God, but because sin or imperfection attaches to all that we do, we must, as Paul did, desire a better, cleaner robe in which to appear before our Judge. When we call upon a friend we array ourselves in decent apparel. When we visit the great ones of earth we conform to the customs of the court. When we come to our Lord it must not be in the filthy rags of our own good deeds, but in the spotless robe of Christ.

Reflect a moment on the miserable condition of the man in the parable. He was an invited guest, a semi-friend. He had a garment prepared for his use; it lay ready to his hand. He had already entered the hall, had seen the assembled guests, the tables loaded with fruits and flowers, and the master of the home; but neglecting to put on the garment provided, he was seized, hurried from the brilliant scene and shot through the outer door into the darkness and gloom of the night. Such will be the fate of every man who dares to come to trial having on his own righteousness.

HOW DO I KNOW THAT I CAN GET IT?

This is an important question. It were simple cruelty to dilate on the misery of hunger before one who was starving, and whom we would not or could not supply with food. It is no kindness to tell us that our own righteousnesses are but filthy, flaunting rags, unless some better thing is provided for us. Can all be found having Christ's righteousness? Or is this so limited that it will do for only a certain limited number? Or sufficient for all, is the Lord unwilling to give it to more than a certain select company?

There are two answers to this question. The first from the book of Nature, the second from the book of Revelation. We find in nature the birds. They are adapted to flight, and being thus adapted we find the atmosphere upon which they may float or through which they may dart, blown hither and thither like clouds of summer time. We find also the finny fish; fin and tail and scale and gills. They are prepared for life in the sea, and as we found air for the wants of the bird, so we find water for the inhabitants of the deep. We find that men hunger, and for the hunger of the race we find broad acres, millions upon millions, stretching east, west, north and south, each bearing its contribution to the support of man.

So universal is this provision for the wants of created things, that we may throw the thought into a general proposition and affirm that God has made provision to supply the wants of every living thing. Wherever there is a felt need, there is provided a supply. God has done his part. If there be any lack it arises from the sin, the folly, or the carelessness of man.

The first proof then that you can have the righteousness of Christ is the fact that you feel that you need it, and that all others feel that they need it. The whole world can truly say, sometimes in blindness and ignorance, it is true, but still can say, My heart and my flesh cry out for the living God. Because your own obedience has been defective; because your heart is uncontrollable; because if you have not help you must die, and because you do not want to die, therefore you may be sure that God has provided for you the perfect obedience you need.

We know this without the Bible. If every sacred book in the world were to-morrow buried in the sea, and every blessed promise were obliterated from the heart of man, still you could be sure that God would supply your need. But it is a pleasant thing to have two bearers of good tidings, and while we find this truth written in the book of Nature, it is delightful to turn to Revelation and find it there as well. The Bible is full of this doctrine. From the beginning to the ending it tells the story of substitution and imputation. An innocent lamb in a sinner's place; a guilty sinner in the place of an innocent lamb. Those who are naked, counselled to buy without money and without price, the robe that is pure, spotless and everlasting, this is the burden of the book.

It is said that when evening comes the pious Mohammedan going outside his tent door cries:

"Whoever thou art, whose need is great, in the name of Christ, the compassionate and merciful one, for thee I wait."

I do not know whether the story is true or false, but I am sure that this is the cry which my blessed Lord has been sending out through the world's darkness these thousands of years.

"Whoe'er thou art, whose need is great,
Thou art the one, for thee I wait."

The Son of man received sinners; he came not to help those who were strong but those who were weak; he came to seek and to save that which was lost.

HOW CAN I OBTAIN THIS?

We obtain this by faith; that is God has promised to give it to us, if we will believe his promise he will keep it. If we refuse to believe he will not give it to us, for he only makes the pledge on condition of faith. This seems hard to us only because God is a spirit and not to be seen as men are. If a parent or a friend should make us a promise we would believe them and at the appointed time expect to receive the fulfillment of their word. Now, when we are told that those who come to Christ are not cast out, that whosoever will may come and drink the waters of life freely, and other words of like import, we are taught that we can secure the righteousness of Christ for ourselves if we will. Those who believe the word and comply with the conditions will obtain it, all others will fail.

But you say, have we nothing to do? I answer, nothing except to believe. If doing could save us there would be no need of Christ, and hence the first and only thing to be done is to believe on him. This is a little thing, for a child can easily do it; it is also a great thing, for the doors of heaven turn on that hinge.

But what is it to believe on Christ? It is: 1st. To admit our own lost and undone condition as sinners. 2d. To believe and admit that the Son of man came into the world to save sinners, ourselves included. 3d. To believe that when we from the heart obey, he at once and forever saves. Some men make the mistake of taking Christ as Saviour but refusing to take him as their Lord.

He will, however, save none who refuse to obey. He does not ask us to feel happy, but he does ask us to do as he commands. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

Not that God asks us to obey first and be saved afterwards. In that case none were ever saved. But he does ask us to consent to obey, and so far as we are concerned this submission must be made before we are forgiven our sins and put in possession of the righteousness of Christ.

HOW CAN WE TELL THAT WE HAVE this righteousness? First, by successfully doing the thing which we agree to do, that really obeying Christ. John, in his Epistles, seems to have had in mind particularly the proofs of conversion. One would suppose that many times men had come to him, asking how they could be sure that they had the righteousness of Jesus, and that their sins were blotted out. At all events he many times answers the question. 1 John, 2: 3, 4, he says: "And hereby we do know that we do know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him." This text I interpret thus: Any man who lives in the continuous practice of any thing which he knows the word of God condemns; or who neglects or persistently refuses to do that which it requires, has by the Scripture no hope of salvation.

Each man will be judged by his own light. The great Ruler of mankind will not do unfairly with man. He that hath law will be judged by it, and he that hath it not will perish without it, but no man will be held to answer at that bar for any sins but his own. The man who has constantly walked up to the light which he has had and obeyed from the heart the Lord Jesus, will never be cast off by him.

A second test by which we can try ourselves is found in the same Epistle, 3: 14. "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." On this point it is not necessary to enlarge, as I devoted some time to it recently. It is important to see clearly, however, that this is the way to know that we are Christians. Oftentimes humble hearts are much cast down for fear that after all there may be some mistake, and the sins for which they cannot answer be brought up against them. Here are two simple tests. Do I so far as in me lies keep the commands of God? If so, then I am sure that I know Christ, for his holy Word declares that if we keep his commandments, we are sure that we know him.

Again: Do I love the brethren? Are their interests mine, and am I seeking in all ways possible to me to increase their prosperity? Do I love the place where they gather and, through feeling that I am unworthiest of them all, do I still joy and rejoice to be with them? If so, I am sure that I have passed from death unto life, because I love the brethren. Let us often bring ourselves to the test of the Word, it will sometimes pain and sometimes please, but if we are humble it will always be a blessing.

Still another proof that the righteousness of Christ is ours, if it be, is found in the fourth chapter and thirteenth verse of this same Epistle. The Holy Spirit here teaches John to say: "Hereby know we that we dwell in him and he in us because he hath given us of his spirit." In order to test ourselves by this Scripture we must carefully find who the Spirit of God is, and how he manifests himself, then if we find that this Spirit is to an extent in us we know that we are dwelling in God. Is it not clear that this beloved disciple is endeavoring through the Holy Spirit to give tests by which those who wish to examine themselves may be enabled to make sure work. The fruits that the Spirit bears are a testimony to the presence of the Spirit. Do we find that we are daily growing in meekness, gentleness, love and truth? Are we becoming more faithful and unshrinking in duty? Are we growing up into the likeness of Christ? If we are, no matter how the stormy winds of temptation may rage about us; no matter how the fiery darts of the wicked one may hiss through the air, we are safe in the arms of Jesus. This is a blessed rest. Let us labor that we may be found in Christ, not having our own righteousness which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ.

The State Meetings.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11, 1879.

To-morrow I expect to start West, visiting Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, etc., reaching Ohio in time for the State meeting at Cedarville, November 4 to 6. No positive arrangement has been made beyond that point except in Illinois, November 11 to 13, and New Hampshire, December 16 to 18. I wish to hear soon and definitely from friends in other States. The times suggested for meetings in States not definitely arranged are as follows:—Western Pennsylvania, November 18–20; Eastern Pennsylvania, November 25–27; New Jersey, December 2–4; Connecticut, December 9–11. Massachusetts, December 23–25; Vermont, January 6–8; Maine, January 13–15; Rhode Island, January 20–22; New York, January 27–29. Several parties have written to me, but positive arrangements have not been made. Friends can address me at the places where I attend State convention or at the Cynosure office, and my letters will be forwarded. All communications respecting the funds of the National Association should be addressed to the Treasurer, E. Hildreth, 292 W. Randolph street, and all post office orders or drafts should be made payable to him. Friends sending funds to the N. C. A. will avoid delay and save trouble by giving special attention to this. J. P. STODDARD.

Cor. Sec'y.

Notes by the Way from Bro. Mathews.

DEAR K:—Believing all our reform friends wish to know how the work prospers, I send a few notes. After the Niagara County Association I went with friends to the Free Methodist camp meeting for Buffalo district, held at Tonawanda. Bro. Geo. Coleman had charge, whom I know to be neither ring-streaked nor speckled, but clean on our reform. O, that all in authority in all churches were so! During the week many were converted to God; two cases from among the boatmen, J. R. Nichols and E. Kelley. Mr. Nichols' case proves the Scripture (Isa. 11:6). "A little child shall lead them." Three weeks prior to meeting him at the altar a penitent seeker of salvation, his child died. She was only six months old, but his idol. His distress was great over the loss and instead of "taking it to the Lord in prayer," he got drunk. In the night while awake—"Yes," he said, "as surely awake as I am now, my child appeared and holding out her hand she said:—'Pa, come.'" Here his sobs and groans were heart-rending and many with us wept as he arose and stood on the mourner's bench and cried out:—"I'm coming, God help me; I'll keep coming!" This scene lasted till 1 A. M. Sabbath morning, when Bro. Nichols was set free. His exertions had sobered him and our Jesus triumphed. Praise his name! A shout of victory went up which was repeated in love-feast as we listened to his testimony and that of his wife, for both were saved. The power of God was signally manifested throughout the day and no disturbance occurred.

In the afternoon while preaching, my soul was pressed with a message on lodgism. I delivered it to the advantage of my own soul, but more especially to that of Bro. Norton, of Tonawanda lodge of A. F. and A. M. He had come out, but intimidation held him from divulging; hence his experience was intermittant. While I gave the signs and dueguards of Blue Lodge Masonry, he turned pale with many others. Yet I had not said Masonry. The Spirit still pressed me and I gave the penalties of the Chapter degrees, yet had not said Freemasonry. Here was witnessed a scene I shall not try to put on paper, but simply say Bro. Norton was delivered, and jumping into the air with arms lifted high above his head, he exclaimed:—"THE MASONIC DEVIL'S DEAD! THE MASONIC DEVIL'S OUT!" and covering his face with his hands, he wept for joy. It was a repetition of the history found in Ezra 3, chap. 11; 12 and 13 verses. As I look back to the meeting I feel, O, that all who talk as though bringing in our reform prevented our success, could have been present, it would have cured them!

The work went with increased power and on Monday the altar was crowded with seekers, more than at any previous service. God have mercy on cowardly preachers! Amen.

I left on Tuesday, and reaching home arranged for my western trip. On Sabbath I attended the love-feast, and then left for Hudson, where I preached to a large audience at 8 P. M., having traveled twenty-five miles in my own conveyance. Monday, at 1 P. M. I ticketed for Chicago, and thence to Evansville, Wis., arriving at 1:30 A. M. Tuesday, where I spent three very pleasant days, working for God and truth. For some reason our Free Methodist brethren who wrote me they would be there failed, and finding no lecturers out on invitation, I came home with Bro. Rathbun. I found the field white to the harvest and thrust in my sickle preaching twice each day Saturday and Sabbath, so closed a good quarterly meeting at the Wesleyan church at Dayton, Clarence county, Iowa. On Monday night to a large audience I told my experience, showing the cause and cure of intemperance.

E. MATHEWS.

FROM BRO. AMES ON THE REMOTE FRONTIER.

[Through the kindness of Bro. Stoddard, to whom the following letter was sent, we print a letter from Rev. W. W. Ames, late of Menomonie, Wis., sending a word of cheer to his co-laborers in that State and giving us a glimpse of frontier reform work:]

CLARENDON, DONLEY CO., TEXAS, Aug. 26, 1879.

VERY DEAR BROTHER:—Having just a few minutes before starting or sending to the postoffice with mail, I wish to send you and all your co-workers in the reform work my hearty greeting, and request that you remember me very kindly to all the friends at the Wisconsin State meeting next week. May God bless each and all, and inspire with new zeal for the great work in which they are engaged.

There are no organized secret societies here that I am aware of, but there are a few individuals doubtless who have had the "cable-tow" about their neck, and think they wear a very precious jewel,—I suppose on the end of their tongue.

One brother in the M. E. church, (the only church here) who moved away a short time since, in praying for the little children in Sunday school said, "We pray thee to endue them with a competency of thy divine wisdom." Perhaps some of the little ones might have guessed what he meant by a "competency" of wisdom, but I knew that I had read just that prayer or sentence as a part of a Masonic prayer. And so that "jewel" jingled just loud enough for me to discover where he without doubt obtained it.

The class leader, a very nice man, but who evidently thinks Masonry a bright particular feather in his cap, has said that he was a Mason, but nothing more, except these two things, which doubtless he thought no "profane" would understand.

At a certain business meeting at which I was invited to stay, a brother was appointed to a certain office with specified duties. I overheard the class leader say to him, "take due notice of the same, and govern yourself accordingly." So the jewel jingled just a little. Last Sunday, at the social meeting, he prayed that "at last me may be called from labor to reward." I thought he came very near to saying "from labor to refreshment," but that would hardly be understood by the good, pious sisters, and some of the uninitiated brethren.

What a pity that, otherwise such good men, should be so deluded as to the genius and aims of the so-called "ancient and honorable," handmaid.

It having fallen to my lot to preach considerably here, I have taken occasion to say some things which I trust will serve to enlighten the minds of God's people as to the contrariety between Christianity and these oath-bound societies.

I gave the oath-bound rings a hard hammering on the Fourth of July, particularly as being opposed to the spirit and genius of republican institutions, and the rights of individual citizens.

May the Lord bless all the laborers in the reform work, and may I have their prayers, as I trust I have had in the past, that I may do yet some useful service in the good cause.

W. W. AMES.

THE NEW JERSEY WORK.

FROM BROTHER MICHAEL.

Our reform in New Jersey is increasing in interest and power. Had we the money and the men adapted to the work we could keep two more laborers constantly employed. Bro. Miller and myself to a very great extent are dependent upon our own efforts for a support. I expect to proclaim the truth throughout the State, but very little will be done if I wait to be invited to particular places and to be assured that expenses will be met, halls and churches opened, and that I will be well paid for my services. Such is the condition of the church and such is the power of the lodge in this part of the Union, that, I suppose, five invitations of this kind would not be received in a year.

If our work is to advance, we must go uninvited into new fields, bear all, or nearly all, the financial responsibility, and by arguments which cannot be answered and with divine power which demands respect, we must compel the people to hear. The opposition is severe, and is of a low and malicious type, and it is only by constant, determined, sanctified and carefully managed effort that the victory can be gained.

Cannot every reader help on this work by subscribing for five or ten copies of the little book mentioned by me in the Cynosure of August 28th in an article entitled "A Word to Lovers of Truth?" If I can sell a large edition, even at the small price of ten cents a copy, a profit will be realized which will be of great service to me. Besides, the pamphlet will be a very useful publication. I do not want your money now, but will you not send on your names, stating how many copies you will take at the rate of ten for one dollar? Address

LODGE NOTES.

—The Templars of Honor and Temperance (Temple of Honor) have had their own way in Wisconsin for a few years, and their orators boast how they are in the advance, "leading the way for Good Templars," etc. The latter repudiate the insinuation and throw back the boast thus:—"The Good Templars of Wisconsin are doing three-fourths of all the temperance work in Wisconsin and gaining in numbers every day. The Temple of Honor is losing ground (3,000 members during the past year,) owing to the milk and water policy of its Grand Templar. He opposes prohibition, and is killing his order." The trouble with both these orders is that instead of leading in the temperance work they are among its greatest hindrances. Anything to promote the fancied success of their secret cabal is the first business. The real work for temperance is done outside their guarded doors.

—The Masonic editor of the Inter-Ocean says the Masonic Review is "by all odds the best Masonic periodical published.

—The Illinois Knight Templar Grand Commandery meets in this city, October 28, and the Royal Arch Grand Chapter on the 30th.

—The Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows meets in Baltimore this week. It boasts that "sixty years have passed since the twig was planted by Wildey and his constituents, and mighty is the grand paternal oak that now overspreads this and other continents." But the oak grows no more and is badly rotted at the heart.

—The I. O. M. A. (Independent Order of Mutual Aid) is dead. Its Supreme Lodge tried to hold a session in Cincinnati, August 16th. The Supreme president called on the Supreme secretary for his report, which was to the effect that every lodge was delinquent and the order dissolved for lack of a constituency. Let us write the epitaph "Died by act of God."

—The Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite meets in Philadelphia this week. Several "Illinois Princes" attend to get their last degree, the 33d.

—The order of Foresters hold what they meekly style their "High Court of the World" at London, province of Ontario, October 14th.

—Dr. P. B. Reynolds, the exalted Mason, is grand physician for the For-order. He issues directions for the medical examinations of all candidates. He probably does not accompany these certificates with that of some of our Chicago pastors about his family shortcomings between this country and England.

—One of the Chicago lodges of the "Ancient Order of Druids" is dragged into court, Louis Daubert, plaintiff. A court report says:—"For eight years last past he, (Daubert) had been a member of the West Chicago Hain, No. 18, of Chicago, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Grove United Ancient Order of Druids of the State of Illinois. According to the by-laws any member in good standing and having paid his dues and assessments was entitled to $5 a weeks for twenty-six week in case of sickness, and $3 a week after that until his recovery. In case of his death he was to be allowed $35 for burial expenses, and his widow and minor children were to be paid $500 within four weeks out of the mutual mortuary benefit fund of the society. In March, 1877, Daubert took sick, and was paid $5 a week until October, 1877. Here the payments stopped, although his illness continued. In March, 1879, he reported himself as recovered, although he was not really so. About two weeks after his report as above he was expelled from the society for some pretended infraction of the by-laws. He now asks the court to compel his reinstatement as a member."

LITERARY.

—The Library Magazine has been changed from a monthly to a weekly, remaining at the same price, $1.00. The first issue of the weekly falls below the standard of this publication in excellence of selection. American Book Exchange, publishers, New York.

—The Christian Statesman came last week in new type, a neat and most attractive dress. The two combinations of matter and style make this one of the most welcome of our exchanges. The present number contains articles by Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, "The Pope's Bull against the Comet," and a European letter on the Napoleonic dynasty from Rev. S. F. Scovil. The Statesman is still edited and published by Revs. T. B. Stevenson and D. McAllister at No. 7 North 10th street, Philadelphia.

—The September number of the Princeton Review opens with a compendious view of the Progress of Christianity in the United States, by Prof. Philip Schaff. Prof. Ferri, of the University of Rome writes an elaborate paper on the Philosophic Movement in Italy; Prof. Henry Coppel of Lehigh University one equally so, but more popular, on Painting in its Historic Relations. Prof. Day, of New Haven, writes on Religion and Morality; Prof. Calderwood, of Edinburgh University, on The Problem of the Human Will; Pres. Dabney, of Hampden Sidney Seminary, on Secularized Education, in which he shows with great force the danger of a purely secular education, and the advantage which will be taken by Rome if our state education theories are carried out severely. Virgil as a Precursor of Christianity, by Principal Shairp, of St. Andrew's University, and The Laws of War in their Bearing on Peace, by Dr. Amos, of London, complete the number. Published at 37 Park Row, New York.

Correspondence.

THE LODGE MUST GO DOWN.

EVANSVILLE, WIS., Sept. 5, 1879.

EDITORS CYNOSURE:—Masonry is no better, but at every public expose new symptoms of approaching dissolution are manifested, and as people sometimes sing for the comfort of sick and dying friends, so we heard music on the street last evening as of those who realized that Masonry must die. It is past cure; gangrene has set in, it may linger some time; patent and homeopathic medicines are resorted to, the galvanic battery applied, but it does not revive; the lifting of a door latch increases the nervous fever, and there is general discouragement and mourners go about the streets.

Often the lecture-room rings with laughter at the ridiculousness of Masonry, but I can never lose sight of the principles of the institution, knowing that it desires the life of the lecturer, the more private laborer, and even the silent sympathizer in this reform; and as murder is not always profitable, it will torture in every way, poison and destroy family affections, break asunder the tenderest God-given ties that bind human hearts as one, set the iron heel on our spiritual privileges, put barriers between neighbors and make rough paths for our feet. It will destroy our property; with a smile of deceit it will ruin, or with a curse it will kill.

Not many years since there was no place for the oppressed to seek aid or sympathy, except in the closet with the door shut. when the troubled soul knew that Jesus Christ was mighty to save, and did give grace and strength and wisdom according to the day; but despair is changed to hope, darkness to light, the oppressed and down-trodden are lifted up, the bond go free, the foolishness of the world is evidently confounding those that thought themselves wise. The sunlight of truth concerning Masonry is lighting the family, the neighborhood and the world, and when the institution reaches out the bow, and says come under, men hesitate, and conclude they prefer freedom to a Masonic yoke, realizing that a decent burial is preferable to a heathen one; that when sick their families can care for them, supply their wants as well as strangers, and it is quite generally known now, that it is against the law of the land to leave the dead unburied. It is not more than two years since I heard people say, if you join the grange they will care for you when sick, and bury you when dead.

I hope intellectual light will increase and workmen be multiplied, till all denominations will be willing to have the Lord Jesus Christ preached in their pulpits.

MRS. BELVA STEVENS.

EXALT CHRIST.

MONROE, WIS., Sept. 7, '79.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Having recently been to the Wisconsin State Convention, where a goodly number of our faithful and zealous workers in this much needed reform were seen and heard, I closely observed all the phases of the foe and its relation to Christianity, and am convinced now that Freemasonry and Christianity are antipodes to each other. There seems to be an irrepressible conflict between the two. They cannot long exist together; one or the other must prevail; each claiming supreme authority over its adherents—and "No man can serve two masters," at the same time. It follows, therefore, that in the ratio one master is loved the other will be hated.

And now, dear brethren of this reform work, I wish to suggest to you, that your success largely depends upon the estimate men put upon Christianity. Let each of us exalt Christianity; this can only be done by showing respect to its Author. And inasmuch as Jesus instituted but one church, and most fervently prayed that all who believe on him through the words of his Apostles may be one, as he and his Father are one, and "that the world may believe that thou hast sent me" (see John 21: 11, 20); and again in the great commission to "Teach all nations," "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" Mat. (28: 19, 20)—should you, dear brethren, succeed in persuading Christians everywhere to observe, religiously, only what the Apostles commanded, to always call Bible things by Bible words; then our Blessed Master would be honored by those who profess to love him. Then as Masons will behold the rising glory of the church of Christ in its pristine beauty and primitive simplicity, they will love it more than the darkness of the mystic order.

A hint to the wise is all I intended. Yours fraternally,

GEORGE ELY.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Lexington, Ill., August 30, 1879, MRS. MARY C. MAHAN.

In briefly sketching the life of Mrs. Mahan, we must go back into the days when slavery held the nation's throat, and we shall find her among the early abolitionists, devoted to the cause of human liberty, when it cost something to be a "black abolitionist." Her husband suffered martyrdom in the cause of freedom; for though he was not killed, like Elijah Lovejoy and others, he was persecuted to death by the slave power.

The deceased was a daughter of Jeptha and Mary Curtis, and was born on the 28th of February, 1803, in Fayette Co., Pa. All that is known of her remote ancestors rests in the memory of Cassander Mahan, her only surviving sister, aged 79, and the wife of Wm. Mahan, of Lexington, Ill. The lives of these two sisters were very closely linked together; having married two brothers, their children were doubly connected, and there has always been a more than ordinarily close attachment between the two families.

Her maternal great-grandfather emigrated from Germany about the year 1747, or probably earlier, on account of religious persecution. His wife died on the ocean and was buried at Philadelphia, and his children were sold out for seven years to pay their passage, in accordance with the custom among the poorer class of emigrants of those times. Her grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, but very little is known of his record.

When the deceased was about four years old her father moved West, going down the Monongahela and Ohio rivers in a flat-boat as far as Manchester, and settled on a farm about three miles from Winchester, in Adams Co., Ohio. The country then was in a wild and primitive state, the Indians having left there but a short time previously. She was married in the year 1820, at the age of 17, to John B. Mahan, a son of the Rev. Jacob Mahan, a minister of the United Brethren church. Her husband was a Presbyterian minister, a bold, outspoken foe of slavery, and by his prominence in the anti-slavery cause brought upon himself the malice and hatred of the slave-driving aristocracy of the neighboring State of Kentucky. He was a prominent lecturer in the anti-slavery field, and assisted in organizing the second anti-slavery society in the State of Ohio, of which Mrs. Mahan was a member.

In the year 1838 came the great trouble of her life, a trouble which wrecked her husband financially, and sent him prematurely to the grave. He was then keeping a hotel in Sardinia, Ohio, and in prosperous circumstances. Sardinia at this time had about it a good many strong anti-slavery men, and runaway negroes from Kentucky usually passed through it, it being on the line of what was popularly termed the "underground railroad." Mahan always stood ready to feed or help a poor fugitive. In the summer of this year two runaway slaves stopped at his hotel, and took dinner. They left the hotel shortly afterward, and that night stopped at the house of Wm. Mahan on Bell's Run, a few miles out from Sardinia, and concealed themselves a couple of days on his premises. They were alleged to be the property of one William Greathouse, of Mason Co., Kentucky. Greathouse, a viler man than whom never breathed good air, was hotly in pursuit of the fugitives, and coming to Sardinia learned that they had been at Mahan's hotel. Here now was his opportunity. He had been itching for years for a chance to punish some Ohio abolitionist. He went before a grand jury of Mason Co., Kentucky, and swearing to a positive lie, obtained an indictment against Mahan for abducting slaves. A requisition was obtained from the Governor of Kentucky, and Governor Vance of Ohio, with a promptness, only equalled by his abject servility to the slave power, without any shadow of law, delivered Mahan to the tender mercies of slave-catchers, and he was carried to Washington, Ky., and imprisoned.

Mrs. Mahan, with true wifely devotion, followed him to prison, and remained with him until triumphantly acquitted at the hands of a slave-driving jury, for it was known by everybody that Mahan had not been in the State of Kentucky for nineteen years. It now became apparent that the criminal prosecution was resorted to for the purpose of getting Mahan within the jurisdiction of the civil courts, for he was immediately sued for the value of the slaves. There never was any proof against him except that these runaways had eaten at his house, but a servile jury rendered judgment against him for some two or three thousand dollars, and he was compelled to give security, and was harrassed with costs and expenses until all his property was gone, and he was left penniless. He died in 1844, and his monument in the old cemetery at Sardinia, bears this simple inscription:

"JOHN B. MAHAN,
Died Dec. 17, 1844.
A Victim of the Slave Power."

Mrs. Mahan, left a widow with a large family of children, thought of building up a new home in the West, and in 1846 moved to Lexington, Ill., where she has resided ever since. She lived to see the early struggles for liberty ripen into a glorious fruitage in the abolition of slavery, and the elevation of the negro.

Slavery being out of the way, she turned her attention to other reforms, and became an ardent Anti-mason. She was a subscriber to the Cynosure, and in all probability circulated more Anti-masonic tracts than any single person in the United States. She was the mother of ten children, three of whom are dead.

She was a church member for fifty-five years, a zealous Christian, charitable to a fault, and well prepared for death. The writer hereof stood by her bedside, and heard her last sigh, felt her last pulse-beat, saw death solemnly kiss down her eye-lids—and when the invisible wings of life had folded themselves about her forever, he thought in his soul, "would that all men were as well prepared for the great seal of eternity which the 'King of Terrors' will some day stamp on every human face."

JAMES WELLS.

Letters from my old home and former field of labor bring intelligence of the decease of my much beloved brother in Christ and faithful co-worker in the Gospel ministry, REV. ISAAC NORTON, who, ripe for the harvest, was gathered by the reaper into glory.

There is only one other man to whom under God I am more indebted than to Father Norton, for what little success I have had in Gospel work. Ripe in Christian experience, familiar with the practical of life, conversent with the men and the history of modern reforms, uncompromising in opposing sin and Satan, catholic in faith and practice among all who loved and followed the Master, with a courage at times bordering on the reckless, he extended to me the right hand of Christian fellowship, and was just the councilor needed to supplement the efforts of an inexperienced pastor. In reviewing a pastorate of more than ten years during which he was a very constant attendant on my ministry, I recall no one, among the choice spirits who bore so patiently and lovingly with my many weaknesses, who was more true and helpful. He was ready at all times to bear his part in every good work and to give a reason for his hope; and when called to his reward, departed full in the faith of that Gospel which he had preached to others for over forty years.

The deceased was born on Long Island in 1790, but removed soon after with his parents to Herkimer county, N. Y., where at seven years of age he received the Spirit's witness, although he did not enter into covenant relation with the visible church until ten years later, when he united with the Free-will Baptists. He settled in the then frontier town of Byron, Ill., in 1837, where he resided until a short time previous to his death. He served in the war of 1812, and was ordained to the Gospel ministry in 1839.

As a minister, Father Norton, as he was familiarly known, was very successful and greatly beloved, and he leaves a number of churches that were gathered by his labors, as monuments to his faithfulness. He was a staunch and uncompromising abolitionist, from the first inception of that vital issue into the great conflict which for a time threatened the disruption of both church and state in America, and like nearly all the veteran heroes in that struggle, he was an out-and-out opponent of the whole system of secretism. He saw with clearness of vision, such as none but the spiritually enlightened possess, that Freemasonry was anti-Christ, and that the minor secret orders were only satellites revolving around a common center, where the Prince of Darkness, clothed as an "angel of light," sat supreme; and neither hope of reward or fear of punishment by the powers of man or devils, could for a moment deter him from uttering his testimony against this system of iniquity, as he had formerly rebuked the oppressor when the advocate of the African's right to be free, was scorned, denounced, mobbed, and thrust out of the popular churches of America as the testifying Anti-masons are to-day.

Since I entered my present work I have not been personally associated with the deceased as formerly, and have delayed this brief sketch hoping to receive from the friends further details of his experiences and expressions during the last days or moments of his stay; but it is perhaps enough to know that he acted well his part in life and slept the peaceful sleep of the blessed, August 17, 1879, in the 90th year of his pilgrimage. His funeral was attended by a large number of friends in the Congregational church at Byron. The services were conducted by Rev. H. J. Ferris, pastor of Stillman Valley church, who took for his text Hebrews 11: 16, and 2d Tim. 4: 7.

The relatives of the deceased have the sympathy of many who knew and loved the departed, but better still they have the promise and assurance, if faithful, of meeting where parting shall be no more.

SPECIAL LESSON.

LESSON XXXIX.—Sept. 28, 1879.

SCRIPTURE.—John 18: 19-23.

19. The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20. Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21. Why askest thou me? Ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22. And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?

23. Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?

LESSON TEXT.—Is. 45: 18, 19.—"I am the Lord and there is none else. I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth."

THE COMMENTARIES.

ON JOHN 18-20.—He had taught no private or concealed doctrine. He had taught nothing to his disciples which he had not taught in public, and commanded them to do.—Mat. 10: 27; Luke 12: 3.—Barnes.

He appealed to those who had heard him denying that he had taught any secret doctrines (as the Greek philosophers were known to do) or formed any private faction.—Cottage Bible.

He spake to the world, to all that had ears to hear and were willing to hear him, high or low, learned or unlearned, Jew or Gentile, friend or foe; his doctrine feared not the censure of the mixed multitude: nor did he grudge the knowledge of it to any (as masters of some rare invention do) but communicated it as the sun his beams.....He sought no corners, for he feared no colors, nor said anything that he needed to be ashamed of; what he spoke in private to his disciples he ordered them to proclaim on the housetops. Mat. 10: 27. God saith of himself (Is. 45: 19) "I have not spoken in secret;" his commandment is not hidden, Deut. 30: 11. And the righteousness of faith speaks in like manner, Rom. 10: 6. "Truth fears nothing but concealment," says Tertullian.—Mathew Henry.

ON EPHESIANS 5: 11, 12.—The apostle then proceeds to warn the Ephesians against uniting with the heathen in any of the unfruitful works of darkness, among which he includes the profane mysteries and riotous and lascivious indulgencies of idolatry. From this state of spiritual sloth and darkness, he calls upon them to awake and arise that they may receive the beams of light from heaven.—"Christ shall give thee light."—Cottage Bible.

Missionaries tell us that they cannot describe the images on the car of Juggernant, or tell us what is done in the idol temples. All over the world the same thing is true. The cheek of modesty and virtue would be suffused with shame at the very mention of what is done by the worshipers of idols; and the same is true of what is done by multitudes in Christian lands who are not worshipers of idols. Their deeds cannot be described in the circles of the refined and the delicate; they cannot be told in the presence of mothers and sisters.—Barnes.

On v. 12, last clause, Barnes says: "The reference may be to the vices which were secretly practiced then as now; the abominations which flee from the light of day, and which are performed far from the public gaze.

We must have no fellowship with sin or sinners. Sinful works are works of darkness; they come from the darkness of ignorance they seek the darkness of concealment, and they lead to the darkness of hell ...We must rather reprove them; implying that if we do not we have fellowship with them. We must prudently and in our places witness against the sins of others...."The things which are done of them in secret." The apostle seems to speak here of the Gentile idolators, and of their horrid mysteries which abounded with detestable wickedness, and which none were permitted to divulge on pain of death.—Henry.

"Have no fellowship." Chandler observes that the Greeks used this word to denote a "participation in their religious rites and mysteries." Wherefore by this precept the Ephesians were forbidden to enter into any of the heathen fellowships. "Works of darkness." The apostle calls the heathen mysteries works of darkness, because the impure actions which the initiated performed in them, under the notion of religious rites, were done in the night time; and by the secrecy in which they were acted, were acknowledged by the perpetrators to be evil.—MacKnight.

Plants cannot bear fruit in the absence of light. Sin is darkness and its parent is the prince of darkness. Graces on the other hand, as flourishing in the light, are reproductive, and abound in fruits.—Jamieson.

ON MATTHEW 10: 26.—There is no use, and no need of concealing anything; right and wrong, truth and error are about to come into open and deadly collision; and the day is coming when all hidden things shall be disclosed, everything seen as it is, and every one have his due (1 Cor. 4: 5).—Jamieson.

ON MARK 4: 22.—Here the idea seems to be this: I have privately expounded to you these great truths, but only that ye may proclaim them publicly, and if ye will not others will. For these are not designed for secrecy. They are imparted to be diffused abroad and they shall be so; yea, a time is coming when the most hidden things shall be brought to light.—Jamieson.

[It will be our purpose in this lesson to arrange the various passages of Scripture which refer to concealment, or the principle of secrecy. Able arguments on the subject are within the reach of all. Among the best of these is the article on "The Curse of Concealment" reprinted in the Cynosure of August 4th from the Armory, and especially the sermon of Prof. R. T. Cross on Secretism. We would advise every teacher to read these arguments in connection with the lesson. The sermon can be had for 50c per dozen.]

The true mysteries or secret things belong to God and not men—Deut. 29: 29; Job 15: 8. These mysteries are not whether the finger is crooked one way or another, or certain words which men protect by solemn pledges of secrecy. A kind of mock mystery may be thrown about the meanest circumstance, as children boasting, "I know something you don't;" so, by putting a guard at the door and exacting promises of concealment with severe penalties to bind them, men have thrown about the systems of organized secretism a mystery which does not belong to them. The true mysteries belong to God. They are known to him. Ps. 44: 21; 90: 8; Eccl. 12: 14; Mat. 6: 4; Mark 4: 22; Rom. 2: 16. They are revealed by God. Ps. 25: 14; Prov. 3: 32; Amos 3: 7; Mat. 11: 25; 13: 35; Rom. 16: 25; 2 Cor. 3: 13. These true mysteries are of two kinds—those of the kingdom of nature and those of the kingdom of heaven. We are surrounded on all sides by them. They are such as these: the nature of the light; what force whirls through space the heavenly bodies, causing them to return to their exact place after cycles of ages; attraction; chemical action; why the same food makes hair on one animal and wool on another. See Job 37 to 41. The mysteries of grace are such as faith; prayer; Christ's incarnation, suffering and death; the resurrection; holiness; the coming of Christ to receive his people. These heavenly truths the angels even are busied in searching out, and all men are urged by the Word of God to learn all that can be found out. This knowledge is not intended to be shut up, but everywhere promulgated among men. We are not bound by oaths and penalties either from inquiring into or proclaiming these true secrets of grace and nature, Job 37: 23; Ecc. 3: 11.

The mysteries of grace were revealed by Christ to his disciples, Mark 4: 11; Eph. 1: 9; 3: 3; 1 Tim. 3: 16. By the disciples they were given to the world, 1 Cor. 4: 1; 13; 2; 15: 51; Eph. 6: 19; Col. 2: 2. By the promise of the Saviour the Holy Spirit does the same work for us, John 14: 26; 16: 14; 1 Cor. 2: 10-13.

The example of Christ is given us in the lesson and home readings. He was the Light of the World, in him was no darkness or concealment, Lu. 2: 32; John 1: 4; 3: 19; 8: 12; 12: 35; Rev. 21: 23. God is light, 1 John 1: 5; 1 Tim. 6: 16; and his Word is light, Ps. 19: 8, 119: 105; Pr. 6: 23. So Christians are to be children of light, Eph. 5: 8; 1 Thess. 5: 5; 1 Pe. 2: 9.

With a single exception there is no command in the Word of God to conceal a matter; those who follow Christ are expected, as we see by the passages already quoted, to be open-hearted and frank in their nature. The exception is found in Prov. 25: 9 and Mat. 18: 15. The only secrets we are admonished to have are a brother's faults which have been put away, repented of and forgiven. Difficulties between neighbors are not to be bruited about, but if possible settled between the parties concerned, and then buried forever—to be as if they had not been. Praise God that he commands this! When upon earth Christ kept back some things from his disciples, because it was not time for them to know them. He also bade some whom he had healed to "tell no man," that is, not proclaim it unnecessarily,—for their healing could not be hid from those who knew them. The reason for these injunctions are generally plain from the sequel, when it appears that his work was hindered by the publication of the miracle. See Mat. 8: 4; 10: 27; John 16: 12.

Contrary to the Word of God men try to conceal sin. It is of the nature of sin to hide itself. Satan concealed his hideous nature in a serpent. Adam and Eve hid from God after their disobedience, and the race follows. But sin cannot be concealed from God, Ps. 90: 8; 1 Tim. 5: 24, 25; Num. 32: 23; and to attempt to do so is folly and sin, Prov. 28: 13; Gen. 3: 8, 10; Job 31: 33.

Examples of this are frequent in Scripture and the memory of the scholars should be taxed to recall them. Such instances as the sons of Jacob secreting from their father the fate of Joseph, Achan hiding his plunder in his tent, Gehazi, David in the matter of Uriah, Ananias agreeing with his wife,—these and others can be searched out. The 32d Psalm shows David's trouble while concealing his sin and the joy following confession and pardon.

LESSON HYMN.—"Let us Walk in the Light."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPT. 18, 1879.

The Case of Police Superintendent Seavey.

A brief note mentioning the death of the Chicago Superintendent of Police and his high Masonic position was printed last week. We return to the subject with changed feelings, not with respect to his death and the city's official loss, but of gratitude to God for his matchless grace. The funeral was of an official character, the procession being escorted by a hundred members of the police force, with full band, members of the common council and many other city officers. The Consistory of thirty-two degree Masons also attended with their band, but in a subordinate capacity. The services at the house were an address by Rev. John Williamson, of the Michigan Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, followed by brief remarks by O'Neil, the leader of the Masons, and Mayor Harrison. Neither Mr. Williamson nor O'Neil made any reference, if reported correctly, to the high Masonic standing of the dead, and the Mayor lugged it in at the close of his remarks in a labored manner. The meaning of this studied omission of the lodge appears plainly in the following from Mr. Williamson's remarks respecting Mr. Seavey's conversion:

"This remarkable change in Mr. Seavey's religious views was especially gratifying to his family and friends, since it was once his rule not to refer to such matters himself and not to tolerate appeals intended to lead him to a different mind. He once had great confidence in his honesty of motive as a sufficient and satisfying preparation for a future life, but after great exercise of soul this common illusion was dispelled, and Jesus Christ lovingly and loyally substituted. As he himself sweetly expressed it. He wanted to rest in Jesus' bosom."

It thus appears that Mr. Seavey had renounced his faith in the mysteries of the Masonic religion and had humbly, hopefully, peacefully accepted Him, whom he had been for years schooled in the lodge to reject or to treat as a kind of nonentity. This religion of nature, taught by every lecture, every prayer and every symbol of the Masonic system, in which he had placed his confidence, as do the large proportion of active Masons to-day—this common illusion was dispelled, says the speaker, and the love and loyalty of a manly heart turned to Jesus Christ, the Lord of life and glory. Blessed, glorious change! In the presence of such a hope no wonder the Masonic virtues of the dead were unmentioned. The great Conqueror of the hearts of men trampled the gewgaws of the lodge in the dust, and appeared in the solemn hour, as he must ever be confessed, supreme, the Lord of all.

Doubtless had the severity of Mr. Seavey's disease allowed him space to consider he would have prefered no remembrance about his coffin, by symbol or by marshalled lodge, of the system whose instructions had been false to the sacred and eternal interests of his soul.

The Sabbath School Lesson.

As promised a few weeks ago a special lesson has been prepared for the last Sabbath of this quarter (Sept. 28), opening the Scriptures on a leading topic of our reform work. The selection has been made with a view to begin this subject logically, and to meet the question of secretism frankly and at the very threshold. Whether our exposition of the Christian character, as revealed in that wonderful scene in the trial of our Lord, shall meet the wishes of our Sunday school friends or no is immaterial, if only we can arouse them to a candid, careful study of the Word of God itself. Its testimony we believe to be everwhelming. The two-edged sword of the Spirit cuts through the meshes of secretism and the whole system vanishes as the misty ghost of Luno swept by the blade of Fingal on the bleak hills of Scotland.

There are two or three points to which special attention should be called by those who are instructing our children and youth. The Bible enjoins secrecy only in the case of forgiven injuries of a personal character. Nowhere are we admonished to conceal anything else, and it is a fair inference that promises of permanent secrecy should never be given. There are matters of a private nature which are left to our common sense; circumstances may require them to be made public. So long as they affect nobody but ourselves, the knowledge of them is immaterial to others.

It is often said by lodge orators that the early Christian church was a secret society. It is a lie and a slander. Because an old Scotch lady once hid her Bible in a loaf and baked it; because the Covenanters held their conventicles in among the crags and river beds out of sight of the murdering bands of Claverhouse, did they thus become secret societies? Let shame have her seat on the brow of him who can repeat the slander! No more has the true church of Jesus Christ ever been associated with secretism. The only instance where this business was associated with nominal Christianity resulted in Jesuitism.

We have yet learned of but two schools that intend using these reform lessons—Bro. Dean's at Waupun, Wis., and the College school at Wheaton. We hope, however, that many more will undertake a Bible exercise of this kind. Every church which holds this reform among its cherished principles will do wisely not to neglect the children, but instruct them betimes in the doctrine of their fathers. We shall thus hasten the day when all will join in singing, "The light of the world is Jesus."

The Miami U. B. Conference.

Space limited our remarks on the action of this conference last week. The resolutions commended the management of the printing establishment at Dayton, with its employment of Masons, in connection with the reproof of the Telescope and Cynosure for permitting the unwise and dangerous efforts of a small party to overthrow the testimony and destroy the peace of the whold United Brethren church. If the resolutions passed in Bro. Shuey's favor mean anything they say that the columns of the Telescope are to be openad to the advocacy of the "minor" secret orders, as is really done in the column after column printed by the publishing agent. An editorial in the Telescope of last week shows clearly how the whole secret system must stand or fall together. But one of the ablest reviews of this controversy appears in the September number of the Young Reformer of New Rumley, Ohio, which we commend to all who are interested in this very important discussion. That article closes with this forcible paragraph:

"But if our church is ordained of God, as we believe it is, and it is a self-evident fact that it cannot possibly exist without Freemasonry being in some way connected with it, then doubtless the institution must after all be a good thing and serves its purpose, and the church had better cease to use her influence against it, lest haply if she fortunately or unfortunately succeeds in destroying it, she will destroy herself, and thus commit two wonderful sins, viz.: blot out a great lodge that was useful and performed its mission in the world, and then commit suicide."

In our religious columns are reprinted resolutions by two annual conferences, which do not fear to take their stand with Christ and truth. While grateful to the Auglaize brethren for their notice of our honest purpose to stand by them as they do by Christ, we yet prefer to regard their resolution as intended for all the friends of this reform, whom this paper represents and who labor hand in hand with it. They will stand by the loyal United Brethren with their prayers and sympathy, and after helping as far as they may be able in bearing their burden, will also rejoice with them when they shall have achieved the promised victory.

—The attention of every reader is called to the publishers' department, and what is there said of the suppliment to be issued with the next Cynosure. If we had hope of ten thousand subscribers last year, there is much more reason in such expectation this. Let us all strike hands for such a list.

—Bro. Stoddard started Friday evening for Iowa State meeting at Morning Sun. Read his programme elsewhere.

—President and Mrs. Blanchard took the Friday morning train on the Chicago and Rock Island road for Omaha. They expected to spend the Sabbath with a friend, Mr. Hurlbut, and proceed on their westward journey Monday noon. At Wheaton a crowd of friends gathered at the depot to bid them God speed on their journey. The President had purposed to say a few words to the readers of the Cynosure in this issue, respecting his journey, but his strength was sufficiently taxed in other preparations. His sickness of a month and a half renders it necessary that he should have rest from active efforts in our reform. It will be a severe disappointment to the California brethren not to hear him in a series of lectures in their several centers of reform work; but this cannot be thought of, at least for the present. In the good providence of God strength may be given before his return so as to enable him to undertake some work of this kind.

—The Iowa meeting at Morning Sun promises to be one of the grandest gatherings ever held in the State. After the quarterly meeting at Dayton Chapel by Elder Rathbun, he, with brethren Mathews and Furguson, started for the State meeting by private conveyance, lecturing and arousing the people on their way for a grand rally. We look for an early report.

—We heard nothing of Bro. Hinman's movements in Missouri up to Monday afternoon, except that he reached Trenton, Grundy county, on Saturday, Sept. 6, and preached the following Sabbath in the Baptist church and had an appointment to lecture on Monday evening. On Monday a letter reached us dated Albany, which would gladly have been printed this week if possible. He reports the friends about the Freeman office hard at work in preparations for the State Convention at Avalon.

—The National Reform Association for the recognition of God in Christ in the Constitution is proposing to hold a series of State meetings in Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, and Kansas, on the third Wednesday, respectively, of October, November, December, and January. In Western Pennsylvania the convention will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Association at Pittsburgh, on the third Wednesday of February next.

—The Mayor of Chicago, Carter H. Harrison, has given a city lot to the Foundling's Home, the proceeds of the sale of which will help on an excellent charity. In this donation Mr. Harrison probably acted as a man and not as a Mason, and thus showed himself capable of forgetting for once the obligations of the "mystic tie."

—The Baltimore Methodist notices the receipt of Bro. Michael's two tracts: "The Difference between the Discipline and Practice of the Methodist Episcopal Church," and "The Methodist Episcopal Church and Freemasonry." The author is complimented with having stated his opinions openly and with decided ability. Bro. Michael's tracts should have a wide circulation; they are good for other "lukewarm" churches beside the Methodists.

—Father McNamara, a Catholic priest who seceded from the old church and set up an Irish branch in New York the other day, has attempted to forestall difficulty and unite his faction by solemnly excommunicating the head of the Papacy and all its branches. His desperation excites nothing but ridicule from the press for presuming to excommunicate persons who were never members of his organization. We know of a case having some resemblance to this, attempted by a Protestant body making pretensions to far greater piety and good sense than they would allow to Father McNamara, the end of which cannot be long delayed of chagrin and discomfiture that they have lent themselves to the lodge to do a work of folly and wrong.

—A very interesting note has just been received from a young preacher in northern Indiana. He sent, some time ago, for tracts, which aroused in him a conviction of the evils of the lodge system. Having been a Mason he readily comprehended the force of the arguments and determined his course of opposition to the lodge system. He proposes as fast as possible to procure and circulate tracts, and thus break up the den of lodgery in his place. He writes hopefully of the result, although beset with much hostility. He has been summoned to a trial for remarks upon the infidelity of one of the lodge members. He does not state whether before the lodge or no, but that is as we understand his letter. He is determined to attend and manfully meet the charges and push the matter to the wall. Let us remember this brother before God.

—Some good friend in Cromwell, Iowa, has our sincere thanks for a circular issued to "Masonic Brethren" throughout the country, from the Masonic Temple at Louisville, Kentucky, advertising "Coleman's Masonic Calendar." The most interesting part of the circular to us is contained in the following paragraph, which is the more valuable since it was prepared only for Masonic readers, but it is such a testimony to the efficacy of the reform as we should look far to find again:

"Passing on to another department of this subject, there are but few Masons who have an idea of the amount of excrementa thrown off annually from our 10,000 lodges. During the years 1876, 1877 and 1878, the appalling number of 2,933 Masons were EXPELLED from the lodges of the United States and Canada! 2,933 expelled Masons! 2,933 men dead as to Masonry, yet alive as to the harm they do us by their evil lives, their exposures, their influence upon the rising generation! Besides this, 2,609 more were suspended for periods, more or less lengthy, for gross unmasonic conduct, and 44,299 for non-payment of dues! In the same period, 63,000 Masons demitted, the larger part of them to avoid paying their share toward the support of the order. Here is the sum total of 100,000 Masons who have gone back upon their fraternal pledges within the little period of three years!"

—Rev. Enos Collins, of Wisconsin, a seceding Mason, subscribes to the following recommendation of the new book, Freemasonry Illustrated:

"I pronounce it the most powerful arraignment of Freemasonry and the whole lodge system that I have ever seen. The ritual or "work" of the first three degrees as given is substantially the same as when I took those degrees about thirty years ago, and the three hundred and eighty-two quotations from standard Masonic authorities contained in the foot notes, not only confirm the truthfulness of the exposition on the pages where they occur, but they show from these indisputable authorities that Freemasonry is a system of false, Christless religion which is leading tens of thousands to eternal death. President Blanchard's remarkably clear analysis of the character of these ceremonies and Masonic doctrine following each degree is the crowning excellence of the volume. The book deserves a very wide circulation as it is a storehouse of information in reference to the secret orders, which overshadow our land as a deadly pestilence."

—The St. Paul, Minn., Dispatch publishes a ringing letter from Bro. Wm. Fenton, in which the character and claims of the Masonic institution are very ably discussed in the light of a wide range of extracts from Masonic works and the Judge Whitney case. It closes with an appeal to the noble-minded women of St. Paul thus: "But I want to ask the true women of St. Paul which law concerning adultery they prefer, God's law, or the Masonic law, remembering that even though they are related to a Master Mason the Masonic law does not protect them while amongst Masons except it is known to Masons that they are so related. And I want them to think of this while they are listening to their Masonic pastors preaching to them." The Dispatch says in an editorial note:

We do not endorse our Anti-masonic contributor, Mr. Fenton, in all things. But a reasonable amount of his literature seems to be in demand, both by Masons and outsiders."

If some one had injected a like public spirit into the Advance, it would not have withdrawn from the discussion of a question vital to the churches of which it is the organ in so velvety a manner.

Price of single subscriptions to the Cynosure $2 per year in advance. This is low considering the size and value of the paper.

THE REFORMES OF DANSVILLE, NEW YORK.

In connection with the new reform song book now preparing by the veteran liberty singer, Geo. W. Clark, our readers will be pleased to see the following from a letter written last June to one of our Chicago dailies by James G. Clark, "the poet singer," whether a relative of the more famous George W. we cannot say. It gives us a glimpse of the lives and homes of men who are making Dansville well known throughout the land for good principles and good health:

"In an article going the rounds of the press concerning the prominent agitators who have survived Wm. Lloyd Garrison, I do not see the name of James C. Jackson, the famous health reformer, and founder of "Our Home" in Dansville, N. Y., the largest and most successful hygienic institution in the world.

"Dr. Jackson, when a mere stripling youth, threw his whole soul into the then unpopular cause of abolition, and for years stood in the front rank of the little band of orators whose eloquence was the distant thunder of that storm which afterward uprooted chattel slavery and swept it, root and branch from the continent. He lacked the wealth and the grand presence of that moral and physical king of reformers, the late Gerrit Smith, who was his intimate personal friend and co-laborer, but he was not a whit behind the latter in magnetic power, eloquence and logic. His influence over an audience even now, is at times almost marvelous. He labored in the cause till the moral and intellectual fire within actually burned up his vitality, and left him a physical wreck, cast ashore at the little water cure of Glenhaven, near the head of Skaneateles Lake, N. Y. Here he was given up to die by all the physicians except Mrs. Dr. Gleason, now of Elmira Water Cure (a woman whom the Rev. T. K. Beecher says is "without a peer in her profession"), and for weeks the little spark of life merely flickered in its socket. But it was not to go out. It was to be restored to more than its former brightness till it should shine in all civilized lands, illuminating the paths of the sick and disheartened, and leading them out of diseased conditions into happiness.

"Dr. Jackson's sickness and recovery proved to be the educators that fitted him for the grander warfare against the slavery of false living. Tens of thousands, myself included, who are in almost perfect health now, owe their health, and many of them their lives, to this earnest champion of health reform. The doctor still lives, and inspires the institution he has founded, and he has the rare satisfaction, vouchsafed but to few workers, of seeing his mission successfully taken up by his children, who are graduates of the best medical colleges in the land.

"Just across the street from "Brightside," Dr. Jackson's family residence, in Dansville, New York, is a little brown cottage owned and occupied by Geo. W. Clark, author of "The Harp of Freedom," "Liberty Minstrel," "Songs of the Free," etc., the "revival tune books" of the abolition movement. Mr. Clark was a singer of rare power and expression in these liberty conventions. He is 64 years old, and his beard and hair are white as silver, but his voice, like the voices of the genial and irrepressible Hutchinsons, retains much of the old-time ring and sweetness that thrilled and inspired Garrison, Pierrepont, Green, May, and Gerrit Smith nearly forty years ago, when the writer of this article was a nine-year-old anti-slavery boy in a good Democratic family in Constantia, N. Y."

MCCURDY.

ST. LOUIS, Mich. Sept. 1[illegible], '79.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I see in your issue of date, a notice of my quondam adversary. I think it must be Rev. Dr. R. McCurdy, (you get it McMurdy,) D.D., LL. D., R.·. E. P.·. G.·. P.·. E.·. W. S. And now you seem to add (if it be the same much-titled champion), "Tekel," "weighed and found wanting." Well, few "kites" could fly long with such a "caudal extremity"; certainly it is no more of a surprise to me, than pleasure, to hear this report of such a man, who could not only wear the above medley of sacred and profane titles, but who in addition to his reckless denial of my statements of matters of fact, and his amazing utterances of falsehoods in favor of Masonry could consent to be a party, with his bigoted Masonic editor, of the gross injustice to me as a respondent to an unprovoked attack upon my little criticism, compelling me to accept the space of one column in reply to over nine, and choking me off, even at that disadvantage.

But it gives me not a tithe of the pleasure to read the report of his fall at the end of such an unconscionable course, that it would to read of his hearty repentance and renunciation of his terrible sins.

Pardon these reflections thus called up if they seem out of place. I rejoice however that God has just given me a third society to preach to who make "no fellowship with the unfruitful workers in darkness."

R. FAUROT.

Notice our special reduction to subscribers only on paper covered three-degree edition of our new book "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

— The Bureau of Statistics has received all the reports from collectors of customs concerning the imports and exports of the last fiscal year, ending June 30, which show the balance of trade in favor of the United States to be nearly $265,000,000, as against $257,000,000 the previous year. The total value of exports was $710,000,000, and the imports $445,000,000. Nearly $5,000,000 more of coin and bullion was exported last year than imported.

Home Circle.

"They Shall See God."

"They shall see God." O heaven's benediction!
Falling like music from the upper spheres;
To you it comes, laden with sin's affliction—
Promise of joy for sorrow, songs for tears.

Sometimes our hearts are dull, our eyes are holden,
Earth's shadows press around and dim our sight;
It seems so far away, that city golden,
We see it not, frail children of the night.

But, "blessed are the pure;" with vision clearer,
They gaze on things eternal, things unseen;
The land far off comes ever near and nearer,
Until there seems but little left between.

Earth wears for them the ever-bright reflection,
The softened glory of the tearless land;
While all the treasures of a pure affection
They daily pour within the nail-pierced hand.

No longer is it Chance that smites them blindly,
Or drives them here and there in wanton play;
'Tis he, Eternal Love, who smites them kindly,
And leads them by a right, though winding, way.

Far out upon the desert hot and burning
They see the common bushes all aflame;
And from the flocks a little moment turning,
A voice speaks forth the unutterable Name.

The changing seasons, ever coming, going,
Like four evangelists his praise record;
Nature herself is but a verger, showing
The silent, glorious temple of the Lord.

And when the heavenly life on earth is ended,
And Christ shall touch the lingering film away,
When he shall come, by angel guards attended,
"They shall see God" through one eternal day.

—Rev. Henry Burton, B. A.

The Vagaries of Fashion.

There is one thing which we have never been able to understand, and which we believe few can possibly comprehend or explain. It is the vagary of female fashion. Who it is that invents it, and has the knack to maintain it as long as he pleases, and then with equal audacity and success starts something fresh, is all a mystery. The phenomenon is by no means new. A hundred and sixty years ago the old essayists were at a loss to know how the extravagant oddities of female attire originated, and were so cleverly kept up in spite of torrents of ridicule. Then, as now, a new fashion had its run of a few years, and dropping out of use as mysteriously as it commenced, was followed by something equally preposterous.

In these vagaries of fashion there seems for the time being to be a kind of mental derangement—perhaps more correctly the prostration of intellect, through a deficiency of moral courage. Forty years ago the lady part of mankind fell into a mania for wearing dresses with huge shoulders blown up like balloons. It amounted to a purposeless distortion of the person. So everybody said it was. But the avowal made no difference Sleeves must be made six times larger than they need to be. Shoulders must be distorted, rendered positively ugly. It was the fashion, and that was enough. In due time, when the mania had run its course, the ballooning was given up, and the shoulders shrunk to their natural figure. When it was all over, no one ventured to explain how the frenzy had originated, or what was its meaning. On the contrary, as if ashamed of the weakness, the subject was skilfully dropped. Next in the order of this species of feminine dementia came the crinoline vagary. A petticoat of horsehair and whalebone was employed to distend the outer dress far beyond the person. It was a resumption of hoops, with the difference that while hoops expanded sideways, the crinoline spread out all round. Every woman had the shape of a handbell, wide at the lower edge and small above. Gracefulness was out of the question. If the object was to produce a monstrosity, it was eminently successful. The crinoline mania had a fair run for several years, and given up, there occurred the fresh surprise how it ever had received the slightest encouragement.

Crinolines of every variety having been relinquished, feminine society is sorely in want of a new eccentricity. It would be against all rule not to appear ridiculous. So wits are at work in the grand arcana of fashion. The world had not long to wait. The fiat goes forth from somewhere that, as a superlative novelty, dresses are to be worn tight to the person from top to toe. Instead of paddings and ballooning, there is to be squeezing so tightly as to be hardly able to breathe. To impede walking, and if possible to prevent sitting, the legs are to be held back with strings. By way of compensation for the tightening up, the dress is to be so long as to trail three or four feet on the ground. Such may be called the present fashionable regime, maintained, as usual, with the force of inexorable law. Woe be to the fine lady who does not make herself as lank as a skinned rabbit, and who fails in the tuckings and tyings to restrain locomotion! What her natural shape may be is nothing to the point. She may not be able to go up or down stairs, except by one foot at a time, like a child learning to walk, but that is of no consequence. Fashion demands that she shall appear maimed in the lower limbs. The law is to be obeyed, and that's an end of it.

Slim in figure, squeezed like a wasp, and with head dresses as fantastic as can be devised, there is one more token of high fashion. It is a return to the antiquated practice of wearing high heeled shoes, which happily falls in with the plan of bandaging back the legs, to prevent freedom in walking. The folly of distorting the foot, by throwing the pressure unduly on the toes, is so manifestly vicious, and has been so frequently the subject of remonstrance, that it calls only for a passing denunciation. Those who are guilty of the error will in this as in some other matters live to regret their weakness. The wonder is, how the ridiculous extravagances in attire, which are here barely alluded to, should for a moment have met with any degree of support. In the the article of dress, men and women appear to have pursued an entirely different course for the last fifty years. The tendency in male attire has been toward extreme simplicity—perhaps too extremely so—while, as regards the female mode of dressing, according to fashion, it has been a succession of wild eccentricities, always going from bad to worse.—Harper's Weekly.

The Rich Man on Riches.

The following story, says the Wayside, is told of Jacob Ridgway, a wealthy citizen of Philadelphia who died many years ago, leaving a fortune of five or six million dollars:

"Mr. Ridgway," said a young man with whom the millionaire was conversing, "you are more to be envied than any gentleman I know."

"Why so?" responded Mr. Ridgway. "I am not aware of any cause for which I should be particularly envied."

"What, sir," exclaimed the young man in astonishment. "Why, are you not a millionaire? Think of the thousands your income brings you every month?"

"Well, what of that?" replied Mr. Ridgway. "All I get out of it is my victuals and clothes, and I can't eat more than one man's allowance, or even wear more than one suit at a time. Pray, can't you do as much?"

"Ah, but," said the youth, "think of the hundreds of fine houses you own, and the rental they bring you?"

"What better am I off for that?" replied the rich man. "I can only live in one house at a time; as for the money I receive for my rents, why I can't eat it or wear it; I can only use it to buy other houses for other people to live in; they are the beneficiaries not I."

"But you can buy splendid furniture, and costly pictures, and fine carriages and horses—in fact, any thing you desire."

"And after I have bought them," responded Mr. Ridgway, "what then? I can only look at the furniture and pictures, and the poorest man who is not blind can do the same. I can ride no easier in a fine carriage than you can in an omnibus for five cents, without the trouble of attending to drivers, footmen and hostlers; and as to any thing I 'desire' I can tell you, young man, that the less we desire in this world the happier we shall be. All my wealth cannot buy me a single day more of life—cannot buy back my youth—cannot purchase exemption from sickness and pain—cannot procure me power to keep afar off the power of death; and then, what will it avail when, in a few short years at most, I lie down in the grave and leave it all forever? Young man, you have no cause to envy me."

A Splendid Charge in Battle.

We talk exultingly of a "splendid charge," yet very few will think of the hideous particulars these airy words stand for. The "splendid charge" is a headlong rush of men on horses urged to the fullest speed, riding down and overwhelming a mass of men on foot. The reader's mind goes no further, being content with the information that the enemy's line was "broken," and "gave way." It does not fill up the picture.

When the "splendid charge" has done the work, there will be found a sight very much like the scene of a frightful railway accident. There will be a full complement of broken backs, of arms twisted off, of men impaled on their own bayonets, of legs smashed up like bits of firewood, of heads crunched by iron hoofs of horses, of faces trampled out of all likeness to anything human; so the dismal catalogue runs on.—Charles Dickens.

Ebal and Gerizim.

Gerizim was one pulpit and Ebal the other. While I remained to read the blessings Mr. Samson passed over to Ebal to read the curses, and Bishop Marvin went down to listen in the plain below, where the hosts of Israel had stood. The two readers were fully a mile apart, and hardly distinguishable from the rocks on which they stood, and yet, as they read the blessings and curses of the twenty-seventh and twenty-eight chapters of Deuteronomy, not only did Bishop Marvin hear every word with wonderful distinctness, but they could hear and understand each other, save when an occasional gust of wind swept away a word. This is, perhaps, the greatest auditorium in the world, and with such an auditory as listened and responded "Amen," when the Levites read the blessings and curses, history cannot show a more imposing spectacle. How these hills re-echoed every word said, as if to add yet other voices to the solemn tones to the tribe of Levi. The lesson ended, one of us proclaimed: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might be saved,' while the other responded: 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' Then the two voices on the mountain sides and the other in the valley below sang:—"Praise God from whom all blessings flow.' Meeting again in the valley we returned to our tents, remarking upon this most wonderful whispering gallery of God's own making. It was this place, unknown to him save by tradition or the inspiration of the divine Spirit, that Moses selected for the great drama in which Israel should have set before them the evil and the good."—Christian Advocate.

CHAPTER I.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

It was Saturday night, or rather Sabbath morning; for the hands of the marble clock which stood on the dining-room chimney-piece pointed to half-past twelve; but, though Mr. Mowbray was a strict Sabbatarian, he never moved, but continued to pour over the business cash-books, which he had himself carried over from his counting-house that afternoon. At length, having repeatedly arrived at the same conclusion, he pushed back his chair, and started to his feet. "The scoundrel! the ungrateful scoundrel!" he muttered again and again, as he paced the floor with hasty strides. "To rob me—me, his best friend! But I'll expose him; I'll g ve him up to the vengeance of the law; transportation's only too good for him. If Monday morning were only come, I'll have him arrested and sent to jail: and richly he deserves it."

Mr. Mowbray was very angry, and not without cause, for he had just discovered that his chief clerk—a man in whom he had placed implicit confidence—had robbed him of a large amount; and the fact that this man was not only his servant, but a friend whom he had loved since the days of his boyhood, had made him at first slow to believe in his guilt, and then, when conviction of the truth was forced upon him, all the more angry and indignant. Burning with rage and mortified affection, he continued to give vent to his feelings by threats of speedy vengeance, till the door softly opened, and a sweet face peeped in.

"Papa, why are you so late up? D n't you know it's Sabbath morning?" said the young girl to whom it belonged, glancing with surprise, as she spoke, at the books on the table.

"Come in, Bessie," said her father, glad at the prospect of a little sympathy; and Bessie, enveloped in a flannel dressing-gown, and with her naked feet thrust into a pair of slippers, shuffled into the room, saying, as she shut the door behind her—

"I was in bed, but I could not go to sleep, knowing you were up. What is it, papa?" and she again glanced at the books.

"Bessie," said her father solemnly, David Montgomery is a thief, and has robbed me of I don't know how many hundred pounds."

"David Montgomery robbed you, papa?" cried Bessie, opening her eyes very wide.

"Ay," said Mr. Mowbray, bitterly; "he has robbed me—the man who has been more a friend, than a master to him."

"But papa," said Bessie, "are you sure it is true—may there not be some mistake?"

"I have only too much proof of the truth of it," replied her father, pointing to the means of his information. "The fellow is cunning, but not cunning enough; there is enough in these books, Bessie, to transport him twice over."

"Oh, the cruel, wicked, ungrateful fellow!" cried Bessie, clenching her small fist, as her face flushed and her eyes filled with angry tears; "how could he do it?"

"You may well say that," cried Mr. Mowbray. "Why, Bessie, as I have told you before, we were inseparable at school, and so fond of each other; they used to call us David and Jonathan; and when I prospered in the world, I could not be happy till he shared my prosperity. I am sure that the liberal salary I gave him should have placed him far above all temptation."

"What could he do with so much money?" Bessie asked wonderingly.

"Speculation; speculating with my money, forsooth!" said her father, with increased bitterness; "but I'll teach him a lesson he won't forget in a hurry. If Monday morning were only come, he'll get leave to speculate at leisure; but go to bed, darling, you'll get cold standing here," he added tenderly.

"Will you promise to go too, papa?" said Bessie; "it's Sabbath morning," she added in a whisper.

"Immediately," said Mr. Mowbray, glancing at the clock; "good-night, again, my love."

"Good-night, dear papa," said Bessie, as she left the room. But the next moment, her pretty night-capped head appeared again.

"May I tell French Bessie, papa?" she whispered.

"Yes, you may tell her," said Mr. Mowbray, after being assured that the painful news would not be spread.

"Thank you, papa," said Bessie, as she ran briskly, and full of importance upstairs.

CHAPTER II.

FRENCH BESSIE.

French Bessie was the daughter of Mr. Mowbray's sister, who, having married a Frenchman, and dying a widow in the land of her adoption, had bequeathed her only child to her brother's care; a charge gladly accepted by Mr. Mowbray, who hailed with delight the little French girl as a welcome companion to his own motherless daughter. She very soon endeared herself to her uncle's heart, by the poignant grief she displayed for the loss of her mother, and the tender veneration with which she cherished the memory of a sister whom he had dearly loved. Indeed she was at first inconsolable; but time works wonders, even with grief the most acute, and by slow degrees his niece recovered her cheerfulness, and eventually became the merry sprite of the household. Both girls were named after their grandmother, and to prevent confusion, Mr. Mowbray had proposed, shortly after her arrival, that the stranger should be called Elizabeth, a proposal to which she submitted without remonstrance. But, through the night, her cousin found her sleep broken by the sound of deep, heavy sobs, which her companion was vainly endeavoring to smother, and on anxiously inquiring the cause of her tears, discovered that she was grieving over the idea of being no longer called by the name which had sounded so sweetly from her mother's lips.

"Mamma always called me Bessie. Oh, my cousin, call me Bessie still," she sobbed, as the other Bessie tried to comfort her; "call me Bessie French, and there can be no mistake."

"French Bessie, you mean, my dear," said English Bessie, smiling at the oddness of the appellation; but, promising to use her influence with her father, the stranger was henceforth, to her own great satisfaction, always called French Bessie.

"What is it? Uncle—is he ill?" she eagerly inquired, as Bessie entered the bed-room they shared in common; but instead of replying, Bessie burst into fits of laughter, for French Bessie was sitting up in bed, enveloped in pillows which (having a wholesome terror of what she styled the "Scottish rheumatism") she had twisted round her head and shoulders in grotesque fashion of her own devising, her small face peeping out from the bundle of feathers "like a mouse in a cauliflower," her cousin told her afterward.

"But you would not laugh if uncle were ill," she said. "What is it, then? Has the chimney of the kitchen gone up on fire? Has the cook left the water-pipe running and drowned all the mice? Has the dog or cat gone mad? Has—"

"No, no, no," interrupted the laughing Bessie.

"Very well," she continued, without moving a muscle of her face; "if uncle be not ill, and nothing has happened, what care I? I'll go to sleep." And after thumping and arranging her pillows, she lay down and began to snore ostentatiously.

"You're enough to provoke a saint," whispered Bessie into her ear.

"Give over tickling my cheek with your breath, my cousin. Don't you see I am fast asleep?" she murmured softly.

"Well, but Bessie—dear French Bessie—something has happened, and I am dying to tell you," cried Bessie.

"Why don't you tell it, then?" said she, opening her eyes and looking as bright and sharp as a needle. Then, first exacting a promise of secrecy, Bessie poured forth her tale, pausing at length more for want of breath than lack of words, for indignation made her eloquent.

French Bessie was all alive immediately to the importance of the communication.

"What, what," she said, "can it be possible! the Monsieur Montgomery who dined here at Christmas, with his pretty, gentle wife? Surely it cannot be true!"

"It's quite true. Isn't it awful?" said Bessie, solemnly.

"Ah," said French Bessie, sitting up once more, and pitifully clasping her hands,—"ah! the poor man!"

"The poor man!" cried her cousin, indignantly; "the poor man, forsooth! It's my papa that's to be pitied."

"Ah! yes, yes, yes," cried French Bessie, eagerly, "I am very sorry for uncle. He has lost a great deal of money and his friend besides; but this man, who has wronged his friend and master, is most to be pitied; for uncle has done no wrong, but this man has done a great sin, and has lost his good conscience and his character. Ah, the poor man!" and again she clasped her hands.

"He is a wicked fellow, and papa intends to send him to prison on Monday morning," said Bessie.

"What! put him in prison? Ah, uncle won't do that, I am very sure," said French Bessie, gravely.

"And why not, I wonder?" retorted English Bessie.

"Because uncle is a good Christian, and he will forgive him," she replied; "he must do it, he cannot help doing it," she added.

"There is no must in the matter, and I am sure my papa will not forgive him," said Bessie, decidedly.

"Ah! say not so," French Bessie sorrowfully replied; "we all go astray in our own way, and in cherishing an unforgiving spirit uncle may be committing as great a sin in the sight of God as this man who has robbed and cheated him."

"So because we are bound to forgive our enemies, you would let thieves and robbers escape without punishment," cried Bessie, indignantly.

"Ah! no, no, no," she cried, looking somewhat puzzled; "no, my cousin; I have nothing to do with thieves end robbers; but this man is in uncle's power, and he can forgive him or send him to prison, as he chooses. If he do the first, he may save him from more wickedness; if he do imprison him, Monsieur Montgomery is ruined, and uncle himself will have acted the part of the debtor in the Bible parable, who, after having been forgiven his own debt cast his fellow servant into prison."

"Papa never was a debtor, and never cheated anybody, so never needed such forgiveness," said Bessie, angrily.

"Ah! but that is very true," cried her cousin, eagerly. "I know how good he is; but that is not what I mean. I mean," she continued, pausing and hesitating—"I mean that when uncle prays to have his sins forgiven, even as he forgives those who have trespassed against him, that he must forgive David Montgomery for the injury done to himself; and if he do that, I do not think he will be anxious to send him to prison as a punishment."

"I fear I have preached to you a sermon," she added, covering her face with her hands for a moment. "Come to bed, child," she cried, with a whimsical, pretended asperity; "if you stand there staring at me much longer you'll catch the Scottish rheumatism."

Bessie silently obeyed, and lay down beside her cousin without a word, but very soon she whispered: "Bessie, dear, I see it all now; you are right as you always are."

"Yes," she replied, "I am always right when I am not wrong; go to sleep now, my dear, or you will be nodding and snoring in church when the Rev. Dr. Rivers is preaching. Is it not the Sabbath morning, my cousin?"

And Bessie did go to sleep, and slept sweetly and soundly, for she had forgiven David Montgomery with all her heart. Not so her father; his rest was broken and disturbed, for, attracted by the sound of voices as he passed up stairs, he had almost unconsciously paused on the landing and listened to French Bessie's sermon, and it caused a struggle within him, the result of which was doubtful, even when he rose, agitated and unrefreshed, on Sabbath morning.

THE METHODIST PROTESANT CONFERENCE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

CHARGES AGAINST ELDER TURNEY DISMISSED.

The Freemasons of West Virginia are furnishing a fresh illustration of the saying,—"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad."

The following documents will explain themselves to every reader of the same. Let them appear at once and score Anti-masonic victory, No. 1, for West Virginia. It is found after due trial and examination, that the Methodist Protestant Annual Conference of West Virginia, to the disgust of some Freemasons, refuses to treat Anti-masonry as a crime. The Lord be praised for his goodness.

BILL OF CHARGES.

At a regular quarterly conference held at the Grafton Mission Station of the M. P. church, by the official members thereof, on August 23, 1879, the following preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Rev. D. B. Turney, a minister of the West Virginia Conference M. P. church, did, while pastor of Grafton Mission and subsequently, conduct himself in a manner unbecoming a minister of the Gospel and calculated to stir up strife and dissension, by opposing, from the pulpit, on the street, in a public meeting called for the purpose by himself and held in a hall in the town of Grafton—and in various other ways—all secret societies, in such a manner and such language as to disturb the peace and harmony of the church of which he was pastor and even endanger its very existence, by arraying himself against certain members and by seeking to array the members against one another—and thereby bringing himself, his calling and his church into disrepute—making for himself and the church enemies, and, as he himself admitted, weakening the influence of both for good. And,

WHEREAS, He has also, while a member of said conference, and subject to its authority, accepted an appointment from the National Anti-secret Order Association as Vice-President for the State of W. Virginia, and engaged in a work foreign to his ministerial duties, that of organizing anti-secret order societies and publicly disseminating the principles of said Association, as he stated in an interview with a reporter of the Wheeling Register and others, he had been doing and intended to do the remainder of his life. And,

WHEREAS, He did further prove unfaithful to his calling as a minister by soliciting a nomination at the hands of a political convention, stating at the time that he intended soon retiring from the ministry. And,

WHEREAS, He is also guilty of immoral conduct. 1st. Of slander, in publicly stating as truths that he could prove, that the Freemasons were guilty of untold murders—that none of them could be believed under oath—and that all members of all secret orders were Baal worshipers and not Christians—when such could be no more than mere opinions of his, not susceptible of positive proof. And of slandering his own annual conference by stating as a fact that he was wrongfully kept from receiving an appointment at the session of 1878 by Masonic influence, and by stating in a communication to the Grafton Sentinel, and in conversation with various persons, that said conference defrauded him of missionary money due him, both of which false statements he is sowing broadcast to the injury of the conference. 2nd. Of equivocating and falsifying as follows: (1) Stating that he had never made political speeches in Ohio, and afterwards admitting that he had. (2) Stating that no names were signed to a notice served on him in Grafton, and afterwards admitting that there were. (3) Stating that on a certain occasion he forgot his clerical pass and hence was obliged to pay full fare on the railroad, and afterwards stating that he was obliged to pay full fare because the ticket agent learned he was an Anti-mason, and so refused him the reduction he was entitled to. (4) Charging F. M. Durbin with threatening to prevent him from getting an appointment because he was an Anti mason. (5) Stating to parties at Benton's Ferry and Bobtown that a certain person in Grafton gained entrance to a Masonic lodge there, though not a member. (6) Stating that he read in the minutes of our conference an order that all missionary money should be divided between Parkersburg and Grafton missions. (7) Representing himself, as he boasts of having done, by signs, grips, passwords, etc., as a Mason, for the purpose of deceiving members of the order and learning their secrets. (8) Of a sinful temper, by exhibiting spite and malice toward a brother minister, by threatening to write to the people at one of his appointments and use his influence to persuade them not to support him, if he joined a certain secret order. And,

WHEREAS, We deem him unfit to exercise the functions of a minister of the Gospel, and an injury to the M. P. church,

Be it resolved, that this quarterly conference object to the passage of his official character in the annual conference, and demand that he be brought to trial on the above specified and preferred charges.

J. F. COWAN, Chairman.
C. W. NEWLON, Sec., per Cowan.

The above bill of charges was presented against me at the session of the West Virginia annual conference of the Methodist Protestant church, held at St. Marys, from August 27th to September 2, 1879.

The first "whereas," omitting the abusive remarks, charges me with earnest Anti-masonic work; but it fails to specify any impropriety of language or manner in my opposition to lodgery. Surely if I used any unbecoming language, some quotation might be given.

The second "whereas" is altogether to my credit in my judgment. A convention of the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, which met at Worcester, Mass., in October, 1878, (nearly a month after my term of pastorship at Grafton had expired), elected me one of its Vice-presidents and published my name as Vice-president for West Virginia, and I have done what I could to disseminate the proper and Scriptural principles of that Association. I have done so in behalf of Christ and his church. Truth is always important, always worth contending for. Is it a crime to do right?

The third "whereas" charges me with seeking a nomination from a political convention. No such event took place in West Virginia. That was years ago, in Illinois, where I then lived. What a wonderful charge!

The next charge, that of immoral conduct, is most awful, and might do me great harm but for the specifications under it.

1. Is it slander to call the Masonic order a murderous institution? Not at all, unless it be slander to tell the truth.

2. Where, when and to whom did I state that none of the Freemasons could be believed under oath? I think I used the word "some" instead of "none." With that amendment, the statement, I believe, ought to pass muster.

3. In the Baal-worship specification, the charges avoid giving my words or any mention of the occasion calling them forth. My words were these:

"Freemasonry is, in my judgment, the image of the beast, and in its ceremonies has revived some of the most marked peculiarities of ancient Baal-worship; and how those who regard it as a modernized Baal-worship can fellowship it as Christians, is more than I understand."

The remark occurred in my sermon at Pruntytown on the first Sabbath of July last.

4. I was left "in the hands of the President" at the conference session of 1878, contrary to my written request; and the missionary money due me was not paid me. Both of these statements are strictly true; and truth is not slander.

THE REFORMED CHURCH.

HOLLAND, Mich.
Sept. 10, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The reform movement against secret societies and Freemasonry in particular is continually advancing. The circular sent out by the First Reformed church here, has been acted upon by several congregations. The Third church here, at a meeting of the Consistory, adopted a preamble and resolutions even stronger than those of the First, in spite of the opposition of its pastor. The Zeeland church also took an active step in petitioning its Consistory to join hand in hand with the First church here, to bring it before the Classis of Holland, and so on up to the General Synod. The churches of Rev. B. Van Ess, of North Holland, and Rev. J. F. Zwemer, of East Sangatuck, were a unit in demanding secretists to be excluded from the church. Several other churches have been heard from, and, although some of their pastors are opposed to the movement, owing to their receiving part of their salary from the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church, they are determined that secretists, or Baal worshipers, shall either renounce their adherence to lodge worships or be excommunicated from the church. The congregations are, with few exceptions, outspoken in their firm determination that when every prayerful, orderly, Christian method has been tried to accomplish this result and fails, other steps will be taken, as the Lord in his own good time will direct through his Spirit.

The Classis of Holland held its fall session here last week. After the usual routine business was finished, the reform question was introduced. Some very lengthy debates followed. The vote on the most important points stood sixteen for reform; six against; three noncommittal. The whole matter was finally referred to a special committee of five, to report at its next spring's session.

The Classis of Grand River, commencing its session to-day at Grand Rapids, will have to deal with the reform question also, as many churches and their pastors, prominent among whom is Rev. J. W. Te Winkel, at Kalamazoo, and his congregation are fully convinced that secretism and lodgery in the church is an offensive sin, and contrary to the revealed will of God.

Let every true child of God rejoice, and sincerely tender him our grateful thanks, and pray that he may continue to lead us to the honor and glory alone of his name; then march boldly on, and the sea shall divide! Yours in the Lord,

J. O. DOESBURG.

THE REFORMED CHURCH.

—In the United Presbyterian we find the following interesting facts: From the Acts and Proceedings of the General Synod which met in Newark, N. J., June, 1879, we obtain a very satisfactory view of the institutions, work and condition of the church. Its theological seminary at New Brunswick, N. J., is well known for its high character and usefulness. In the home mission work 95 missionaries have been employed, and 106 churches aided, in which 549 members were received on profession, and 297 on certificate. The receipts were $24,371. Its foreign missions are at Amoy, China; Arcot, India and Yokohama, Japan, and number 11 principal and 105 out-stations. The working force consists of fifteen foreign and six native ministers, and about 100 assistants and teachers of various grades. There are 33 churches with a membership of 2,045, and 51 schools, with 1,784 pupils, of whom ten are theological students. The receipts of the Board were $58,443, but the expenses were near $4,000 more, and the debt is $17,500. The statistical tables give the following items: Ministers, 546; churches, 509; members, 80,228; increase on profession, 3,548; on certificates, 1,737; decrease, 3,417; baptisms—infant, 4,138; adult, 1,284; scholars in Sabbath schools, 79,250; contributions for all purposes, $922,926—an average of $11.50 per member.

HOLINESS WORK.

—Bro. P. B. Williams of the U. B. church in Zanesville, Ind., writes to the Young Reformer of the blessing he received at a camp meeting near Columbia City. Another held on the fair grounds, at Warsaw, Ind., was a time of great power. This is his glowing report of it:

"This meeting begun August 11th, and lasted ten days. Hundreds were saved from inbred sin, and near two hundred were converted. Among the speakers were Dr. Foote, Bishop Weaver, Wm. Taylor, known as the California street preacher, and sister Foote, (colored lady,) of Cleveland, Ohio. This sister is a power for God, bold and fearless in the defense of truth. On Sabbath, in the midst of an audience of seven thousand, and over one hundred ministers, she appealed to the people in behalf of a pure church and ministry, using the most sublime yet powerful arguments against secret societies.

These meetings are death to lodgeism. I have heard more than a dozen in one little meeting get up and declare that the holiness movement had saved them from Masonry. One brother at Warsaw sought the blessing of 'heart purity' in a definite manner, and gave up Masonry, Oddfellowship and Knights of Pythias. Praise the Lord! Holiness and lodgeism, heart purity and lodgeism, are not congenial to each other. O for more 'Holiness unto the Lord,' and less conformity to the world. I am sorry to know that some of our own ministers are weakening in their opposition to lodge power at a time when our power is being felt by the powers of darkness, and when our power should all be utilized to make a death blow, if possible, against idolatry in the lodges. I wish each minister in the land would listen to and heed the voice of God, saying, 'Preach the preaching I bid thee.' Instead of this the world is saying, 'Flatter us, and we'll flatter you,' and thus the ministers are yielding to the demands of the world May the tidal wave of holiness spread until all are fully saved."

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Bro. P. B. Williams, Zanesville, Ind., closed a special four days' meeting in Wooster, Ind., about the middle of August. Twenty-five professed conversion and others received the blessing of Spirit.

—The West Nebraska conference meeting in Adams county, August 14th, passed the following, which shows a determination to maintain the position of the church against the orders:—Resolved, That we are more than ever in favor of our position on the subject of secret societies, and urge our presiding elders and preachers in charge of fields to carefully observe our cherished principles in the administration of Discipline, in disseminating information among our people on this subject."

—The Auglaize conference meeting at Liberty Chapel, Allen county, Indiana, reporetd 165 appointments and 156 organized churches with over 6,000 members. This body gave also a good testimony against secretism in the following:

"Resolved, 1. That we are glad to observe the marked interest which is being manifested in the opposition to organized secrecy by Christians of the various denominations.

"2. That we hail with delight the Christian philosopher, Joseph Cook, as a powerful reformer, and bid him God speed in his opposition to the lodge and other evils and errors.

"3. That we also recognize in the Christian Cynosure, of Chicago, Illinois, a powerful agency under God for the vindication of our long-cherished principles of opposition to Baal-worship, as represented in the lodges of Masons and kindred societies of our land."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The General Assembly at its May meeting took the following action: "Resolved, that the Assembly address a brief official letter, over the signature of its moderator and principal clerk, to all the churches, urging the parents to secure home study of God's Word, home preparation for the lessons of the Sabbath school, the regular attendance of their children, and, as far as possible, of themselves, upon the sessions of the school, and to bring their children with them to the house of God" The committee to whom the matter was referred say in their report: "Whatever exceptions may be taken to the Sabbath-school system, it is the best means which the church has yet devised for bringing its influence to bear as an organization for the instruction of the young. God has owned it and made it a blessing, and every consideration which should induce attendance at all should induce regularity of attendance."

—The Second Church, U. P., of Monmouth, Illinois, has had over $6,000 subscribed towards the erection of a new house of worship. The work will be begun soon.

—The Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette reports a ministerial convention held at Blairsville, Pa., in August, in which a number of pastors who were taking a vacation in the vicinity took part. Rev. R. B. Taggart of Mt. Pleasant, preached a sermon on "secret societies."

—Monmouth College opened with over eighty new students, and other evidences of enlargement and prosperity.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. J. P. Richards, who has been living at Bowensburgh, Ill., for a number of years, has removed to Belmont, Wis., where he is settled for a year. Bro. Richards is one of the staunchest of the reform ministers. His lecture work in this State and Iowa a few years ago will be remembered.

—The Union Park Congregational church in this city is in trouble between its deacons, the Scriptural managers of its temporalities and its trustees, which represent the alliance of the church with the world for the sake of business. The latter had rented the church to a theatrical manager, to reproduce on its platform the highly moral and sentimental play of Uncle Tom's Cabin. After the bargain was made the deacons met to consider it and were agreed in condemning such a use of their house of worship. It was too late, however, and all objectors had to fall to the rear while the play went on.

—In Michigan there are a total of 233 Congregational churches, ten of which have settled pastors, 180 have acting pastors, eight are supplied by other denominations, and forty-three are vacant; there are 196 ministers, fifty-six of whom are without charge; number of members, 17,142; additions during the year, 1,615, of whom 1,001 were on profession.

News of the Week.

—President Hayes is on a tour through the West which will extend to Kansas. He attended the opening of the Cincinnati Exposition last week and took a short trip into Kentucky. He is received with great popular favor.

—Considerable excitement was caused in Lincoln Park, this city, one day last week, by the appearance around the animal cage, of a large coach dog, evidently rabid. The beast sprung on keeper Richard Drisco, and bit him in the right hand, inflicting thirteen wounds, and then attacked, and also bit in the hand, Anthony Arnold. It is said several others were bitten, but their names could not be ascertained. The animal was eventually shot by a park gardener.

—A little three-year-old daughter of Wm. Price, of Aurora, Ill., was stolen from his home last February. He got on her track and after following over the States and the West Indies, he found her deserted on a vessel at Liverpool. It cost him all he was worth but he found his child.

—In the Chancery Court of Campbell County, Kentucky, Chancellor Menzies has rendered a written opinion that the lottery, commonly known as the Commonwealth Distributing Company of Kentucky, conducted by Thomas J. Commerford, secretary, and his associates, is an illegal enterprise, subject to suppression at any moment by grand juries, and that the purchasers of tickets have no security for the payment of prizes.

—All fears of yellow fever in Washington have subsided, and it is now generally believed in medical circles that it will not spread much outside of Memphis and New Orleans. Many do not believe that the National Board of Health has been of any service whatever, and an attempt will be made to abolish the whole concern as an expensive and useless affair. The danger is that Congress can be convinced that the present board has been useful, and continue the same as a permanent institution. A large number of fat salaries are involved, but that is all.

—Senator Blaine telegraphed last Tuesday evening the following from the Maine election:—The result of to-day's election may be briefly summed thus:—We have carried a large majority of the House of Representatives, and a majority of the Senate apparently, though not certainly. We have given our candidate for Governor, a plurality of more than 20,000 votes over the Greenback candidate, and 40,000 over the Democratic candidate. Whether we have given him an absolute majority over both will only be determined by further returns, and possibly by the official count. On joint ballot in the Legislature we shall have a large majority, thus controlling the Executive Council and the selection of all the State officers. The majority against us last year was over 13,000, equivalent to 60,000 majority in Illinois, to 80,000 in Pennsylvania, or to 100,000 in New York.

—The steamer Wieland, from Hamburg, brought $1,290,000 in French and German gold coin to New York last week. The Weser, from Bremen, brought $450,000 in foreign coin and bars. The Algeria, from Liverpool, brought $1,556,200, and the St. Laurent, from Havre, $1,595,600 in specie.

—A strange and fatal disease of the malarial fever type, is prevalent in the western part of Georgia. Out of fifty-eight persons attacked within the past three weeks only three have recovered. The disease has some characteristics of typhoid fever, but is more rapid and fatal. The tongue swells until the mouth cannot be closed, the victim chokes, and blood breaks from the ears, eyes and nostrils. The body is covered with large black spots as death approaches. The disease is spreading without appearing to be contagious, and there seems to be no way to check it.

FOREIGN.

—In a public speech at Exeter, Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said the outbreak in Afghanistan appeared to have been unpremeditated. So far as could be judged, the Ameer has been entirely fair to the British, and it was certain that the assistance he implored would not be refused. There seems to be great doubt, the Chancellor said, whether a prompt advance is possible.

—The London Times points out that the government of India is systematically concealing news concerning military instructions. Rumors, which are plentiful, must be accepted with reserve. All that is certain is that the plan of operations successfully followed last autumn will be repeated this. Three columns will follow the same routes, starting, however, from the scientific frontier instead of from the cantonment which in 1878 marked the boundary.

—A Hindoo attached to Major Cavagnari's mission at Cabul, who concealed himself during the attack by the mob, and who escaped at night, has arrived at Kiratza. He reports that the embassy was attacked in the morning and set on fire at noon, but that it held out until evening. He believes that all the others connected with the mission were killed.

—One of the greatest struggles ever known in the cotton trade will probably be entered upon soon in England. The employers decline to withdraw their notices of 5 per cent reduction in wages, and the spinners and weavers are determined to resist the reduction. If a strike ensues nearly all of the working people in the Ashton district will be involved and the strike will probably be a protracted one, as the spinners' union is amply provided with funds.

—The St. Petersburg Gazette advocates boldly the carrying out of what has been called the secret Anglo-Russian programme in Asia. This is to divide Afghanistan on the line of the Hindoo Koosh mountains, Russia taking the northern section and England the southern. It has been hinted that England was moving slowly in carrying out this programme, because the government was not sure of popular support. But the massacre at Cabul gives the government its opportunity.

—Twenty-eight million francs' worth of French gold left for the United States last week.

—The Pope has written an autograph letter to the Emporer of Germany, summing up the results of the late negotiations, and suggesting that the Emporer's direct intervention in the way of clemency is the only way to re-establish harmony. It is reported that Bismarck knew and approved of this step beforehand.

Brief Mention.

The oil wells in Pennsylvania pour out altogether about 50,000 barrels of oil daily.

The Erie canal was commenced in 1817, and completed in 1825. The main line measures 363 miles in length, and cost about $7,200,000.

In 1834 the table cutlery in this country was imported from England. To-day only small parcels can be found in the American market.

The cotton mills of Russia are reported to be running day and night, and have consumed fifty per cent. more of the staple this year than during the same period last year.

America raises wheat two thousands miles from her ports of export, conveys it by rail to the points of shipment, transports it over three thousand miles of ocean to Great Britain, and sells it at a shilling a bushel less than it costs the English to grow it.

England imports annually 130,000,000 pounds of raw hides (either dried or salted); 600,000 pounds of horns and hoofs; 7,400,000 pounds of cow hair; 9,200,000 pounds of bones, and 125,000,000 pounds of tallow. Of the hides the United States furnish 12,600,000 pounds.

Flour is imported duty free into Germany, England and Austria. In France, wheat flour pays a duty of 1 franc, 20 centimes per 100 kilogrammes (220 pounds); in Italy, the duty amounts to about 70 cents per sack of 280 pounds. In Russia, the duty is about 50 cents per 270 pounds.

A merchant, sitting in his office in South street, New York, recently received an answer to his dispatch sent to Shanghai, six hours previously. Thirty thousand miles in six hours is good time, even for the telegraph. The charge to Shanghai is $2.80 per word; to Yokohama $3.06; but the code, or cipher, is so well systemized that a single word serves for a dozen when transcribed.

Over fifty patents have been obtained for cow-milkers, thirteen in England and forty in America. These machines have been divided into three classes. First, tube-milkers; second, sucking machines; third, mechanical hand-milkers. The first are tappers, the second suckers, and the third squeezers and strippers. Some devices are formed of combinations of these classes. As yet no one machine can be considered a success, as, notwithstanding the apparent success in single milkings, the constant use seems to forward a tendency towards drying off the cow. From our own experience, we are disposed to think that no machine which does not jar the udder in a manner similar to the bunting of the calf or the practice of the hand milking will be a success.—Ex.

A Boston merchant writes to the Commercial Bulletin that the highest salesman's salary that he ever knew of, was $30,000, which was in the height of war time. He also says: "I know a man who for years received annually $17,000 for his labors as salesman. I think it would puzzle him to-day to pay his board bill regularly. Within a few days I saw a man who received at one time a salary of $10,000. He was well up in his trade, but to-day he is simply a beer drinker. I have known parties who were in the receipt yearly of from five to twelve thousand dollars. I have known many such as salesmen, and small indeed is the proportion of those who profited by their talents permanently. They aped in their living the class who possess solid and accumulated wealth, or grew indolent in gathering their laurels, only to see those they possessed fall to the ground beyond power of replacement. The slower, more moderate, less brilliant fellows generally fortify themselves better against fate, and make their exits from their accustomed spheres with more fortitude and dignity.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

David Mc Dilllu Six Chapters treats of 1 "Their Antiquity."—2 "Their Secrecy."—3 "Oaths and Promises."—4 "Profaneness."—5 "Their Exclusiveness."—6 "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

Topics of the Time.

President Hayes reached Chicago on Monday on his way to Kansas. His reception was cordial but no public demonstration of such enthusiasm and enormous proportions as during the fire tournament of last year was attempted. Indeed about all the enthusiasm of the nation seems to have gone like a rush of the blood to San Francisco, to welcome the return of Gen. Grant after his two years' banqueting with the great ones round the wide circuit of the world. He was landed amid the thunder of all the cannon that could stand a charge of powder from the city, the batteries and the vessels in the harbor, American and foreign, amid the diapason of the bells, and the hoarse roar of two hundred thousand human voices from the hills, and wharves, and streets, and boats that filled the bay. If the correspondents are not crazy, San Francisco has given the ex-President all the welcome one man can endure from the nation, and which should satisfy him in respect to popular favors for the remainder of his life with the chance of a third term thrown in.

In a speech at an agricultural fair last week Lord Beaconsfield promulgated some opinions which are no credit to his intelligence, or else he is in deep anxiety respecting the condition of the husbandmen of England. The greatest apprehension, he said, was felt in this country because we cannot compete with Canada with our high taxes and wages. "Since the surrender of the territories of the Hudson Bay Company, Canada had become possessed of an illimitable and fertile wilderness. Nearly all the chief landholders in the extreme Western States of America had sold out, gone to that wilderness, and begun the work of cultivation there. He had heard on high authority that Canada expected to outstrip the United States in competition of the European markets. He, therefore, advised the farmers of England not to be too precipitate. Another high authority had informed him that under all the circumstances the markets of the United States would be distributed, and that, with an impulsive character of humanity in the United States, the Canadian wilderness would soon be occupied by millions." The eminent premier must have sat too long at a banquet before that speech, and had become confused in his data. If he knows no more of Europe than of America he ought, in mercy to the nation he represents, to resign without delay.

The decision of a newly made judge in the courts of this city against the State militia law will soon be tested. A man drawn for the jury in the same court claimed excuse because of his membership in a local militia company. Of course his excuse was not granted, and he will seek a higher tribunal to settle the point. The decision against the State law drew from the communists such exulting sentiments as these: The Republicans have their military organization, the Democrats have theirs, and the socialists must have theirs. The effect of it would be to indicate anew that socialism was aggressive and that society must act on the defensive. "There will be less backing done in the future," said one leader, "and socialism will continue its warfare upon the customs of society with greater success. As for myself, and I believe I may speak for other socialists, I have no respect for ninety-nine one hundredeths of the laws that are now in force, but I propose to obey them until we can overturn them by such means as we have, the militia law or in some similarly peaceful way." An emphatic platform! If our law-abiding people allow it to prevail through the ignorance of the foreign poor, they cannot complain of insufficient warning.

The Zulu affair is over so far as the resistance of that brave savage is concerned, for he has been captured and his forces scattered and beaten. Whatever England may have gained in territory from these wild tribes is not a tithe of what she has lost in self-respect, and in the respect of the Christian world for beginning a needless war and carrying it on in a barbarous manner. Cetywayo, the Zulu king, was hunted like a wolf, and no overtures were permitted from him or his friends in his behalf. His own tribe were encouraged to treat him like an outlaw or a wild beast to be shot at sight. His scattered bands were destroyed with dynamite or smoked out of the caves where they were secreted to be shot. This is the glory of a war that has cost England with her starving thousands twenty-two and a half million of dollars.

The Catholic Review quotes approvingly the following on the New York churches:—"No Catholic pulpit is vacant, and no Catholic priest is without his daily work to do in the army of the faithful; while some dozens of Protestant churches are without a pastor, and half a dozen others are involved either in local quarrels or in personal scandals which are a reproach to the cause of Christ. Our brethren of the Roman hierarchy are governed by a hand which is generally strong enough to suppress and settle its quarrels, and to keep the scandals from becoming the property of the public." There is a very deep significance in this last sentence. The troops of priestly misdemeanors and quarrels between the altar and the benches are kept dark, though they may outnumber those of the Protestants two to one. Only when some gigantic fraud explodes like a volcano the tough crust of Jesuit secrecy is broken through. Such was the Purcell affair in Cincinnati. The grand effort to raise three or four millions to pay off this defalcation does not keep up its enthusiasm and the shrewdest advisers counsel bankruptcy proceedings to throw off the whole matter from the shoulders of the priest.

Protestantism in Spain.

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

Attention has recently been called to the religious condition of Spain by several resident Protestant ministers. When a child, we were familiar with the intention of the Apostle Paul, as expressed in a treasured letter of his to the Roman Christians. "When, therefore, I have performed this, I will come by you into Spain." At that time the Peninsula from the Pyrenees to the Straits of Gibraltar, was divided into three Roman provinces, bearing the common name of Spain. On the release of the Apostle from his long imprisonment in Rome, he crossed over to Spain and there preached Christ wherever opportunity presented, till a Christian church sprang up, flourished, and spread its invigorating influences throughout the Peninsula. Its vestiges appear early on the page of history. Not later than 304, A. D., just before the Diocleian persecution broke out, the bishops of the primitive Christian church met in conference, to consult on the progress of their work. All the important towns and cities of Spain sent representatives to the conference. Many Spanish Christians, during that persecution, went to swell the number of the souls beneath the altar.

Since the establishment of the Papacy until the present day, its deadly Upas shade has rested over the land, blighting every bud of spiritual life, and curbing the aspirations of the people after a better state of things. Until very recently a sort of ecclesiastical police, with a legalized intolerance, have exercised a despotism of the most appalling kind. Darkness has rested over the land. The outlook is now brighter than it has been for ages. Christianity as a star of hope, in spite of the scandals of the palace, the venality of court and cabinet, and an outrage of justice in the tribunals, is again rising and shedding its benign influence over Spain. We must, however, say that except in cases where absolutely crushed by the hand of power, the people have always recoiled against the abounding falsehood and oppression of the court and church. We must not charge all Spaniards as persecutors, or as being favorable to the atrocities of the Inquisition. At the first, the Inquisition had to fight hard for an admission into the country, then to struggle hard for the ascendancy, and always to encounter a large share of public abhorrence.

The British and Foreign Bible Society, has, with varying fortune, striven hard for a long series of years to introduce the Bible into Spain. We have heard some of its agents relate their experiences in the work, and have known some English Protestants who have resided there. We remember an amusing story of a friend, an engineer, whose house was searched by the Spanish police, for heterodox books. Being comparatively ignorant of the English language, after carefully turning over the leaves of Dr. Adam Clarke's commentary, they left it under the impression that it was a treatise on engineering.

Since 1868 tens of thousands of Spanish Bibles have been scattered through the land, and liberty of worship has become an established principle of Spanish legislation. The people for ages have suffered from bad government, bad laws and bad religion; and, as a result since religious freedom has been so far secured, a reaction has taken place, and doubtless there is less reverence for sacred things and a deeper seated cynical infidelity now than existed half a century ago. Deteriorating influences abound still; but on the other hand, we must not lose sight of the fact that there is an increasing multitude of cases, where a new evangelical sentiment is growing up. Many have learned the way of life and are steadfastly walking therein, while many others are asking for "the old paths and the good way."

The Methodists are doing a good work in Spain, and have already the earnest of an effective native ministry. Proper and timely means must be taken for its preparation, and it will then become a source of strength. Schools are being started for the young of both sexes, from which in due time class-leaders, local preachers, and an army of Christian workers may be expected to rise. Those who are living on the spot, and are engaged in the various departments of Christian work are the most hopeful respecting the future of the country. The movement is not confined to any particular locality, but is national.

We are glad to find that British Protestants are taking up the work, and trust that 'ere long spiritual darkness and bad government will alike give way to a brighter and better state of things.

Free Missions.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

I find two objections urged against our free mission movement. First, that it will only develop another sect; and secondly that it is unnecessary.

The first objection comes from those who belong to and believe in sects, at least in their own, and while they do not profess to find any Scripture warrant for a division in the church, yet hold that their own sect is essential to the greatest prosperity of the cause of Christ. If their doctrine is true and if sects are under any circumstances admissable, then surely a sect that should have for its object the purification of the church from the contamination and control of the lodge might be a very innocent and a very useful institution.

But is it true that a missionary society free from the lodge would be a sect or tend to promote one? The Associated Churches of Christ cannot become a sect,—First, because there is no intention or desire to make them one, while many individuals and some churches connected with this movement protest against sects and would in no wise be connected with one.

2nd. These associated churches are diverse in doctrine and government, and could never be consolidated without a radical change which no one proposes to make.

3rd. Experience shows that organizations formed to oppose a specific form of evil can last only so long as the evil lasts to which they were opposed. The anti-slavery societies died with the death of slavery. The Free Presbyterian church ceased to be when slavery was abolished; and so would the Wesleyan Methodist had all the objects of a separate existence been accomplished. The Baptist Free Missionary Board never became a sect, nor did the American Missionary Association. The former fulfilled the object of its organization and then ceased to be a separate body. The latter has done, and is still doing a noble work, but is no more a sect than when it was organized, nor is there the slightest reason to believe that a missionary society divorced from the lodge would ever become one except in the sense of leading Christians to be separate from the world, a separation greatly to be desired.

The other objection is that such a missionary organization is unnecessary to do the work we have at heart. It is true that the Wesleyans, United Brethren, United and Reformed Presbyterians and others have missionary societies that are free from the lodge. We propose in no way to interfere with them, but rather to invoke God's blessing upon them. But the great mass of Christians are not, nor ever will be identified with them. The fact that they do not even propose to unite with each other is reason enough why none of them should absorb the Christian world. If Christians outside of these denominations ever have a missionary society divorced from the lodge it must be by each denomination having a separate free missionary society, or by the free men and women in all of them uniting to form one that shall be both undenominational and free.

None of our great missionary organizations are free to make war on this modern Baalism. Organized to oppose heathenism abroad they make no protest against lodge idolatry either at home or in the churches organized in foreign lands. The American Home Missionary Society has in commission a large number of Freemasons. Its agent in Iowa lately wrote to a faithful pastor that he did not think that one so much opposed to secret societies would be wanted by any church in Iowa. The home missionary agent in Wisconsin said publicly that he had been in the Masonic lodge and "never saw any evil in it." The Presbyterian and Baptist Home Missionary societies are similar in this respect, while the M. E. church has a majority of its ministers who belong to the lodge.

It is plain then that to sustain these missionary societies is to sustain Freemasonry, and to help build up a false and corrupt religion. It is a duty we owe to ourselves, to the church, and to Christ, to stop giving our money to the adherents of the lodge and give it rather to those who "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them." If there are any existing missionary societies that are doing this work let them be sustained, but if we do not give to them, let us have our missionary society to which we can give without doing evil that good may come.

A Contrast.

One cannot read D'Aubigne's history of the religious reformation in England without being forcibly struck with the novelty of his style. You are rapidly taken from incident to incident with a satisfaction that while you are being instructed you are also interested and pleased. Notice here the poetry of his diction: "In the county of Lincoln, on the shores of the North Sea, along the fertile banks of the Humber, Trent, and Witham, and on the slopes of the smiling hills, dwelt many peaceful Christians,—laborers, artificers, and shepherds, who spent their days in toil, in keeping their flocks, in doing good, and in reading the Bible. The more the Gospel light increased in England the greater was the increase in the number of these children of peace. These 'just men,' as they were called, were devoid of human knowledge, but they thirsted for the knowledge of God."

These "just men" constituted one of the blessed "secret societies" of the days of the great reformation. Their enemies, the priests of the church of Rome, were seeking to take their lives because they would read the Word of God; but they were determined to live as long as they could while they also enjoyed the study of the Scriptures. They would meet in each other's houses on Sundays and holidays, and sometimes spend a whole night in reading and studying the Word. If a stranger should come among them "fear of the priests and of the fagot made them dumb."

"At the marriage of a daughter of the aged Durdant, one of their patriarchs, the wedding party met secretly in a barn, and read the whole of one of St. Paul's epistles."

Fear of death caused these souls thristing after righteousness to assemble themselves in secret. To join their society one need only indicate a holy desire to study God's Word. What a contrast between this and modern secret societies! But I need not show forth the contrast, for too well is known the difference. What do men connect themselves with secret societies in our day for? To get more good? Is not the most ostensible object with them worldly gain? And with this they hope to get a name and be better known in the community. Then, too, there is such a novelty, when traveling, in taking the hand of a stranger and finding in him a covenanted brother, be he saint or sinner. I do not know but there is a smack of novelty in the way some learn to deceive their brethren. You know that the vulgar, and especially the "old fogies," must have the wool pulled over their eyes; and so it is occasionally pulled over. "A tree is known by its fruits," says Christ.

Now, why may I not get as much good, and do as much good, and be as good, as there is a possibility of getting, doing, and being? But where is the ultimate source of goodness? Is it not Christ and his church? Suppose there is some goodness in a secret society; why go there when we may go to the fountain-head, the church?

I was once told by a minister of the Gospel that the reason he connected himself with secret societies was that he desired to go there, among worldly men, and wield an influence for good. Now this certainly is a good motive for joining a secret society. (And let me here say that this minister declared to me that he belonged to all the leading secret societies.) But what we all may know of the character of secret societies it is evident that the best we can say of this assumed motive is that it partakes largely of the Jesuitical principle, "Do evil that good may come."

A father and his son started out on a journey with an ass. The son rode and the father walked alongside. They had not gone far when the son was ridiculed for riding while his father had to walk. The father bade the son dismount and he would ride. Soon the father was made fun of that he, strong and robust, should ride and compel his son to walk. The father then bade the son get on before him. Soon they were ridiculed for both riding the poor ass. The poor ass had need to be carried himself, they remarked. At once the father bade the son with him dismount, and they would carry the ass. They did so; but on crossing a bridge the poor ass, unused to such service, kicked himself off into the river below and was drowned. It is thus that in whatever circumstances we seek to please everybody we do lose in the end. When once you become a member of a secret society you begin seeking to please every one of the fraternity. Talk to any one about the welfare of his soul? No. You must be liberal in your views; so liberal that you must even admit that the lodge will take all the "brothers" to heaven. The good you wish to do your fellowmen financially you can do in the church, and thus doing it in the name of Christ, as did the Christians of old, you will receive a rich reward.

Brethren, you who belong to these societies, do you not conscientiously feel that you could do more lasting good for Christ if you disclaimed every other society but his? Do you not feel yourself weighed down by a weight that weakens your ability for spiritual usefulness? Be candid with God and your own immortal soul, and for the sake of the souls around you "present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

The Scriptures tell us that God is a jealous God. If a man is jealous of his wife is it not because he fears that she is giving to another man the love that belongs exclusively to himself? Now, God's command is that you give him all your love. And when you have given him all, you must regret that you cannot give him more—more time, more talent, more money. Our probationary state is too short to allow of the dividing of our time. We need to use all our time here in preparing for the glories and blessed service of heaven. If we do not enjoy the service of God here below so as to give it all our time, all our thoughts and meditations, may we not entertain fears that this will cripple our capabilities for the enjoyment of his service in heaven?

"Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them [images] nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God." When one belongs to a worldly society he is giving it service that should be given to God and his church. Then he sets up an image in his heart that should not be there.—R. W. Fryer, in Telescope.

In a sermon at Baltimore, recently, on the Lord's Prayer, Mr. Moody touched incidentally upon the hard times. "We hear," he said, "a great deal of talk about hard times, but what has caused them? Sin. Look at the great amount of money that is spent in this great country for whisky alone. We don't say to God, 'Give us this day our daily whisky,' do we? I tell you there are mints of money spent for whisky that ought to feed children's mouths with bread. The fact of the case is, this nation has been too prosperous. The Jews, the chosen people of God, never could stand prosperity. As soon as they got rich, they went to worshipping idols, and whenever they got fat, they began to kick against God. I fear American morals suffer in proportion as the nation prospers.

The Sermon.

THE GOOD MAN IN BAD COMPANY; OR, SPECULATIVE FREEMASONRY A WICKED AND DANGEROUS COMBINATION.

[A sermon delivered in Belchertown, Mass., July 8, 1830, by David Pease, pastor of the Baptist church in Conway.]

Shouldst thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? Therefore, is wrath upon thee from before the Lord.
2 Chron. xix. 2.

These are the words of Jehu, a prophet of the Lord, who met Jehosaphat the king of Judah as he returned from his dangerous enterprise with Ahab against the Syrians at Ramoth-Gilead. Jehosaphat is justly numbered among the pious kings of the Jews. There were good things found in him; he took away the idolatrous groves and prepared his heart to seek the Lord. He however had his faults. He seems to have had a strong propensity for popularity. It also appears he wanted decision in resisting the temptation laid before him by the wicked king of Israel; therefore, contrary to the instructions of Micaiah and doubtless the remonstrances of his own conscience, he engaged in an unrighteous war at Ramoth-Gilead. His great fault, and the sin for which he is so severely reproved in the text, is, his loving, helping and acting in concert with idolatrous Ahab. I am as thou art.

It is illegal, unscriptural, and anti-Christian, for the good and bad, for the believer and infidel, to form one common interest and maintain a common fellowship for each other; "for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord."

Now no community boasts of so much charity, brotherly love, and universal fellowship, as the Masonic society. It glories in making no distinction in its fellowship, on account of religion. The Mahometan with his Koran, the Hindoo with his Shaster, and the Deist with his light of nature, are all brought upon a level with the Christian and his Bible; and if but good Masons, they are alike entitled to a seat in the Celestial Lodge above.

I am ashamed, and regret to say, that for a number of years I have held an affinity with that institution. I have in vain sought its light, I have foolishly worn its high-sounding titles, I have wickedly taken its illegal and unscriptural oaths, and frequently witnessed, what now appears to me, its profane and blasphemous ceremonies; but am at present fully convinced, that Speculative Freemasonry is an unlawful, dangerous, and wicked combination.

The first moral defect which I shall attempt to point out, is, that it is a system of falsehood. It pretends to great antiquity. It is usual for Masons in their public documents, to date the commencement of Masonry with the creation of the world. But this deception has been fully exploded, and it is now found, that after making the moderate deduction of five thousand seven hundred and ten years from Masonic statements, we come at the true age of this ancient and honorable fraternity.

The devotees of this institution have with equal affrontery, arrogated to themselves all the good and great, from Adam to the beloved Evangelist, as the worthy and zealous patrons of the order. But not satisfied with an attempt to sanctify the institution by the names of these venerable patriarchs, inspired prophets, wise kings, and holy apostles, they have profanely associated with these Scripture worthies, the names of pagan priests, idolatrous kings, and heathen philosophers, all meeting upon the level, and alike entitled to a place in the Grand Lodge above. But none of those ancient worthies make so conspicuous a show in the vain-glorious annals of Masonic tradition, as Solomon, king of Israel, Hiram, king of Tyre, and poor Hiram the widow's son. By these ancient grand masters, we are sagely told, Masonry was organized, and brought into its present beautiful form. Upon the tragical death of the latter, is founded the third, or what is called the sublime* degree of a Master Mason.

This, like several other degrees, pretends to originate from circumstances which never did exist, and are in contradiction to the Scripture.

It pretends to be a system of morality and charity, and by this deceives the unsuspicious. Its principles have been said to be as pure as the air of heaven. It has been called the "handmaid of religion." It has been represented as of heavenly origin, and its precepts equally precious with Christianity itself. If so, why not answer every purpose of Christianity? These pretensions have been thrown out as a bait, and have allured but too many within its serpentine coils.

I admit, that Masonry makes an outward show of morality and the virtues of Christianity, so far as they would seem to serve her selfish purposes. But I ask, are we indebted to Masonry for these virtues, or to the Bible? To the Bible, no doubt; and Christianity would have inculcated them in her own humble way, wherever her voice had been heard, without the aid of blinder or cable-tow, square or compass, plumb line or level, hod or trowel, chisel or mallet, and most of all, without the influence of those horrid and abominable oaths, the mere recital of which, is enough to make a savage shudder.

The Masonic institution has long been known as a secret society. It is so, and its greatest secret is its principles; its real, not its pretended principles. Its real principles are to be found, only in its unlawful oaths and bloody penalties. I therefore consider the Masonic institution to be based upon laws and usages which require the taking of human life, contrary to the laws of God and our country; and as it is to the obligations we are to look, for the principles of the order, and not to what Masons have published to the world as such, I shall present a few of the penalties of the Masonic code. In the first degree, the poor blind candidate is required to bind himself to the faithful observance of all its injunctions, "Under the less no penalty, than to have his throat cut across, his tongue torn out by the roots, and his body burned," etc. In the third degree, the candidate binds himself "Under no less penalty than to have his body severed in the midst, and divided to the north and south; his bowels burned to ashes in the center," etc. In the sixth, or what is called the Most Excellent Master's degree, he binds himself "under no less penalty, than to have his breast torn open, his heart and vitals taken from thence, and exposed upon the dung hill to rot," if ever he should violate any part of his obligation. The Royal Arch Mason binds himself "under the no less penalty, than to have his skull smote off, and his brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun," should he violate any part of his obligation. In the order of knighthood called Knight Templar, there is a still more appalling discovery of the barbarous and profane nature of this unlawful and wicked combination. In the lower degrees, the Mason trifles with his liberty and life: but in this, the precious soul, for which the son of God suffered and died, on which he placed a value far above the whole world, is here bartered away, and doomed to suffer a double damnation, that is, the punishment of his own sins, in addition to those of another, as the penalty of the known violation or transgression of any obligation that he has taken, or shall at that time, or at any future period take, in relation to any degree of Masonry, or order of knighthood. Here it may be seen, that the higher and lower degrees form one chain, "any degree heretofore taken, taken at this time, or shall hereafter be taken, in relation to any degree in Masonry, or order of knighthood." That is, if a Christian professor, or a minister of the gospel, should have the honor of receiving the degree of Thrice Illustrious Knight, as very many have, and should know that a brother in the same church with himself, or a brother in the ministry, had, from the conviction of duty to his God and country, exposed any of the secrets of the Masonic combination, he is bound, directly in opposition to the laws of the Lord Jesus Christ, "under the no less penalty, than to suffer all the punishment of his own sins, in addition to the punishment of the sins of the soul that once animated the skull," out of which he drank wine, "To take the most decided measures to bring him to the strictest and most condign punishment, agreeably to the rules and usages of the ancient fraternity." And if it should not be practicable or safe to Morganize his body, then to "point him out" as a perjured wretch, or "an unworthy vagabond; by opposing his interest, deranging his business, transferring his character after him wherever he may go, and exposing him to the contempt of the whole fraternity and the world, but of the illustrious order more especially, during his whole natural life," and if possible, Morganize his character.

*The sublimity of this degree consists in a mock ceremony of murdering a man, and then burying and raising him. In some lodges they make use of a coffin, and the candidate is actually incased in it. In this manner the most solemn and awful things are trifled with in Masonry.

If more were necessary to prove the proposition, that the institution is based upon laws and usages that require the taking of human life contrary to the laws of God and our country, they could be produced in abundance from the traditions of the order. In addition to this, we have a witness in the abduction, and merciless Masonic murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan, that cannot be mistaken. Not that we suppose his execution to have been a solitary instance, in which Masonry has taken upon itself the prerogative of inflicting death in violation of the laws of God and legal authority. How many have fallen victims to this self-created power, existing in our midst, and trampling upon our dearest rights, will only be known in that great day of accounts, when God shall make inquisition for blood, and bring to light the hidden things of darkness. In addition to the Masonic murder of Morgan, there is now but little doubt, that the author of Jachin and Boaz in England, Smith the re-publisher in New England, and Murdock of New York, who was supposed to have leaked out some of its precious light, suffered death agreeably to the rules and regulations of the ancient fraternity.

I have stated, that the great secret in Masonry was its real principles; and that its real principles were to be found in its oaths or obligations. The secret of Masonic secrets is its unlawful oaths. This I think will appear from the following consideration; that there is nothing in the Masonic mysteries, which Masons are so anxious to keep from public view, as their oaths. Now all who are acquainted with Masonry know, that Masonic oaths might be published, and read by the world, and any one who wished to become a member, could with the utmost safety examine, compare, and try them by the Bible and the laws of his country, and determine for himself in the moments of calm reflection, whether there was anything in them contrary to his religion or allegiance. All this might be done without the least danger of exposing any of the signs, words, tokens, grips or secrets, unless the oaths are the grand secret of the order. If they are not, why unwilling to publish them, and let them have a fair investigation? The truth is, they were never made for examination; they could not pass the ordeal. No considerate person, after such an examination, would consent to take them upon himself; and more than this, an exhibition of these oaths to the public, would most surely produce an excitement, such as has been produced by the late disclosure. Here lies the great secret of Freemasonry.

It is the unlawful oaths and profane ceremonies which produce the alarm. By these illegal oaths, property, liberty and life are put in jeopardy, and this alarms the public. The ground of this fear may be seen from an examination of the several points to which a Mason is sworn. A few of which I will notice; from which it will be easily perceived, that those who feel these oaths obligatory might be led to conceal the crimes of another, when it would be his duty not to conceal them. A point in the Master Mason's oath reads thus: "I promise and swear, that a Master Mason's secrets, given to me in charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, when communicated to me; murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election." In the explanation of the five points of fellowship, secresy is enjoined without any exception. "Breast to breast, that you should keep the Master Mason's secrets, when given to you in charge as such, as secure and inviolable in your breast, as they were in his own, before communicated to you." In the Royal Arch degree, a companion swears that he "will aid and assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when he is engaged in any difficulty; and espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from present difficulty, if in his power, whether he be right or wrong." He also swears that he "will keep the secrets of a companion Royal Arch Mason, murder and treason not excepted."* This however is varied in some chapters, and perhaps now in most instances. But the variation, as far as I have been acquainted, is but a little improvement upon the original. The improvement, if an improvement, is, all the secrets of a companion Royal Arch Mason without exception.

If such a combination to aid and assist in wickedness, is not inconsistent with morality, religion, and justice, what is so? If such an affinity is not helping the ungodly, we may look in vain for it. Of what use are laws, while so many can make them void by such a combination? This wickedness has been cloaked under the mantle of charity; and it would seem that it has been thought, that charity, in this way, could hide a multitude of sins. But what is the charity of the institution? Is it the pure and unostentatious charity of the Gospel? I have no doubt but there are men belonging to the order, who are charitable, men too of the best principle, who would wish to do right in all things. There are men connected with the institution whom I highly respect, and to whom I am indebted for many favors, kindnesses, which I hope never to forget. It is not my design to indulge myself in bitterness against Masons as men in an individual capacity. It is the institution to which I am opposed; an unholy alliance with a bad thing. It is like good Jehosaphat's joining affinity with wicked Ahab. Good men in bad company. Good men bound by a covenant of death and hell* to aid and assist bad men in their cause whether right or wrong, and to oppose, defame, and injure, in character, business, property, and life, those that expose it. This is not charity, but selfishness. Does not the obligation which the Mason enters into in relation to the fraternity, destroy the benevolence of the act of giving to his needy brother? What is it but the fulfilling of his covenant? a covenant backed with a bloody penalty. If he does not give, he will have his throat cut. It is not charity; we could be charitable without such engagements; at least the Saviour did not teach charity in this way. If what has been stated be correct, it must appear to every unprejudiced mind, that Freemasonry is an unlawful, dangerous, and wicked combination. "Every association," says a European historian, "which has mystery for its basis, or an oath of secrecy, is a league of robbers against society; a league divided in its very bosom into knaves and dupes, or in other words, into agents and instruments; and it is thus we ought to judge of those modern clubs, which, under the names of Illuminists, Freemasons, etc., infest Europe."

Observation and experience but too well confirm the correctness of this fact. Freemasonry, like the sweeping plagues of Egypt, had come up and filled the whole land, infesting all our religious and civil institutions, perverting justice, and threatening our liberties. It had seated itself in the temple of the Most High. It had nearly secured the reins of government. It had seized with such an iron grasp the press, that essential medium of information, that scarcely was there one to be found, who had disposition or courage enough to publish to the world its acts of violence, or oppose its lawless encroachments; and had not the slumbers of the people been timely broken by a cry from the West, Freemasonry, in all probability would soon have been in America, what it was in France in the reign of anarchy and cruelty. If a doubt remain upon this subject, I think it must be removed by listening a moment to its proud and insulting language uttered by one of the true sons of the order a little before the Batavia outrage, who boastingly defied not only his own country, but the world in arms, as unable to stop its proud march. "What" says the orator, "is Masonry now? It comprises men of all ranks, wealth, office, and talent, in power, and out of power, and that in every place where power is of any importance. It fears nothing from violence, either public or private, for it has every means to learn it in season, to counteract, defeat and punish it. Good or bad, the world must take it as it is. Think of it, laugh at it, hate it, or despise it. Still it is not only what I have told you, but it will continue to be, and the world in arms cannot stop it." This was the menacing language of speculative Freemasonry in 1825. But what is Masonry now, 1830. How art thou fallen. O thou proud boaster. Thy pomp is brought down to the grave. The noise of thy gavel dies away upon the ear with the dying groans of Morgan.

(To be continued.)

*When I was exalted, it was administered to me as above, that is, murder and treason not excepted, and I hesitated; but the administrator told me that they had all so received it, and that I could advance no further without taking the oath in that way; and they gave me an explanation, but it was far from being satisfactory. The explanation, as nearly as I can recollect, was, that I was not bound to any but worthy companions, and a worthy companion would not be guilty of murder or treason. I was also told that as we advanced we became more and more bound to each other, or to that amount.

THE WISCONSIN STATE MEETING.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

EVANSVILLE, Rock Co., Wis.

The Wisconsin Anti-secret Association met in Grange Hall at 3 o'clock P. M., Sept. 2, 1879. Bro. F. J. Crowder of the U. B. church opened the first prayer and conference meeting. A number of the brethren gave us short, stirring speeches, and our sitting together this afternoon was profitable to all present.

In the evening Bro. J. P. Stoddard gave us one of the most soul-stirring lectures to which we had ever listened; the effect of his lecture was to thrill all classes and cause the anti-secret force to redouble their efforts against the terrible evil of secret societies.

Wednesday morning after a short prayer and conference meeting led by Bro. Hinman, some communications from brethren who could not be with us were read, bringing cheer and comfort with them. After the reading of the communications Bro. Hinman spoke to us a few minutes on the subject of missions. About one hour and a half was then spent in hearing short lectures. Bro. Edward Mathews of Brooklyn, Mich., gave us in his own peculiar way some items of his experience as a reformer, and it was easy to be seen that he won all hearts as he carried the house with his eloquent and thrilling address. Bro. Mathews has won many friends in his first visit among us.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Devotional exercises led by Bros. Mathews, Rathbun and Crowder.

A communication was then read by Bro. Barlow, from the First Baptist church of Menomonie, also one from S. E. Orvis and Stephen Wright.

Bro. Harris was chosen delegate to the National Anti-secret Convention. Bros. Browne and Whitmore were elected delegates to the Iowa State convention. Bro. Barlow was chosen to represent us by letter in all the State conventions except Iowa and Illinois. Bro. Seth Austin was chosen as delegate to the Illinois State convention.

Some little time was spent in hearing from the delegates of last year; after which the committee on permanent organization being ready to report the following named persons were elected to fill the offices of the Association the ensuing year:

President, Rev. J. L. Barlow of Menomonie.
Rec. Secretary, Rev. Wm. Golden, Martin, Green county.
Cor. Secretary, Rev. F. J. Crowder, Port Andrews.
Treasurer, M. R. Britten, Vienna, Walworth county.
1st Vice-President, Rev. E. Collins, New London.
2nd Vice-President, Capt. W. Wilson, Menomonie.
3rd Vice-President, Andrew Stevens, Footville.
4th Vice President, J. W. Wood, Baraboo.
5th Vice-President, J. Bancroft, Monroe, Green county.
6th Vice-President, Rev. E. L. Harris, Delevan.

Our president gave us a stirring inaugural address as he took his seat for the coming year.

Bro. H. H. Hinman then gave us a lecture followed by some spicy and interesting remarks by Rev. D. C. Talbott of the U. B. church, Bros. Golden, Mathews, Rathbun and Browne gave us short addresses which were followed by a short and deeply interesting speech by sister Mattie Harvey of the U. B. church.

Some time was then spent in enrolling the names of those who wished to be identified in this movement against organized sin, and fifty-two names were taken. After a few remarks by Bro. E. Collins on the evils of Freemasonry in the family, the meeting adjourned until 7:30 in the evening at which time Rev. D. P. Rathbun worked the first degree of Masonry before a large and attentive audience and with the help of God he made it appear nearly as ridiculous as it really is.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The brethren came together at an early hour seemingly anxious to get to work. After the convention was called to order by the president, Bro. Golden led the devotional exercises, and then business proceeded by calling for the report of the committee on State Lecturer. The committee not being ready to report a few moments time was granted them to prepare their report. The interval was occupied by Bro. Hinman by presenting to us the subject of Free Missions, and he presented the following resolution which was adopted by the convention:

Resolved, That our abiding hope is in the faithful preaching of the Gospel uncontaminated and uncontrolled by organized secretism and therefore we earnestly commend to the sympathies and material support of our friends (who are in their own ecclesiastical relations compelled to give what they do give for missionary purposes where their money must go either directly or indirectly for the support of Masonry) the Christian Commission on Free Missions organized at Wheaton, Ill., Nov. 20-22, 1878.

The committee on State Lecturer now returned and recommended an informal ballot in order to ascertain the mind of the Association as to who shall be their State Agent and Lecturer. Such a ballot was taken and resulted in the election of Bro. Edward Mathews of Michigan. Arrangements were then made to secure a salary as far as possible, and our efforts met with some considerable success.

Bro. F. J. Crowder was then called for and gave us a short sermon on the omens of coming time. Bro. C. is one of our sound and reliable men; one that the church of God and the anti-secret association can depend upon every time and everywhere. Thank God for the noble men who are giving their attention to this reform work!

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Session was opened by Rev. D. R. Grover, and as he read a portion of the Scripture and offered prayer to God it was very plain to all who were present that his prayer was heard for answers of peace descended upon our waiting hearts. Some items of business being speedily adjusted we prepared to listen to a lecture from Bro. Barlow of Menomonie. I cannot give this lecture any kind of a just description, but will simply say that the waves of feeling that were set in motion by this man Barlow have not yet subsided, and may God help us to ever keep them in motion.

Mr. Editor, I want room just here to say that I simply wish the readers of your excellent paper could all of them be permitted to hear two of our noble men lecture on this sort of organized sin, namely, Stoddard and Barlow, and it seems to me that they would stir themselves, and if they could do nothing else to benefit the work they would help get subscribers for the Cynosure.

The next item was the report of the committee on resolutions, and the committee being ready to report the following resolutions were adopted which we wish you to insert so that the readers of the Cynosure may know what we are doing:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, 1st. That we recognize the hand of God in the progress of our reform work throughout this State and other parts of our country; and that we plight to God and each other, our faith afresh, to continue faithful in the good cause as the Master shall open the way.

2nd. That we earnestly commend the Christian Cynosure, and the publishing interests of the National Christian Association, and we hereby express our desire that both the paper and the uniform publications connected with the N. C. A. work shall be owned and controlled by that body and carried on at the Publishing House, No. 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, at as early a date as possible.

3rd. That, as the continued existence and the ceaseless productions of Freemasonry is a standing and growing menace to all that is good and sacred in religion, tender in the family and stable and precious in the state, we are called upon by the principles of loyalty to Christ, love for the family relation, and faithfulness to the state, to continue and increase our efforts for its final and complete overthrow.

4th. That from all the testimony presented before us as an Association, we are finally convinced that the institution now known as Freemasonry is undoubtedly the secret worship of Baal as it was practiced in Israel, Phœnicia, etc., in the days of pagan ascendency; that it is thoroughly and purely anti-Christian in practice and principle—a degradation to man and a gross insult to the God of heaven and earth; and that we earnestly call upon professing Christians, and more especially upon all ministers of the Gospel, to have no fellowship with it.

5th. That we hold it morally wrong to invite Freemason preachers into our pulpits or recognize them as true yoke fellows in the Gospel.

6th. That the cause of anti-secrecy needs the more hearty and general co-operation of women, and that we will try to secure this by recognizing and setting forth woman's part in this reform and endeavoring to secure her efficient aid.

7th. That we as a convention are in favor of having at an early day local and county organizations wherever practicable, and that our State agent be so instructed.

8th. That we commend the faithful work of Rev. D. P. Rathbun, and that he and all others who have had Christian courage to renounce the hidden things of dishonesty and identify themselves with our reform, each are entitled to the warmest sympathies of all who love righteousness and we pledge them one and all our hearty support in the trials incident to the warfare in which they are engaged.

9th. That this convention send greetings to all the churches who are in sympathy and hearty co-operation with our reform, and especially those who are represented by those with us in this convention, viz., the church of the United Brethren in Christ, the Regular Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, the Church of Christ, Free Methodists, Lutherans, Congregationalists and (thank God) one Episcopal Methodist.

On Thursday evening a large and crowded audience gave attention to the working of the third degree of Masonry by Rev. D. P. Rathbun, after which the convention adjourned. WM. B. GOLDEN, Sec.

FROM BRO. HINMAN AND MISSOURI.

ALBANY, Mo., Sep. 11, 1879.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—The State meeting at Evansville, Wis., was one of the best that I have attended in that State. Bro. J. F. Browne is certainly entitled to much credit for getting up and conducting it. He having been a resident from his boyhood astonished his friends, especially the Masons, and henceforth will be not without honor in his own country. Bro. Rathbun did his work well and powerfully overcome the opposing influences.

Leaving Evansville on the 5th I stopped for a few hours at Freeport, where the Free Methodist brethren have raised the standard of reform and have made a good beginning.

Leaving at midnight of the 5th I came direct to Trenton, Mo., a flourishing village of about 3,000 people and the county seat of Grundy county. It has three churches, Baptist, Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian. The pastors of the two former are active Masons. The Presbyterian minister is a young man of fine ability and not a Mason, but in full sympathy with them. Dr. Freeman, formerly of Newark, Ill., kindly provided for my entertainment at a hotel and got me an appointment to preach Sabbath afternoon in the Baptist church and to lecture in Winter's Hall on Monday evening. The ministers declined to make any announcement and the bills excited much remark. The Masons here have a lodge, chapter and commandery.

On Monday they got out a handbill stating their warm appreciation of my efforts and their desire to aid me. It was signed by about thirty Masons, and posted extensively. The result was a full house and excellent attention. I thanked them for their kind offers of aid, especially as it was in contrast with the mob violence which Bro. Stoddard had encountered at Chillicothe. During the night a fire broke out close to where I was staying and three buildings burned and others were saved with great difficulty.

Next morning I rode thirty-five miles, through a fine country with most splendid crops, to Bethany, the county seat of Harrison county, where I was hospitably entertained by Mr. T. C. Needles, and kindly brought to this place, where I found the brethren hard at work in getting ready for the State meeting at Avalon, Oct. 8-10.

I have been deeply impressed with the low state of morals in Missouri. I do not know that Masonry is stronger here than in northern Illinois, but the tone of morals is lower. People speak of the "saloon business" as a legitimate calling, and it is not considered an un-Christian practice to take drams. Ministers use tobacco much more generally than with us, and to belong to the lodge is considered highly respectable. The demoralizing influences of slavery still rest on the people and the corrupting influences of false religion are as truly apparent as in the days of the slave power. Yet northern Missouri is a beautiful land and is manifestly improving. The standard of a pure Gospel is being raised and many good people are rallying around it.

Yours in the Lord,
H. H. HINMAN.

THE PRELUDE AT MORNING SUN.

MORNING SUN, Ia., September 16, 1879.

I reached this quiet little city on Saturday morning and was cordially received by friends who remember my former visit. There has been progress here which is very noticeable during the last six years. As Prof. Blanchard would state it, the church of Christ has gone up and the lodge has gone down. Never have I been more deeply impressed with the great importance of our lecturers being affable and courteous in their associations with those among whom they labor, than since coming here and conferring with the brethren. Able presentation on the rostrum are indispensable, but the effect of the best speech is largely neuteralized by discourteous and un-

The Degrees Worked Successfully in Missouri.

A NEW HIRAM-KILLER.

AVILLA, Mo., Sept. 3, 1879.

EDITORS CYNOSURE: — Sharon church is a snug little building situated about eight miles northeast of of Avilla, Jasper county, Mo. It is surrounded by as fine prairie lands as has been the good fortune of your correspondent to look upon. In all directions as far as the eye can discern, immense fields, fine orchards, good substantial farmhouses betoken wide awake, energetic labor. Great herds of cattle upon the yet unoccupied lands show that capital has found its way among us. Good turn-outs and splendid roads indicate thrift. To the casual observer all seems peace, unity and good will; and there is much. You remember the pure waters of that lake that you sat beside last night; to whose banks you returned this morning. How changed. The winds had stirred up the slime and dirt that had settled to its bottom. The monsters of its bosom who were scarcely seen when all was quiet now writhe and plunge about in anger. You cannot admire it now. You gather your garments about you and go away with this thought, God hath done this. So with our usually quiet neighborhood.

The announcement of Bro. Glassford,—"I will, God helping me, work the first, second and third degrees of Masonry during the evenings of Sept. 1st and 2nd, at Sharon church," was accompanied by the first token of the coming storm. Many lowering frowns and the customary threats of the lodge did not deter him from the work. Monday evening found the house packed to hear the truth. The initiated were there in numbers. "Brethren, with malice toward none and charity for all and for the glory of God do I this." Then in a most impassioned manner did he hold us by a description of his lodge life and then the workings of the craft with its horrid oaths.

He promised us on the following evening to allow us to see a Mason made. We sought our places of rest glad that there were those who love righteousness, fear God and hate sin.

Tuesday evening the house was filled to overflowing. At an early hour Rev. Mr. Masters led devotional exercises, after which a candidate was duly prepared, brought out in due form "seeking light," finding it by having his hoodwink removed; explanatory remarks being made in the meantime by Bro. Glassford. So through the two following degrees,—slain by the three ruffians, buried, raised by the "lion's paw" to the "five points of fellowship" in the "sublime degree of a Master Mason" receiving the great "Ma-ha-bone." I never saw a more attentive audience, excepting now and then a Mason would lose his jewel. Our worthy brother warned young men with great energy to shun the environs of the lodge. He said "I do not hate Masons I pity them, but the impending wrath of God calls upon me to cry out against the blasphemous teaching of the lodge. Its plans whereby a 'way' is prepared by the trowel and square for man to gain entrance to the temple of our Lord other than through the atonement of Christ, 'For there is no other name given under heaven, or among men whereby we can be saved.'"

The meeting closed at a late hour and although the "tools" made many threats yet Bro. Glassford was so pointed and decided, and being shod with the preparation of the Gospel, having Christ for his buckler he feared not, knowing that God had and would close the mouths of beasts.

We have talked with many here whom we supposed were strong adherents of secrecy, but find that many—the mass are not attending the lodge and many do not hesitate to speak against it.

GEO. LEE LEAMING.

Bro. Starry Doing a Grand Work in Central Iowa.

CLARENCE, Iowa, Sept. 5, '79.

Brother S. E. Starry, of Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, a seceding Mason, on Monday and Tuesday evenings of August 25th and 26th, worked the first and third degrees of Masonry in the Bethel Wesleyan Methodist church in Baxter, Jasper county, Iowa, in a most admirable manner before a large and well behaved audience. Masonry here during the working of these degrees lost its vim and its heretofore manifest moroseness, and has withered into deep disgrace.

In Union Chapel, August 27th and 28th, in Union settlement, in the same county, he again lectured and worked the first and third degrees of Freemasonry in most excellent order, leaving a most favorable impression for the Anti-masonic cause.

Again at Independence Center, in Jasper county, August 29th and 30th, he worked the above named degrees of Masonry before a full house. Good order prevailed, with the exception of profane language being used publicly, by Masons. At the conclusion of the lecture the first evening, a Mason arose and said that he would not do as S. E. Starry had done, (that is, in exposing Masonry,) for all the State of Iowa. "No wonder," said Starry, "because you would be revealing Masonry and would expect to receive its penalties.

On his working the third degree the house was closely packed at an early hour, while a multitude surrounded the building vainly desiring admittance. There were a number of the Masonic fraternity present, quite exasperated on seeing their pet and corrupt institution exposed. While items of the degree were worked, these excited Masons would swear profanely and belch out in an insulting manner, "That's a lie;" "That's a lie." At the conclusion of the lecture a Mason arose and said that if what S. E. Starry had done was Masonry, he did not know what Masonry was. Starry then asked the Mason if he did not take an oath or obligation in the third degree to keep the secrets of a Master Mason, murder and treason excepted. He said, "No."

Starry then asked him if he would make an affidavit of this statement before a justice of the peace. He said he would; but when a justice was called for he made an effort to leave the house and soon left. While leaving, Starry asked the Mason if he was knocked into the blanket when taking the third degree. Under great excitement he replied, "Yes." Said Starry, "On entering the third degree were you prepared as the candidate was here to-night?" He answered, "Yes," and absconded in confusion, having acknowledged items of the degree to be correctly worked. Under the extreme excitement, Starry retained the utmost self-possession, and manifested himself a gentleman and master of the occasion.

The friends of reform in Jasper county were well pleased, edified and strengthened by Bro. Starry's work among them.

After resting over the Sabbath, Bro. Starry returned to Marengo, Iowa county, Iowa, and on Monday evening, September 1st, to the great satisfaction to the friends of reform, worked the first degree in Masonry. Tuesday, September 2d, in company with Rev. Geo. Fry and the writer, he repaired to Benton Center, Benton county, and in the evening the people of that place for the first time were astounded with Starry's exposure of the first degree of Masonry. Great excitement prevailed.

On Wednesday evening, September 3d, Bro. Starry exhibited Masonry to great advantage before a crowded house and worked the third degree in an energetic and effective manner. Excessive sensation prevailed with members of the fraternity present. The killing of Hiram was done in such a skilfull manner that all Masons present put on a forlorn and melancholy countenance and to all appearance all hope for their institution seemed to expire in them. Bro. Starry's confession of the guilt of Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum, for murdering so great and good a man as Master Hiram, was performed and spoken in such an extreme pathetic style as to work powerfully upon the sympathies of the whole audience. Masonry under all these successful exposures has received its death stroke in the center of Benton county.

Bro. S. E. Starry, of Clarence, Iowa, we pronounce an admirable and successful worker of the degrees of Freemasonry. He is now ready for the field of active labor and may be employed by communicating with him at Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa. May God abundantly prosper his work. W. S. MAY.

Correspondence.

Four Scenes in St. Paul, Minn.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. '79.

DEAR BRO. K:—In the spirit of the following stanza I would relate what I have to say:

> "I'm not ashamed to own my Lord,
> Or to defend his cause;
> Maintain the honor of his word,
> The glory of his cross."

Scene 1st. In a sermon, as an apt illustration of the depravity of man, I mentioned a few facts and principles of Masonry. At the close of the meeting a few Masons stood near me, and one of them remarked to me, "You are hard on us." Truly the truth should press hard upon the wicked, it is their only hope. One of these Masons desired an interview at some future time.

Scene 2nd. In another church, the handsomest in the city, the First Baptist, the pastor's text was, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will shew them his covenant." (Ps. 25: 14.) In the sermon we were told, that as secret societies have their secrets so has Christianity. He calls Jesus Christ "The Grand Master himself." He tells us that the secrets of Christianity are to be had by initiation and induction. That one must lay off his sandals to get divine truth. That we must live up to the degrees of the Supreme One and then higher degrees of illumination will appear. And thus he continued comparing and using Masonic language to teach the Christian religion. He did not tell us what the right of induction is, nor that we must be stripped almost naked, have a hoodwink over our eyes and a rope around our necks in order to be initiated into the secret society. But he did tell us that, "The only way in which we can know their secrets is to be initiated into them." So with Christianity, "we must be initiated in order to know the secret of the Lord."

Scene 3rd. At the prayer-meeting of the last named church I was deeply impressed to clear my conscience by speaking, and I arose and said, in allusion to the last Sunday morning sermon, "that to say, 'the only way in which we can know the secrets of Masonry is to be initiated into them,' is an infamous lie." At the close of the meeting one of the deacons followed me into the street and told me that I was not wanted there, and that if I did not keep away from that church he should take means to keep me away. I told him that no lie is of the truth, and came away.

Scene 4th. On the next day I happened to meet the Mason who had desired an interview with me. He commenced upbraiding me for the inconsistency of opposing Freemasonry and preaching the Gospel at the same time. And he went on to remark how impossible it was for any one who had never been in a Mason's lodge to know what was done there. He talked so fast that I had no opportunity to speak, but I made some Masonic signs, whereupon he immediately began to rebuke and admonish me as an untrue Mason and finally denounced me as a traitor to Masonry. I then assured him that I had never taken a Masonic obligation. He then laughed and left me abruptly. And this Mason has been a professing Christian for thirty years and is now a leading member in the Baptist church. How long will Christian (?) churches continue to "love darkness rather than light," and persist in driving the truth away against the plainest common sense? Oh for the power of the blessed and adorable Holy Ghost to carry conviction along with the truth! We must remember that Jesus said, "Without me ye can do nothing."

Yours truly,

W. FENTON.

THE CAROLINA KU-KLUX.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: I suppose that all secret societies are kindred in their natures. It seems to me that selfishness is the foundation of them all.

I take the liberty of sending you a leaf from my diary, which you may publish or not, as you may think best.

KU-KLUX.

May 20, 1879, there was a celebration of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence. Mrs. H. and I went down to Charlotte in a carriage. A man from Spartanburg county, S. C., who has lost the use of both his lower limbs, came in on the train, and was lying in the road and we took him into our carriage. In the procession there were men, who were dressed as I supposed that the Ku-Klux dressed; we fell into conversation about the Ku-Klux, and this man said that they killed a number of men in Union and York counties, S. Carolina, that he did not remember that they killed any one in Spartanburg county, but that they whipped a great many there. He said that the first object of the Ku-Klux was a laudable object, which was to protect widows and orphans from the "niggers," and to keep niggers from assuming an equality with white people, but that after they took everybody into the lodge, they killed and whipped for amusement. He said that he was a Ku-Klux, that the Ku-Klux stole his mule and rode him at night, and replaced him before daylight; he found out who did it, and told some one about it, and the Ku-Klux gave him the alternative of joining them or leaving the country. Yet he contended that this was no violation of his rights as a free man. He acknowledged that they would have killed him if he had divulged the secret of the horse theft, but he claimed that as as long as he said nothing about that, he was as fair as anybody was. He said that the Ku-Klux harmed nobody who did not put himself upon an equality with "niggers." He remarked that many "niggers" who had assumed that they were better than a "nigger" is, had disappeared from Spartanburg county, but that it was impossible to prove who killed them. I am, etc.,

REMEMBER THIS BROTHER.

September 15, 1879.

DEAR CYNOSURE: I love you more and more. I am sorry there are not more who would take you for a weekly visitor. I have been a subscriber for several years and expect to be as long as I live. I read and then hand to others with the request to read and circulate. Besides I have given out several thousand tracts, of which I keep a supply on hand. Being in public business, also depot agent, I have good opportunities to give out tracts.

All went well until a few weeks ago, when the craft began to complain and some threatened to quit dealing with me. Then a demited Mason commenced to tell stories on me and got several Masons to help him. They told me they were going to injure me all they could; and at it they went in regular Masonic style. They called a meeting of the farmers, while one wrote to the R. R. company about me, trying to have me removed, etc. One Mason stopped me in the road and began cursing me, and when I laughed at him he threatened to knock me off my horse. But I still talked kindly to him and finally he walked away. I thought for awhile they would injure me some, but I told the Lord about it. I told him I must have help and that he had promised not to forsake me, and that unless he helped me the evil ones would out do me. And now I want every one to help me thank him for the victory he has given and ask for more grace that I may continue to gain other victories through him.

I have found many warm friends and more Anti-masons, but they are afraid to come out boldly. I again ask all Cynosure readers to pray for me, for I look for another attack in some other way soon, as you all know they work in secret. But if the Lord is for me who can be against me to hurt me. Yours against Masonry,

J. B. STINESPRING.

I think the first virtue is to restrain the tongue; he approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent, even though he is in the right.

LESSON XL.—Oct. 5.—OUR GREAT HIGH PRIEST.

SCRIPTURE.—Heb. 4: 14 16; 5: 1-6.

14. Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession.

15. For we have not a high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

16. Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

1. For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2. Who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.

3. And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4. And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee.

6. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Heb. 7: 25.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—Christ is the High Priest forever.

STEPS TO THE LESSON.

The Sacred writer having referred to the various ways in which God had made known his will to man, speaks of Christ as revealing God to us, and declares the superiority of Christ to Moses. He next shows how Christ is our perfect High Priest, fulfilling what was foreshadowed in the Mosaic law. In Tyndale's English version, chapter five begins with this lesson.

NOTES.

"Hebrews." The persons for whom this Book was written. They were Israelites who had embraced Christianity; whether they were of Palestine, or of some other country, as of Alexandria, is a question in dispute among scholars.

"Hebrews, Book of." The authorship of the Book is disputed. In the early church Barnabas and Paul were each spoken of as the author. Paul's name is said not to have been affixed to it for 300 years. Luther ascribed it to Apollos; and learned scholars, as Erasmus, Calvin and Alford, did not regard it as Pauline. The weight of modern scholarship, however, seems to favor the view that it was dictated by Paul to Luke, who wrote it out from memory, as Paul was in prison. It was very probably written before the destruction of Jerusalem. Leathes places it at 62-64 A. D., others at 68-70 A. D. The place from which it was written, Alford thinks, was Ephesus, others say Cesarea or Rome. Its design is to show the superiority of the Gospel to the Jewish covenant.

"High Priest." The chief officer in the Jewish church; first filled by Aaron, and continued until Christ, about 1400 years. His work was to act as leader of the people in the worship of Jehovah, and once a year to enter into the holy of holies, to make an offering for all the people.

"Aaron"—lofty, elder brother of Moses and first High Priest of the Jewish church; was a speaker for Moses at the Court of Pharaoh; aided him in guiding the Israelites through the wilderness; died on Mt. Hor.

"Melchisedec"—king of righteousness, a king of Salem, and priest of God, who met and blessed Abram after the latter's victory over the king of Elam or Syria.

On v. 15, Jamieson remarks: "We have not an High Priest" who cannot sympathize with our infirmities, our weaknesses, physical and moral (not sin, but liability to its assaults). He, though sinless, can sympathize with us sinners; his understanding more acutely perceived the forms of temptation than we who are weak can; his will repelled them as instantaneously as the fire does the drop of water cast into it. He, therefore, experimentally knew what power was needed to overcome temptations. He is capable of sympathizing, for he was at the same time tempted without sin, and yet truly tempted. In him alone we have an example suited to men of every character and under all circumstances. In sympathy he adapts himself to each as if he had not merely taken on him man's nature in general, but also the peculiar nature of that single individual.

On v. 4.—This verse is quoted by some to prove the need of an apostolic succession of ordination in the Christian ministry; but the reference here is to the priesthood, not the Christian ministry. The analogy of our Christian dispensation would warn ministers, seeing that God has separated them from the congregation of his people to bring them near himself, and to do the service of his house and to minister, that content with this they should beware of assuming the sacrificial priesthood also, which belongs to Christ alone. No Christian minister, as such, is ever called Hierus, i. e. a sacrificing priest. All Christians without distinction, whether ministers or people, have a metaphorical, not a literal priesthood. The sacrifices which they offer are spiritual, not literal, their bodies and the fruit of their lips, praises continually. (Heb. 13:15.) Christ alone had a proper and true sacrifice to offer.

THE BIBLE.

Why do men put windows in their houses, to let in the sunlight? why don't they have gas light? The sun has been shining so many years. Why don't they say, "It is so old we don't want it." Why don't they say, "Let us have a new light? Let us shut out the light of heaven, by boarding up our windows?" There would be just as much reason in that as in their talk about the good old Bible. We have not outgrown it. It is what we need. Take all the books in the world, and that Bible will outweigh the whole of them. Let those men who talk about the Bible travel into some country where they have no Bible, and they would not stay in such a place. Take a town with five or ten thousand inhabitants, and no Bible or no ministers, and see if these infidels who are talking about the Bible will live there. They would get out of it, as Lot got out of Sodom. It is better to take the old way of Knox, Bunyan, Wesley, and Newton, than to be led off into darkness and fog. Christ is the way. I am told, that in the frontier, men cut off the bark of the trees to show the way to the cabin, and they called it blazing the way. So the Son of God has been in the wilderness and blazed the way and gone up on high, and now he says, "Follow me."—D. L. Moody.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPT. 25, 1879.

Editorial Correspondence.

Omaha, Sept. 15, 1879.

By advice of Henry J. Gleason, Esq., we took the Rock Island & Pacific railroad to Council Bluffs across the river from here, and surely no invalid could have been better attended or fared better at home. I have travelled much by rail, and have never seen this road excelled. We left Wheaton Friday morning, and in twenty-three hours reached the Missouri. The machinery all perfect, and the road, which I have travelled in its early rough state, is now as smooth as a parlor floor, and our movement over it as still as travelling on a carpet. The officers and employees were all gentlemanly and friendly, and seemed more like old neighbors than strangers.

The pastor of the Congregational church here, the oldest pastor in the city, had learned of our coming and telegraphed to Wheaton to request me to preach for him yesterday, but I was gone before his telegram reached me. He called and repeated his request in person, but I was too infirm to venture to preach. However, I went into the pulpit at his request and made a few remarks at the close of his discourse and closed the services. The church is large and well filled. Col. C. G. Hammond of Chicago, and Hon. Francis Colton of Galesburg, were here when it was built and gave heavily, as they are wont, to good objects.

Fifteen years ago, when I came here from the mountains, I preached for this same church in another building. Then there were from two to three thousand people here. Now there are twenty-nine thousand, and some two hundred houses have been built in the last six months.

I can not learn whether a copy of the Cynosure is taken here, though there may be. The deacon of the church, with whom we stop, and a large circle of old friends and acquaintances are decidedly and without fear for the reform. Dea. Hurlbut will henceforth receive the Cynosure and will do his utmost to diffuse its sentiments. He never had seen but one copy of the paper; but he takes the Advance and said he was rejoiced to see General Howard coming round on my side lately.

I write this hasty sketch under some pain and must close. We hope to start for desert and mountain at 12:30 to-day.

Border of Wyoming Ter., Sept. 16, 1879.

Dear Cynosure:—We are about 470 miles from Omaha and have just left the long State of Nebraska. As we came down the Missouri bluffs in Iowa, we began to see cornfields killed by the frost; and leaving Omaha, all day yesterday the same phenomena appeared, now a field whitened, some almost blackened by the frost, and in five or ten minutes we would be running along by heavy, green, vigorous corn, untouched by frost. Whether the ears in the frosted fields had advanced so as to afford any crop I cannot learn.

This (Tuesday) morning we saw a herd of antelope frisking and playing in the distance, all the wild animals we have yet seen; but all day to-day we have been passing immense herds of cattle, thousands on thousands, and the grass is better than in our pastures at home and much like it. These herds must of course get drink somewhere, but the Platte river, and any other stream which manages to keep itself above ground is far away out of sight. These are the successors of the buffalo herds which grazed in this paradise of cattle only a few years ago. The breeds of these cattle are endlessly diversified. Some slim, lean, long-horned creatures, looking more like wild animals than tame. But the multitudes of calves among them show improved blood, as the bulls seem to have been shipped from the East. Near the small station-towns along the road you will see huge corrals with conveniences for shipping these cattle on the railroad.

It is now about noon. Not a tree or shrub, far as the eye can reach, diversifies the monotony of rolling prairie, covered with grass. The only exception has been a long rock bluff or range of bluffs on the south and near the railroad, where all the best trees have been cut into railroad ties and wood, leaving the forlorn shrubs standing like degenerate descendants of Puritan ancestors, retaining nothing of them but their name without their virtues.

I had almost forgotten to say that my health increases as we ascend this vast inclined plain, which seems a dead-level till the instruments tell us we are a thousand feet or two above sea-level. The air grows clear and bracing, and the alkali in it makes your finger nails brittle as glass. As yet we have reached neither sage brush, wolves, deserts or mountains. We are only one-fourth of the distance from Omaha to the Pacific coast. If God restores my strength the next three days as he has the last, the readers of the Cynosure and friends at Wheaton shall hear from me on themes which have been thrilling my moral and intellectual being for the whole time since I was taken sick; themes on which I dare not venture now.

The cars we are on are not quite as capacious as those of the Rock Island road. But they are homelike, and all the officers seem like old friends. The courtesy and urbanity of the gentleman in the office of Mr. Kimball at Omaha, gave me an impression of the power of mere manners, even in intercourse between strangers, such as I had never felt before. How strange that we cultivate this power so little.

I am told that I am writing too much, and must say,

Yours in Christ,
J. Blanchard.

The State Meetings.

The early reports from Morning Sun show a degree of enthusiasm and success which might have been expected from the grand opening in Wisconsin, but which, nevertheless, thrills us with gratitude and wonder. Foremost and bravest on the battle-fields of freedom and the union Iowa's good sons and daughters do not belie their lineage on the field of moral victory.

Our general secretary, weary with the hard work he never refuses at these meetings, writes from a full heart a few details of the Convention at Morning Sun. In another letter he says Bro. E. Mathews goes to Minnesota where he speaks this week, beginning Tuesday evening. Elder Browne, our Illinois lecturer, wins praise wherever he goes. "He has done nobly," writes Bro. Stoddard. (Remember this, friends in Illinois!) With Bro. Starry, par nobile fratrum, they wish to make a track of living light through Illinois to Westfield. The latter having lately renounced the lodge for Christ's sake, and "bright" in the ritual, is quickly developing into an able exposer of the true inwardness of Freemasonry. Now our Illinois friends have a work to do this week. Write to Bro. Browne at Lena, Illinois, and engage him for two evenings with Bro. Starry. The Illinois State meeting is postponed till November 11th to 13th. This gives them six weeks for work. They can visit twelve points. Let these places report to them without delay, so that by Monday morning, September 29th, they can arrange to start. This matter does not brook delay, dear friends. Be in earnest in your effort, and never forget that you lose half the blessing if you forget that "the laborer is worthy of his hire." The State gathering last year at Wheaton was one of the best of our meetings. Now let Westfield not be behind in this matter.

From Iowa, Bro. Stoddard goes to Kansas and Nebraska, and then eastward to Missouri, where Elder Rathbun meets him, when both go on to Indiana, and possibly together will visit Michigan and Ohio, returning to Illinois in November. Thus like the watch-fires of the Scottish border the West will blaze from a hundred heights, and the yeomanry of reform will be gathering for the campaign of 1879–'80. Truly

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord."

Too late for publication last week word came that the Kansas meeting would be held positively at Winchester. This town is on the Kansas Central railroad, in Jefferson county, near Valley Falls, and centrally located in respect to Atchison, Leavenworth, Lawrence and Topeka. While many of our friends are reading this, that Convention will be closing; let prayer arise to God for his benediction upon the Kansas brethren, and a special blessing upon the meetings yet to come.

Let the East, too, beholding the mighty work of God in the West, come up like old Israel, as one man to the rallying places of the hosts of the Lord. Bro. Michael, abundant in labors, cries out not to forget New Jersey. What shall be done for these brethren? They are yet few, but are mighty men like the sons of Zeruiah. Would it be wisest for the brethren of Eastern Pennsylvania to unite with those of New Jersey in a grand, strong meeting, in which the interests of both sections could be wisely considered? or can the cause be best subserved by a meeting for New Jersey alone?

New York and New England will soon answer with echoing gleams to the watch-fires of the West, and join hands in this great work of filling the ranks of Christ's army in readiness for the battle day of God.

"He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat;
Oh! be swift, my soul, to answer him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on."

Masonic Benevolence.

A Sabbath school teacher in Union Park Congregational church, invited a member of her class, a young man about seventeen years of age, to her house for personal conversation in regard to the salvation of his soul. Judging from his exemplary conduct and thoughtful attention to Sabbath instructions she hoped he was not far from the kingdom of God.

In reply to a question about his relations to God, he said that he had not decided what he would do about accepting Christ, but that he was determined to join the Freemasons as soon as he was of age, assigning as a reason, the great benevolence of the order.

Many young men may be found with a purpose similar to that expressed by this one. If those who find themselves disappointed in Masonic benevolence could put their sad stories together into one volume these bright hallucinations concerning the virtue of Freemasonry would be to a great extent dispelled.

We give below an account of Masonic benevolence recently related to us by a Master Mason's widow.

A gentleman of consumptive tendencies joined the Masonic lodge in a town in New York, took three degrees and afterward served the lodge as tyler. At the time of moving his family eleven miles from this place the lodge was indebted to him quite a sum for his services. He told them that as his health was poor he should not be able to attend the lodge often, and he would leave the amount due him to be applied in payment of his future dues. Soon after he visited a sister in a distant town in Connecticut, and after a time died there, leaving his family without means. The Masons of that place told his wife that the undertaker in their town was a Mason, and told her to go and get everything she wanted for the funeral. She selected a casket, box to enclose it, etc., and about thirty Masons took charge of his funeral, burying him Masonically. Much to her surprise after the funeral a bill was sent in for everything she had selected, except a deduction of $2.50 for a Masonic burial plate. The widow had no means to pay the bill, but went to work with her hands, earned, and paid the money.

Her husband was a quiet man naturally, and doubtless his Masonic obligations made him more so. At various times during his life when asked whether there was anything wicked in Masonry, he would reply:—"If a man lives up to his Masonry, he cannot help being a good Christian."

The widow, now thrown upon her own resources, came to Chicago for work. But a stranger in the city, work and friends came slow. She was attacked with inflammation of the eyes, so severely that for nearly a year she was almost blind. She applied to the Masons for aid, supposing that the prime object of their organization was benevolence, and that the wants of a Mason's destitute and afflicted widow were just what they were anxious to relieve. Those she applied to sent her to others and these told her to write to the lodge which her husband first joined; she did so, and they replied that the lodge had been burned out, was poor, and was unable to assist her. Astonished at such charity, sick and destitute, she was thrown upon her own resources and the kindness of friends, the record of whose alms is not found in Masonic Grand Lodge reports. Now with restored health she is supporting herself in Chicago nursing the sick, and asks us not to publish her name lest the Masonic benevolence which was so helpless in her time of need might be changed to Masonic vengeance, depriving her through Masonic physicians and Masonic patrons of the means of support, only for the crime of telling the truth about her experience in regard to Masonic benevolence.

How often, to those who enjoy the fulness of blessing to be found in the service of Christ does the question come, when hearing the bitter stories of those who look elsewhere for comfort:—"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" Is. 55:2

—The Cynosure readers will read with sincerest pleasure the two letters from their editor in this number, and mark the evidence of returning vigor. On Friday last he and Mrs. Blanchard, probably reached their destination in San Jose, and were welcomed by a select company with as much enthusiasm and a hundred times the personal esteem as awaited General Grant on his arrival at San Francisco on the day following.

—Austin Burchard, uncle of President Hayes, died last week at his home in Fayetteville, Vermont. He was an earnest reformer who carried his principles on his face, not in his pocket. We lately printed a letter from Z. Eastman, Esq., an old anti slavery editor, in which his activity as an Abolitionist and Antimason was ably sketched.

—Bro. Hinman is earnestly at work in Missouri. On Sabbath, the 14th, he preached in the Methodist Episcopal church in Albany, and on Monday evening lectured to a full house in the United Brethren church south of Grant City. Tuesday evening he lectured and worked the first degree at another point near Grant City. His appointments were at Grant City, Wednesday evening; Isdora, Thursday evening. Bro. E. G. Cooper is also lecturing, and others are at work to rally every one to the State meeting at Avalon.

—The readers of our religious department will see with gratitude to God the honorable disposition of Elder Hurless' case before the Rock River U. B. conference. The patience of the conference toward the erring brethren, giving them two days and a half, is good evidence that the vindication of this brother is complete. It is an evidence of the good sense of the Methodist Protestant conference of West Virginia, also, that the charges against Elder Turney were dismissed. The Satanic hatred of the lodge is responsible for this last attempt at persecution.

—The resolutions of the Wisconsin convention are among the best we have read for years, proceeding from any of our reform conventions, especially the 4th, 5th and 6th. They strike out with unusual boldness and originality from the well beaten path our committees so patiently follow. Had the convention put nothing else on record, the fourth resolution would have marked it as a great meeting of men who valued the truth above all the honors of this present world.

—The Grand Lodge of Oddfellows sitting in Baltimore last week, published the following table of statistics of their work during the year:

Number of grand lodges	50
Subordinate lodges	6,975
Grand encampments	39
Subordinate encampments	1,863
Lodge initiations	33,380
Lodge members	414,291
Encampment members	82,408
Local relief	$1,740,405.63
Total revenue	4,366,9-6.51
Decrease	156,065.83

Price of single subscriptions to the Cynosure $2 per year in advance. This is low considering the size and value of the paper.

gentlemanly bearing in personal intercourse. I trust that God may give me more wisdom and prudence in this matter and that all who labor in this cause may feel its importance.

I preached Sabbath morning in the U. P. church and in the afternoon in the M. E. church, and am very comfortably located at the house of Rev. J. R. Johnston, an old time M. E. minister, who, with his excellent wife, is heartily with us. They recently celebrated their golden wedding and sister J. insisted that inasmuch as she had kept her promise to obey her husband for fifty years the order should be reversed, and he should do the obeying for the next fifty years. The occasion was a very happy one, attended by the ministers and many prominent citizens of the place, who left a gold-headed cane for the groom and gold-framed spectacles for the bride, along with other prized and appropriate offerings of respect. Bro. J. has had some experience as nonmason in Ohio, Indiana and Iowa, which is deeply interesting, and which I hope he will give in his own way to the readers of the Cynosure.

When a lad, he received from one Dr. Mitchell an expose of thirty-two degrees which the doctor had published, and which was ultimately put out of the way by some means. The craft were greatly disturbed by the expose, and three times gave Dr. M. poison, and otherwise tried to take his life. Bro. Johnston being intimately acquainted with the doctor, and knowing personally of the attempts made by the fraternity to kill him, of course had no desire to become one of a band of midnight assassins and poisoners, and so has repelled all efforts made to drag him into the lodge, and is to-day a free man.

AFTER THE CONVENTION.

SEPT. 18, '79.—Before leaving on the next train for Topeka, Kansas, I want to say to the friends that the Convention closed here last evening at 11 o'clock, completing one of the grandest victories ever won in this State on the field of moral conflict. Near a hundred and fifty were enrolled, among them such solid men as Bros. Brokaw, of Washington; J. Brown, D. D., of Columbus City; Dr. Norris, of Birmingham; Hon. Mr. Kemp, of Dayton; Rev. A. M. Shimer, College Springs; Rev. J. A. Pollock, of Burlington; Joseph McClery, of Marshall; Rev. M. S. Drury of Western; Moses Varney, of West Branch, etc.

There was some pre-judgment here against working the degrees, but since witnessing the rendering of the first by Bro. Starry, and the third degree by Bro. Rathbun, a very marked change has taken place.

Bro. Browne and his wife were here as fraternal delegates from Wisconsin; he has rendered such effective service as to make himself and this new feature of our work very popular. Bros. Browne and Starry have arranged to work together in Illinois. Bro. Rathbun was appointed as fraternal delegate to Missouri and Illinois, and Bro. Austin to Wisconsin—each with an alternate. Dr. Norris was chosen to attend the N. C. A. meeting in Chicago in June, 1880, with Rev. M. S. Drury as alternate.

The Free Mission movement was heartily endorsed, and Bro. Joel Austin commended to the favorable notice of friends in the State. Dr. James Brown was chosen president for the ensuing year; and an endorsement of the Cynosure was given in the shape of twenty-five subscribers. Bro. Hall was re-elected secretary, and will send an early report.

I never attended a more harmonious convention, or saw men returning to their fields of labor with better heart for work. God bless the dear brethren and stir them up to pray for their servant in the Lord,

J. P. STODDARD.

To Indiana Friends.

ALBION, Sept. 20, 1879.

Friends in Indiana, are you preparing to come to our annual meeting? From present prospects we will have the largest meeting we have ever had. Now, friends, do not fail this time; rally 'round our common cause. Let us meet once more. Let all the earnest, sincere ones come. Let the lukewarm and fearful come. Let those who have better plans come. Let all come who can. I am urged by many friends to request those who cannot come and whose heart is in the work to forward a contribution, large or small, as the Lord directs, so it will reach us before the meeting; it may be sent either to myself or Elder A. Worth. I assure you friends it shall be reported to the meeting, together with the giver's name. The meeting will be attended with some expense; we have faith to believe that many will help us. If some of our wealthy friends would send us $5, and each subscriber to the Cynosure whatever his conscience dictates, it will greatly encourage the meeting and stimulate the friends all over the State. One brother has already notified me that if he is not here he will forward his contribution. Come every one who can. Yours,

S. L. COOK.

—Bro. Britten writes from Wisconsin that Rev. Wm. B. Golden, of Martin, Green county, in that State, is preparing to work the degrees in public. He is a seceder, and was the secretary of the Evansville convention. In Missouri we see a young brother Glassford already at work. It is a most cheering mark of the progress of our work that so many are now laboring to open the long-blinded eyes of their neighbors to behold the idolatry and blasphemy of the lodge.

Home Circle.

We Know in Part.

We know in part, if that is true
  Which only looks and smiles on us,
Then vanishes within the blue
  Of vaulted depths mysterious.

Whether in part, or not at all,
  So plagues us here at every turn!
We have it, sure, and then we fall
  To doubting and to deep concern.

My soul and I grow coldly strange,
  When most we feel the lonely stress
Of life upon us, as we range
  This thorny, under wilderness.

I hear my soul's voice fainting far
  Among the dims that line the sky,
While groping blind, from star to star;
  We know in part, my soul and I.

We call it science, and are pleased
  With names that mock our hungry hearts;
But inner truth cannot be seized
  By ignorance; we know in part.

The germs and cells, wherein they say
  That life was cradled into soul,
Are crypts from which have crept away
  The truth that made out knowledge whole.

We cannot grasp a single law,
  And hold it till we find the clue—
The thread o'er which its pulses draw,
  The primal pulse from which it grew.

All matter gravitates by rote,
  The learned say, but stars cry out,
"There is no music in a note.
  We sing but when our God's about."

We know in part, the other part
  Is hid in God, and only shines
In points of glory on the heart
  That moves toward him in love's straight lines.

—Prof. B. F. Larrabee.

The Disadvantage of Brains.

Brains are often an occasion of serious disadvantage to their possessors. Inventors die in poverty, while thieves fatten in plenty. Poets starve in garrets, while stupid dolts revel in luxury. Men of marked genius often find this world a foreign country. There are many positions in human society where the ability to detect a rogue, or discern a sham, and the courage to expose a fraud or unmask a villain, operates to the disadvantage of those who possess it. The man who hates shams is hated by shams. The man who discerns hypocrites finds hypocrites to be his foes. The man who will not lie nor countenance others in lying, gets the ill-will of all who hold that falsehood and trickery are consistent with Christian character and duty. It has been intimated that some persons think that "the chief end of man is to stand still and hold back." He who can drift with the current, escapes many difficulties which those experience who try to row against wind and tide. The old Scotchman said: "It is a sair thing to the flesh for a man to have more light than his brethren." Nevertheless it has pleased God to give some men intellectual acumen, powers of discernment and discrimination, ability to see what needs to be done, and willingness to stretch forth the hand and do it. But these persons often entail upon themselves dislike, trouble and discouragement. There are so many established rules, and vested interests, and ancient absurdities, and place-loving barnacles, which are affected by their action, that they find themselves in hot water, with few around who are willing to help them out.

Had they seen less, known less, and said less, they might have avoided the trouble. Had they been content to see things go on as they were, everything would have been satisfactory; but intelligence, discernment, and a determination to do right at all hazards, have brought them into serious difficulty.

Notwithstanding these disadvantages, the gift of intelligence and wisdom is not altogether in vain, "There is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." And those to whom God has given light and truth, intelligence and knowledge, are responsible for the use of their gifts, and must be faithful to that which they have received. While they should seek to give no needless offense, that the ministry be not blamed, yet they should also hold the light which they have received as a sacred trust, letting it shine before men; and during the trials and persecutions which are occasioned thereby, they should trust in God to bring good out of evil, and blessings where afflictions now abound. He who giveth wisdom liberally, and upbraideth not, will not forsake them in the trials in which they are involved through fidelity to truth, to conscience, and to God. But let them beware of rashness and hastiness. Let them be wise as serpents and harmless as doves. Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory. "Who is a wise man and endued knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom. But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not; and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." James 3: 13-18.—The Christian.

The Nobleman's Offer.

A forcible illustration of the sin and folly of those who doubt the Lord's promises of salvation, and delay to accept his proffered grace, is found in the following account of the offer made by a British nobleman to his tenants. The substance of the story we have often heard, and believe it to be entirely true. We give it as reported in the Interior, from the lips of Geo. J. Mingens, superintendent of the New York city mission.

Lord Congleton, one of the band of earnest Christian workers, among whom Lord Shaftsbury is perhaps the most widely known,—men who would be noble without hereditary titles, and who share that exceptional grace to which not many mighty or noble are called;—had thrown himself heartily into evangelical work both among the London poor and upon his own estates. Not being gifted with all that persuasiveness of speech which some possessed, he found that few believed his report, and grieved that the message of God's love which he bore was rejected and neglected by so many. Pondering the matter in his mind he sought to teach his tenants a lesson of faith which they could not well forget, and which might incline them to believe the testimony concerning Christ and his great salvation.

The session of Parliament was over, and he started for his country seat. The morning after his arrival he had the following notice posted in various conspicuous places about the village that lay upon his estate, and on the great gate of his private grounds:

NOTICE.

"Lord Congleton will be present, with his steward, at his office in the village, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 12 noon, —— day of ——; and will then and there pay freely all accounts and debts, to whomsoever owing, of any of his tenants who cannot discharge their obligations. To avail themselves of this offer, the applicants must present their accounts in the form of separate bills, containing the exact statement of the amounts and nature of the debts owing to each creditor. They must give, also, a statement of their own means and whatsoever property they may have. CONGLETON."

Soon, around each placard a crowd began to gather. Curiosity, astonishment, possessed the villagers. "What does it mean?" And crowds gathered around the office. To one and all, the steward gave only one answer:—"That is Lord Congleton's signature; the notice speaks for itself." Further explanations of his master's motives he refused; nor would he answer any questions. "He was simply ordered to fix up those placards. That was all he knew."

The day drew on, with an increasing excitement on the part of the poor. Some looked at the latter clause. It seemed to intimate they must surrender all they had, to claim the benefit. They were not insolvent, and so they concluded not to apply. Others had accounts of a nature they did not like to expose to his lordship. Others had little faith in the whole matter. 'Twas some new, unaccountable whim of Lord Congleton's. "But there's his own signature, he'll never dishonor that," said a neighbor. And so discussion ran high.

Many gathered up their accounts, and made out the required statements, resolving to see how others fared, and if they succeeded, to present their list of hopeless debts. Some planned how to keep back part of their assets, and some again, deterred by arguments or ridicule, gave up all thought of the matter.

The day came, and the crowd of tenants and lookers on were gathered near the office. All efforts to gather any further information were fruitless. A little before the hour Lord Congleton's carriage drove up, and he stepped hastily into the office, and the door was closed and locked after him. Precisely at nine a step came from the inner room, and they heard the bolt thrown back.

Men looked at each other. None were willing to go first, fearing either the confession of poverty, or the ridicule that would meet an unsuccessful application. "You go and try, Jones," said a man to his neighbor. "I'm not so poor as you think for," was the reply, albeit each had shown friends their lists, and consulted with them about the debts they meant to present. So the minutes wore by, while men looked upon each other and waited.

It was near ten o'clock when an old couple, who for two or three years had been inmates of the poor-house, entered the group before the office. "Is it true," they said, "Lord Congleton has offered to pay all our debts?" "Don't know; he has paid none yet." "But has any one been in?" "Not yet." Just then the notice hanging outside the office door caught the old man's eyes. It was faded by sun and rain. "Why, wife," said he, "this has been here for days, and I know his lordship's signature. Thank God! we can die at least free of debt," and they started for the door. "Aye, aye, you go first, old man, and tell us how you fare." "I don't think you are out of the poor-house yet." "Guess he'll be fooled." So their neighbors comments fell about their ears as they entered.

Within the inner office they found Lord Congleton and his steward. The old man laid his statement and bills upon the table, saying:—"These are my debts, my lord. I have nothing, but live in the poor-house. This, however, matters little, if I die debt-free."

"Why should I pay your debts?" asked the nobleman. "I cannot tell why, except that you say you will. I know your signature, and believe your promise." "That is enough," said Lord Congleton.

The steward then made up the account and drew a check, which he handed to his master. He looked at it, compared it with the statement, and passed it with his signature to the old man. He earnestly thanked his benefactor, and then started to the door, saying:

"I must tell my neighbors!" "No, you shall not," said Lord Congleton, "they must trust my word."

The old couple were shown into another room to wait till twelve; and in the meantime the steward told his master their history. Coming down from comparative comfort, their poverty had been misfortune, and not fault. Lord Congleton was interested in them, and ordered the lease of a little place to be made out in their name, which he added to the check.

Outside, the time wore away; and as the old people did not come forth, all settled down to the opinion there was nothing in it. Twelve drew near. Men looked at each other, but did not go. Slowly the hour rang out, and with the last stroke the door opened, and the old man came out. "Have you got your money?" With that he showed his check. "Good as a note of the Bank of England!" There was a rush around Lord Congleton as he entered his carriage, and men shook at him their statements. "My lord, will you pay my debts?" "Lord Congleton, there's my account."

"Friends, it is past twelve o'clock," said he, as he drove away.—Selected.

PRAYER HYMN.

Now, as our Saviour taught to say,
In truth and spirit let us pray;
Our heavenly Father, hear our prayer;
Thy name be hallowed everywhere.

Thy kingdom come; thy perfect will,
In earth, as heaven, may all fulfill;
Give this day's bread, that we may live;
Forgive our sins, as we forgive;

Lead us temptation's snares to shun,
And save us from the evil one.
Now, and forever unto thee,
The kingdom, power, and glory be.

FRENCH BESSIE.

CHAPTER III.

DR. RIVERS' CHURCH.

Sleeping in church, French Bessie looked upon as a crime, on the heinousness of which she was fond of dilating as opportunities occurred. "Why go there to sleep," she would say; "can't sleepy people stay at home and sleep in bed? It provokes me to see them nod, nod, nodding, when they should be listening to the sermon; and oh! how brisk these sleepers get, once out of church! their dull eyes get bright enough then, and their heavy limbs become, all of a sudden, sprightly and active. To be sure," she would continue, gravely, "it is pleasant to get out to the pure air and sunshine. Even those who have been worshiping in the spirit and the truth feel that. I do feel it myself," she would add, with a sigh.

But even French Bessie's sharp eyes could detect but few sleepers in Dr Rivers' congregation. He preached in a quaint old church in the outskirts of the town, where, in the stormy winter days, the wind was heard moaning ominously through the old rafters of the high arched roof, and where, in the peaceful summer time, the doors being left open to admit the cooling breeze, the singing of the birds in the churchyard outside was distinctly heard mingling with the soft dashing of the waves on the neighboring seashore.

There, in that old church, a devout congregation assembled for worship every Sabbath morning, and sang the old hymns of Zion to the plaintive old melodies which their fathers had loved and sung before them. And there every Sabbath morning they joined with all their hearts in the earnest prayers of their pastor, at the close of which each felt that his or her case had been specially remembered before the mercy-seat, and the blessing implored which each most needed; and there, Sabbath after Sabbath, Dr. Rivers delivered, with unwearied faithfulness and simplicity the old Gospel message of salvation, at the same time reproving, rebuking and exhorting his Christian brethren with all fidelity and earnestness; thus giving to each of his hearers their portion of meat in due season.

"I've been halve-way to heaven," whispered French Bessie to her cousin, as they left the church on the first Sabbath after her arrival. "That man's prayers are worth coming from France to hear; and the singing, ah! surely they sang with their hearts; surely it was the true worship. No fear there, my cousin, of any one supposing they have made a mistake, and had admission to a concert without a ticket; no choir duets or solos there. And the reading of the Scriptures!" she continued, warming with her subject. "I just shut my eyes and listened, and I did wish all the blind people in the city were there too; and I saw only one old gentleman sleeping during the time of the beautiful sermon, and I did feel as though I could have boxed his ears."

It was evident, from the expression of French Bessie's face, as she sat in the church on the Sabbath morning which followed the discovery of David Montgomery's defalcations, that she had not changed her opinion, but was enjoying with a keen relish, the services of the sanctuary; and when Dr. Rivers announced his text, and began to preach, her every feature beamed with wondering animation, and she cast occasional eager glances toward her uncle and cousin, as though anxious to ascertain if they shared and sympathized with her feelings. For the subject chosen for exposition was the parable of the forgiven but unmerciful debtor; and creeping close to her cousin, she whispered, "Has he heard of it, think you?"

Bessie's mouth twitched at the corners as she shook her head and looked straight before her, to avoid meeting French Bessie's eye; but the latter, wholly unconscious of having provoked any risibility was speedily absorbed in the sermon, which seemed to afford her great satisfaction. English Bessie, too, listened with rapt attention, and the expression of her countenance, always sweet, gradually became almost angelic; whilst the hard lines, which contact with the world and a successful course of money-making had imprinted on Mr. Mowbray's brow, disappeared, and his usually firm, determined mouth, mellowed and relaxed making the resemblance between him and his daughter marked and striking.

After a masterly analysis and explanation of the general scope and meaning of the parable, Dr. Rivers pressed upon his hearers the great moral lesson inculcated in it, warning them, at the same time, against taking advantage of it to offend their brethren with impunity, by trusting to a sense of duty for a speedy forgiveness.

"There are many things," said he, in conclusion, "both forbidden and inculcated in the New Testament, for which there is no direct 'Thou shalt,' or 'Thou shalt not,' but the duty of forgiveness is enforced with all the authority of a command, coming directly from the Author of Christianity himself, and inculcated by the whole tenor of Scripture."

"Just so," thought French Bessie, "just what I thought; uncle must forgive him."

"Was not it beautiful?" she cried, as having left the church they mingled with the crowd of people which thronged the streets. She spoke in eager, animated tones, and a lady walking directly in front started, and looked round to see the speaker. It was Mrs. David Montgomery.

At sight of the culprit's wife, Mr. Mowbray shrank back, as though he had himself been the guilty party and his daughter blushed crimson; whilst French Bessie greeted her with a warm extra cordiality, which would have surprised her not a little had she not ascribed the warmth of the girl's manner to her foreign birth and breeding.

But Mr. Mowbray speedily recovered his self-possession, as he saw, from the calm serenity of Mrs. Montgomery's manner, that she was unaware of the dire calamity hanging over her; and when, on parting, he stooped and patted kindly the head of a fine little boy who clung to her hand, French Bessie thought within herself, "All right, uncle could not have done that if he had been going to send his father to prison to-morrow morning."

CHAPTER IV.

MONDAY MORNING.

Monday morning came, and, with a heavy heart and slow, unwilling step, Mr. Mowbray repaired to his counting-house.

"Tell Mr. Montgomery I wish to speak to him," he said, as he passed the porter, and entered his private room. In a few minutes, the culprit appeared. "Shut the door, David, I have something to say to you," said his master, gravely.

Pale and trembling, David obeyed, for one glance at Mr. Mowbray's countenance had told him that his defalcations had been discovered, and he experienced all the sensations of a criminal who has been tried and found guilty, and who, hopeless and despairing of mercy, awaits the final sentence of the law.

Mr. Mowbray was obliged to clear his throat more than once, before he said, in a severe tone of voice: "I see your conscience has already told you, David, what I have got to say. I little expected that you, of all men, could have been guilty of such treachery, not to speak of your base ingratitude toward myself. I am sure I have always acted toward you more as a friend than a master."

Here Mr. Mowbray paused, overcome by his emotion, and David made a gesture, as though about to reply, but though his lips moved, no sound came from them, for his tongue was dry and parched, and cleaved to the roof of his mouth.

"I am not surprised you are struck dumb with shame," continued Mr. Mowbray, with a sigh; "you richly deserve the severest penalty of the law, and I fully intended to prosecute, but I have changed my mind, David; I forgive you, and, if it be any comfort to you, I promise to keep your secret and save your character; here is your salary up to date, which I pay you for the sake of your poor wife and helpless children."

He laid the money on the table as he spoke, and, lifting the notes, David began to count them with his trembling fingers. He was no hardened criminal, and did it mechanically, not knowing what he was doing. But his master noted the action with a bitter rising at the heart—"barefaced scoundrel!" he muttered to himself.

"All right, I hope?" he added aloud, in a tone intended to convey his feelings. Again David opened his lips, but his words were inaudible, and with faltering steps he turned to leave the room. With his hand on the door he turned round and, without lifting his eyes, again attempted to speak; but his white quivering lips refused their office, and he departed without having uttered a single word.

When he was gone, Mr. Mowbray found on the floor the notes, which he had unconsciously allowed to slip from his fingers. "Too proud to take them from me," he sighed. "Oh, David, ungrateful David!" and tossing them into his desk, he burst into tears.

Home and Farm.

A NOVEL METHOD OF PRESERVING GRAPES.—The Chinese are said to preserve grapes for a very considerable period by cutting a circular piece out of a ripe pumpkin or gourd, making an aperture large enough to admit the hand. The interior is then thoroughly cleaned out, the ripe grapes are placed inside, and the cover replaced and pressed in firmly. The whole is then kept in a cool place.

ONIONS FOR FOWLS.—Too much can hardly be said, says an exchange, in praise of onions for fowls. They are a preventive of and a remedy for many diseases to which domestic fowls are liable. For gapes onions are the best thing that can be fed. The Stock Journal recommends giving fowls as many as they will eat, chopped fine, as often as three times a week.

RUBBING POSTS.—A few rubbing-posts set up in pastures will save injury to the fences. Cattle will use these conveniences very often, if provided for them, and it is worth all the trouble to witness the enjoyment of the animals in the use of them.

SAVING TUBE-ROSES.—The Gardeners' Chronicle relates the following experience of a practical hand in saving tube-roses for flowering the second and third year: "Last year, instead of throwing away our plants when done flowering, I saved twelve, which were placed under a stage in a late vinery, where they remained until the end of April, without receiving any water other than the moisture of the house, by which time most of them had thrown up their flower spikes from young tubers formed immediately upon the top or crown of the old ones, and from the union of which—when the plants had received a thorough watering, and otherwise were subject to a growing temperature—a profusion of roots emanated, after which the plants received a suitable shift to a small twenty-four, and each individual flower expanded in the most satisfactory manner.

FRUITFULNESS OF WHEAT.—The power of little things is shown in the following German calculation: If we reckon that a single grain of wheat produces 50 grains, and that these 50 will each produce 50 grains more, we find:

In the second year.....	2,500	grains.
" third "	125,000	"
" sixth "	15,625,000,000	"
" twelfth "	246,169,625,000,000	"

The third year's crop would give 300 men one meal, leaving enough bran to feed eight pigs for one day. The produce of the single grain in the twelfth year would suffice to supply all the inhabitants of the earth with food during their lifetime.

WESLEYAN.

—The Illinois annual conference met in the Wesleyan church in Wheaton, Wednesday morning, September 17th, Rev. J. L. Clark in the chair, and Rev. Wm. Pinkney of Sycamore being secretary. The conference was well attended, many of the brethren coming in their own conveyances in the primitive way, and one having driven through the dust for some 140 miles from Mercer county. Such zeal and faith was sure to be manifested in the devotional meetings which were deeply spiritual in tone. Among the members best known to the readers of the Cynosure were brethren Brooks, Clark, Lathrop, Pinkney, Riley, Hawley, Dodd, G. L. Arnold, Spaulding and Spencer. Other members as Elder Snyder, P. Elzea and Bro. Campbell have during the year gone to Kansas and Nebraska. Elder D. Wright was the only member of the body who died during the year. He was some 80 years old. Part of Thursday evening was devoted to a memorial service. Devotional exercises were held before every sitting, and a preaching service every evening. Rev. D. S. Kinney, the connectional agent from Syracuse, preached on Wednesday evening. His annual report was given next day and was received with great satisfaction.

The first day was spent in the examination of character of the preachers, and the celebration of the Lord's Supper. A question arose as to the disposal of Sabbath schools organized on a union basis and name, yet controlled by Wesleyans, such a school being reported at Harmon, Lee county, where conference met last year. The school was not accepted as Wesleyan, and a report ordered to ascertain the proportion of Weselyans in such schools.

On Thursday, Elders U. D. Lathrop, of Viola, and A. R. Dodd, of Elgin, were elected respectively president and secretary of the conference. The election was appropriately followed by prayer for the Divine blessing upon them in their official relation. On the same day brethren Grinnell, Campbell and Thorn, were forward for examination and ordination. The examination was held on Friday afternoon and was satisfactory. The solemn setting apart of these young brethren for the ministry took place on Sabbath afternoon.

Among the important items of business were the following:—It was voted unanimously to recommend to the General Conference meeting next month in Pittsford, Michigan, that the constitution be changed so that any change in that document or the discipline should require not only a two-thirds vote of the annual conferences, as now, but also the same vote of the local churches. Unaminously also the following was adopted:

RESOLVED, That we hereby recommend our next General Conference to place such an article in our Book of Discipline as shall give us before the world an unequivocal standing on the acknowledgement in the Constitution of the United States of Almighty God as the source of all power and authority in civil government of his annointed King, Jesus Christ, and of his revealed will as the foundation of all laws.

Also voted that all the pastors of the conference should preach at least one sermon during the year on the subject of Christianity in our government. It was resolved to purchase a large tent suitable for the purposes of preaching and worship, to be used for special meetings anywhere in the bounderies of the conference. Two ministerial associations are to be held during the year, one at Flora, in June, the other at Hopewell, in August. The next meeting of the conference is appointed at Nora, Jo Daviess county.

On Saturday forenoon the conference accepted the invitation of the Faculty and visited the College in a body, where they were shown through the fine buildings, examined the cabinets, libraries, scientific apparatus, etc., and took in the splendid view from the main tower. A vote of thanks was given to the Faculty for their kindness, uniting the sympathy and co-operation of the body in the efforts of the institution for Christian education and reform.

There is little change in the location of the members for the ensuing year. Elder G. T. Riley was elected conference missionary, and Bro. C. F. Hawley was left to look after the important work opened by him in Missouri.

On the Sabbath the different pulpits of Wheaton were filled by members of the conference, Elders Lathrop and Hawley preaching to large audiences in the College chapel.

THE METHODIST PROTESANT CONFERENCE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

CASE OF ELDER TURNEY CONCLUDED.

(Concluded.)

The charge of falsehood and equivocation sounds serious; but in view of the specifications, I do not think my reputation for veracity will suffer.

1. In a conversation with Mr. Durbin, that eminent brother asked me whether I did not think I was serving God when I stumped the district in Illinois as a candidate for Congress, and I replied that I did not stump the district, though I admitted having made some political speeches at Vandalia and at Vera, in Fayette county, Ill. He also inquired whether I did not make some political speeches in Ohio. I replied that I had not made any political speeches there. Neither had I.

2 The notice served on me in Grafton, was put into the printer's hands a few hours after I received it, and printed names and all, with my reply. Accordingly, I had no occasion to make any statements about it. Neither did I. There was also an anonymous communication in one of the Grafton papers, written by a member of my church, which I may have denounced as its merits demanded, although my recollection gives me no clue to anything which I said on the matter.

3. The statement that I forgot my clerical order on a certain occasion and had to pay full fare is true. As the ticket agent who exacted the full fare was the person through whom I received the order, I asked him whether he could not give me the usual one-third reduction anyhow; and was very plainly given to understand that he would not accommodate any Anti-mason. My statements were both true, though I might have made them more explicit had I known that any trap was set for my words.

4. I did charge Bro. F. M. Durbin with making the threat in question, and I was told by a person on whose word I rely that he did make such a threat. Moreover, I made the charge to Bro. Durbin's own face. Does he dare to state that I had no justificable reason for making the charge? Is it a crime to charge a man with doing what he did do?

5. My statements at Benton's Ferry and at Bobtown contained the truth. Is telling the truth to be classed as equivocating and falsifying? I have not been so taught. Besides, do you notice that the time of my statements is not given, nor the person of whom I spoke named, nor the lodge which I was informed that he had visited? The specification is made as vague as possible, thereby keeping me from meeting it in a more definite manner.

6. I do not recollect just what I did say about the missionary appropriations in the Conference Minutes for 1877; but as the charge fails to name times, dates and persons, it does not merit my notice.

7. The Freemasons of Grafton having said that I knew nothing about the secrets of the fraternity, I took the only course that was open to me to prove that I did know their secret work. As Paul says, "Being crafty, I caught them with guile." I met the Rev. G. W. Barrett, now the honored president of the West Virginia Annual Conference, an M. P. minister who did not know me to be an Anti-mason, and I tested his Masonry by the usual grips, questions, etc. At the conclusion of the test I told him that I was an Anti-mason and not a craftsman, and he said he would not have been the man who had betrayed those things for a thousand dollars. Relating the result of my test to Bro. F. M. Durbin, he remarked that Bro. Barrett was green. Those are the facts out of which this terrific seventh point has been made.

8. The eight specification of exhibiting spite and malice, etc., is a unique thing in its line. I did declare that I had a mind to write to certain persons at Pruntytown, informing them that a certain minister had said that he intended to soon join the Masonic lodge, as I had reason to believe that some persons at Pruntytown were not willing to support Freemasonry in the pulpit; but I disclaim any malice or spite in the matter. I did not think it right to have Freemasonry in disguise foisted upon an unwilling people, even by a brother minister of my own conference. Without doubt I had a right to warn my unsuspecting Anti masonic friends, that they might not be ignorantly and unintentionally building up the vile mysteries of Mahabone. * * * * *

Now, wherein have these Grafton brethren shown me to be "unfit to exercise the functions of a minister of the Gospel," etc.? Just look at the resolution which follows the above set of so-called charges:—"Be it resolved that this quarterly conference object to the passage of his official character in the annual conference, and demand that he be brought to trial on the above specified and preferred charges." What right has any quarterly conference to "demand" that a member of an annual conference "be brought to trial," etc.? Is not the annual conference competent to judge for itself whether one of its ministers ought to be tried, or not to be tried, after hearing the charges against him? Does the Grafton Quarterly Conference own the West Virginia Annual Conference that it may "demand" that the latter body shall heed its mandates, without question, to bring to trial anybody who may incur the ill-will of the diminutive quarterly conference over there at the Grafton Mission? Am I to be tried on a mere patchwork of hearsay reports, for which nobody is to stand sponsor? The fact is, and the fact will remain, that the only real charge in the paper is my Anti-masonry, and it would have been more creditable for my Grafton brethren to have done up their resolves in these words:

WHEREAS, D. B. Turney is an Anti-mason, and

WHERRAS, It would not be safe to physically Morganize him,

Resolved, That we will at least persecute him, by objecting to the passage of his official character, (although we cannot name any official act of his which was wrong), and by demanding that the conference have him tried and expelled.

That, in my humble judgment, would have been as much to the purpose as the foregoing bill of charges, which bill was duly repudiated by the majority of the Committee on Difficulties and by the vote of the annual conference adopting the report of said committee that there was no sufficient ground for trial on account of said charges, etc. Anti-masonic victory No. 1.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

THE CASE OF ELDER HURLESS.

MENDOTA, Ill., September 17, 1879.

EDITORS CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Dear Brethren:—Believing that you are anxious to learn of the disposition made of Elder P. Hurless' case, I conclude to write you concerning it. But I wish to say by way of preface that it is thought best to refrain from publishing anything that might disturb the quiet of the conference in any quarter; therefore, only the result is given. It was mutually agreed to leave the past history of the matter. Over two days and a half were spent in probing and investigating. Liberty was given for the prosecutors to bring up anything that had not previously been disposed of. And although boasts of "new charges" and "new matters" had been freely made, when it came to the test nothing could be proved, and the one who had been foremost in such boasts frankly acknowledged that he had no case, and that proof was lacking to sustain the charges.

A resolution was passed with only five dissenting votes declaring that it is the opinion of this conference that the proceedings of the Polo church against Elder Hurless were illegal and that he was justified in procuring an injunction to protect himself and the law of the church against such proceedings. A vote was then taken on the passage of his character; the yeas and nays were called, and only one voted against the passage of his character, three declined to vote. The prosecutor of the case voted yea. At this juncture I offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That it is the opinion of this conference, that it is due Bro. P. Hurless to say to the church at large and the public generally, that we believe the attempt to arrest his character at this conference session, is the result of malicious and persistent persecution, and we hereby declare that we have the utmost confidence in his purity and integrity.

2. That this resolution be published in the Religious Telescope, Western Light, and Christian Radical.

To these resolutions there was not a dissenting voice. I forgot to add the Cynosure to the above papers. But you can publish them if you desire. The pastor of the Polo church, J. G. Dressinger, was found guilty of mal-administration and rebellion, he made suitable confession and asked pardon, which was granted. The Polo faction received a terrible rebuke from which it is hoped it will not recover. Elder Hurless went out from the conference standing higher in the estimation of the members of conference and visitors present, (which were many,) than ever before. His purity and integrity were so clearly shown that none but prejudiced minds could doubt them.

An excellent spirit pervaded the conference after the adjustment of these difficulties. The future for the conference looks bright. Law and order prevailed. P. Hurless, J. H. Grimm, and W. H. Chandler, were elected presiding elders. Our next session is to be at Ridott, Stephenson county. Your brother in Christ, W. H. CHANDLER.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Oberlin Theological Seminary opened Wednesday last. The address was delivered by Prof. Smith, on Methods of Investigation in Science and Theology. The junior class begins its work with eleven members.

—The Union Park church of this city find the public comment on the theatrical performance in their house and the Michigan Avenue Baptist church too strong to be passed in silence, and at a late meeting the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Through representations and influences which we do not think it worth while to characterize, and by actions on the part of the authorities supposed to be in the line of established precedents, and for which we do not wish to be understood as measuring out blame, the Union Park church building was obtained for the performance of a play called "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and was actually used for that purpose; and,

WHEREAS, This action may be thought to be in accord with the sentiment of the church, and will be likely to be quoted by the parties interested in their mischievous business if there is no public disavowal of indorsement; there ore,

Resolved, 1. That we reiterate the views formally expressed by us in a paper submitted to the trustees, but which, it was thought, came too late to arrest the contract, and in the most emphatic terms record our disapprobation of the proceeding. Such exhibitions we hold to be wholly out of place in houses which have been solemnly set apart to the worship of God; detrimental to all the ends for which the church has been established; inconsistent with the high standard of spiritual life; calculated to hinder the work of our Lord, and to bring the very name of religion into reproach.

2. That we record our conviction that the policy of renting the church building for any purpose not clearly in keeping with its sacred character, is not wise, and we hereby express the belief that there will be no repetition of it in the future.

3. That we deem it our duty to warn all whom it may concern against the approaches of these men, who, under pretense of furnishing innocent amusement, will be sure to scatter seeds of dissension, obstruct the currents of godliness, and fill the hearts of good men and women with sorrow.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. John Culbertson who was a frontier minister for thirty-nine years, was a man of great endurance. It is said that in this time he preached "two thousand four hundred and fifty-two days, baptized one thousand eight hundred and six children, married two hundred and forty couples, and rode on horseback seventy thousand miles, or nearly equal to three times around the world."

—Miss E. F. Johnston, who sailed from this country on the 21 ult., reached Liverpool safely and left there for Egypt on the 16th. She will reinforce the Egyptian mission.

—Rev. Samuel Martin and his family with Miss Rosa A. McCullough, will sail from Philadelphia about the middle of next month for India. He has been detained for a time by the sickness of his children.

FREE METHODIST.

—A correspondent of the Free Methodist writes thus of the State Holiness camp meeting held lately at Corsicana, Texas:—"Hundreds have been converted, and hundreds have entered into perfect love. Two Methodist preachers are among the latter number, pastors of M. E. C. South. The work is thorough. Tobacco, dress, and secretists all get their share of reproof. Many are as clear witnesses to the saving power of Jesus as I ever saw. We are watching with blessed interest the results of this meeting. Four denominations are represented among the workers."

GENERAL.

George Muller, of Bristol, England, has just returned to this country. Prof. Thwing, writing from Switzerland, tells of an interesting visit at the Orphanage at Bristol, and adds:—"Mr. Muller left unanswered 108 written invitations to preach in various parts of the United States when he sailed for home, June, 1878. He returns to America in a few weeks, and expects to reach New York early in September. His address will be the General Post Office of that city. Mr. Muller's last tour was through Spain, Italy, and Switzerland. He was providentally brought into connection with not a few titled and crowned dignitaries, in whom he says he found responsive hearers. Great numbers attended his meetings and the Lord's power was shown. He dislikes to talk about his missionary work, but wishes to spend his remaining days in holding up before believers the reality of a higher life of abiding trust in the promises of our Lord Jesus Christ."

—The Lutherans estimate that they will gain in Nebraska this year no less than 18 000 communicants by Scandinavian immigration into that State. The immigration into Minnesota is also very large. In one month 1,170 Scandinavians passed through St. Paul for the regions beyond.

News of the Week.

—The contributions in Chicago for Memphis are between $1,500 and $2,000. The fever is abating in that city.

—The beautiful buildings of the State Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Delevan, Wis., were burned last Tuesday. The fire was discovered in the cupola of the main building about 8:30 o'clock. It spread rapidly and soon enveloped the roof and run down the winding stairs to the first floor, thus setting fire to all parts of the main building. The building was full of children. There were 147 in attendance besides the employes. They were all gotten out of the building safe, and none were hurt.

—A Washington dispatch announces the arrival of Mrs. Sprague and her three children at Edgewood, the former homestead of her father, the late Chief Justice Chase; also that the place has been withdrawn from sale, from which it may be inferred she has returned to stay.

—The dimensions attained by the petroleum trade are indicated by figures which show that the total export from the United States for the month of July was over 50,000,000 gallons, of the aggregate value of $4,238,461.

—The race of the Pacific railroads to the Western coast is likely to become spirited. The Northern Pacific is being pushed through Dakota; the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe is working rapidly into Arizona, and we now have assurances that work on the Texas Pacific will shortly commence from a point west of Fort Worth, in Texas, to San Diego, on the coast of Southern California.

—There was a shocking calamity shortly after midnight of the 17th at a fire which occurred in a three-story tenement house, in South Boston. The house was occupied principally by Germans, nearly all of whom were asleep at the time. The fire broke out in the rear portion of the lower story, and made such rapid headway that before those in the upper stories could descend all avenues of escape were cut off. The scene was one of the greatest distress, as the imprisoned victims appeared on the roof and at windows in a vain attempt to seek safety. Several were burned to death and others were badly injured.

—A cable dispatch from London announces that the surplus grain crop of America for export, together with that of Russia, is estimated to fall 505,000 quarters short of the deficiency in various other countries.

—A dispatch received by telegraph from Simla says it is believed in the best informed circles that the Ameer was undoubtedly in complicity with those who committed the assault upon the British Embassy at Cabul, if he is not guilty of directly instigating the affair himself. Facts pointing in this direction are coming in possession of the British authorities. The pretended imprisonment of the Ameer is believed to have been resorted to for the purpose of deceiving the British as to his loyalty to them. It is held that there can be but little question of his association and communication with Russian agents for the purpose of organizing a combined defense of Russians and Afghans against English troops.

—A dispatch says intelligence has been received of a terrible outbreak at Herat. The troops have revolted and murdered the civil and military authorities.

—Sir Garnet Wolseley telegraphs from South Africa that all the important Zulu chiefs have now submitted to the British authorities. Further particulars of the capture of King Cetywayo have been received. It was somewhat by accident that the capture was effected. A patrol of the king's dragoon guards, scouting in the heart of the Nyome forest, fell upon his trail, followed it up, and ran him to the earth. Finding himself surrounded, and resistance being altogether impracticable, the African monarch advanced to the captain of the patrol and tendered him his surrender. He was in a greatly exhausted condition, and bore on his person the evidence of much privation, suffering, and mental disquietude. During the march eleven of his followers tried to escape, and six were successful. The other five were shot. The king will be taken to Maritzburg, and from there to Greytown.

—The cotton operatives on a strike at Ashton, England, number between 8,000 and 11,000. The streets are crowded with the unemployed, but little excitement is manifested. Serious complications are arising at Preston.

—Relative to the apprehended distress among the working classes in the thickly populated towns in the northeast of England it is estimated that 20,000 persons in the district referred to have been thrown out of work during three years past. There are thousands of empty houses in Darlington. Stockton and Newport are also seriously affected. The climax of distress has been reached at Middleborough.

—The Russian journals continue their crusade against Germany, and assert, almost unanimously, although of course, in different language, that Germany betrayed Russia during the negotiations which closed the war by the Berlin conference, and that her policy transferred at the initiative of England the fruits of the Russian victories to Austria. A correspondent at Paris has reason to believe that the newspaper war between Germany and Russia is a mere diplomatic comedy to test the intention of France. Several of the French journals influenced by the tone of the Russian press against Germany, have commenced an agitation for revindication of Alsace.

—A Vienna correspondent reports that in consequence of the bad harvest and numerous floods, the distress in parts of Hungary threatens to become appalling during the coming winter. The Temes Banat district is threatened with famine, and some of the inhabitants are preparing to emigrate to Servia.

—In Spain the recent orders for 18 000 men for Cuba have caused much agitation throughout the kingdom, and the Basque provinces are only restrained from insurrection by the presence of large garrisons. Carlist partisans have arrived in Guypuzcoa, and it is feared the attempt to enforce conscription will be the signal for another rising.

—A Berlin dispatch says the new treaty between Germany and Japan guarantees free exercise of religious observances and free access to the interior of Japan.

Miscellany.

—A Harrisburg soldier lost his hearing during one of the engagements of the civil war. A few evenings ago he went into the river to bathe, and while thrusting his head under the surface of the water, he thought he heard a loud report. Instantly raising his head he was astonished to find that his hearing had been restored.

—The information is both agreeable and surprising that there is not an infidel book in the Welsh language. But when we learn in connection with this fact that with the people of Wales the Bible is the book, and that they are devout and earnest students of it, it is not strange that neither popery nor unbelief makes progress among them.

—The Rev. Mr. Rendall, the intrepid Scotch missionary to the Portugese in Funchal, Maderia, says that an ex-priest has been excommunicated and anathematized for turning Protestant. One item of his sentence might prove embarrassing if it was enforced here; "No one is to speak or hold any communication with him, and should he chance to enter a street-car, all the faithful in it are to get out!"

—A speaker at the Brooklyn convention made the following statement: "Among the applicants for admission to the Inebriate Asylum at Binghampton, were eight judges, thirty-nine clergymen, two hundred and twenty-six physicians, three hundred and forty merchants, thirteen hundred rich men's daughters."

In Philadelphia, during the last twenty years, 184,966 persons have been committed to the city prison for drunkenness alone.

—When W. E. Gladstone was prime minister of the United Kingdom, a deputation of brewers waited on him to remind him of the loss the revenue would sustain by any further restrictions on the liquor traffic. His reply was: "Gentlemen, you need not give yourselves any trouble about the revenue. The question of revenue must never stand in the way of needed reforms. Besides, with a sober population, not wasting their earnings, I will know where to obtain the revenue."

—One of the most striking of the late illustrations of the political strength of beer is furnished by New Jersey. Its last legislature, late in the session, passed an act to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors and children. Two Methodist conferences passed resolutions asking Governor McClellan to sign the bill, or to file it in the office of the secretary of state and thus permit it to become a law. This reasonable request was seconded by presidents of colleges, professors in theological seminaries, temperance and law and order societies, by many clergymen and other distinguished citizens, but all to no purpose. Listening to the voice of the breweries and grogshops, the governor vetoed the bill. Great indeed is the power of beer.—National Temperance Advocate.

—Sunday, as observed by a large part of Chicago's population, is fast becoming not merely a day of harmless pleasure and mirthfulness, which the liberal innovators on old customs intended, but a day of reckless dissipation and drunken deviltry. The tragedy at the Bohemian picnic a week ago, and the long list of murderous affrays published yesterday, tell their own story, and they will be repeated from Sunday to Sunday, until sensible people, liberals as well as the stricter sects, step in and correct the evil. Whether there is any middle ground between the old Sabbath severity and this wild riot, we do not know. It is to be hoped there is. But if there is not, then we say without hesitation, give us the old New England Sabbath. Anything is preferable to this letting down of all restraint, and turning loose thousands of young men to contract evil habits and be led by vicious men into excesses, which finally culminate in crime.—Inter-Ocean.

—A word for your children: Protect them against the corrupting literature that floods the country. From New York city alone half a million such publications are issued weekly. They penetrate everywhere. No quarantine has been or can be established except by strict parental vigilance. Let that vigilance be exercised as you value the salvation, temporal and eternal, of your child.

—Mr. Spurgeon, in speaking to his vast audience on the duties of parents to their children, said: "Make the bridge from the cradle to manhood as long as you can. Let your child be a child, and not a little ape of a man running about the town."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLES. G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his conversion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

SERMON ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP AND OTHER SECRET SOCIETIES

BY REV. J. SARVER, Pastor Evangelical Lutheran Church, Leechburg. Pa.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A DISCUSSION OF THEIR CHARACTER AND CLAIMS.

BY REV. DAVID Mc DILL, PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD, and REV. EDWARD BEECHER. Each of these able writers in clear forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David Mc Dillin Six Chapters treats of 1 "Their Antiquity."—2 "Their Secrecy."—3 "Oaths and Promises."—4 "Profaneness."—5 "Their Exclusiveness."—6 "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

WHAT IT HAS BEEN AND WHAT IT IS TO BE.

The publishers of the Cynosure hereby present their cordial greetings to all friends interested in the National Christian Association and its work, and also to the public generally. The Christian Cynosure is just entering upon its eleventh volume. From the first it has had a healthful growth. Commencing as a four-page fortnightly it has grown to be a fine-looking, sixteen-page weekly paper with leaves cut and stitched, of convenient size for reading and binding. President J. Blanchard, who from its commencement has been its editor-in-chief, has efficient and experienced aid both in the office and from able writers in different parts of the country, among whom we mention,

Rev. H. T. Cheever, Worcester, Mass.
Gen. J. W. Phelps, Brattleboro, Vt.
A. M. Milligan, D.D., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Bishop Milton Wright, Iowa.
Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Cor. Sec'y N. C. A.
Rev. John Boyes, Shewresbury, England.
Geo. Wishart, D.D., of Ohio.
M. Langhorne, Esq., of Washington City.
A. L. Post, D.D., of Pennsylvania.
Pres. S. B. Allen, Westfield College, Ill.
Prof. W. O. Tobey, Dayton, Ohio.
Rev. C. C. Foote of Detroit.
Prof. O. F. Lumry of Wheaton College, Ill.
Ren. J. L. Barlow of Menomonie, Wis.
Rev. H. H. Hinman of Wheaton,
Rev. Geo. Thompson, Leland, Mich.
Prof. E. J. Paine, Wasioja, Minn.
Prof. Charles A. Blanchard, Wheaton College.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, Center Strafford, N. H.
And many others.

The following are a few of the claims the Cynosure has on the liberal patronage of the reading public: It contains vigorous and valuable reviews of the topics of the times, Secular news, Market Reports, Religious Intelligence, Sabbath-school department, Home and Farm, etc., in addition to its Anti-masonic departmetnt and its strong, wise editorials on subjects of vital importance to patriots and Christians. The paper is adapted to persons of all ages and conditions. Its Anti-masonic department has no equal. Though the nation has been startled and shaken with fear at the power of the secret political societies of the South and the Labor Unions of the whole country, and even now regards life as unsafe in the South and on the Pacific coast, and none can dispute the fact that the business depression of the past five years is largely due to these secret conspiracies, still thousands have no conception of the and few of those who realize their baneful influence have the moral courage to oppose them. Yet God has raised up witnesses against these dark orders many of them men noted for their piety, and others whom the nation has been proud to honor.

Secret societies swindle men out of their money, their freedom and their religion. The secret orders, says an observing philanthropist, are sucking every thing good out of our free institutions.

Wendell Phillips, says of secret societies: "They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a Republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them.

"Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organization, such should not be allowed to exist."

Hon. Charles Sumner wrote from Washington to Samuel D. Greene in January, 1854:

"I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions and tending to centralization and anarchy, FREEMASONRY AND SLAVERY; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it. Masonry seemed to be dead at home, but it is rife here."

In 1855 the "Know-nothing" order and its hostility to immigration came before the Senate, when in his speech Wm. H. Seward used this remarkable language:

Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even mockery of my fellow men.

Swear, sir! I, a man, an American citizen, a Christian, swear to submit myself to the guidance and direction of other men, surrendering my own judgment to their judgments, and my conscience to their keeping! No, no, sir. I know quite well the fallibility of my own judgment, and my liability to fall into error and temptation. But my life has been spent in breaking the bonds of the slavery of men. I, therefore, know too well the danger of confiding power to irresponsible hands, to make myself a willing slave.

The great hope of the nation lies in the propagation of true American principles. No instrumentality is more effectve in such a work than

A GOD-FEARING INDEPENDENT AMERICAN PRESS.

Americans—those who love the principles of equality and justice upon which our civil and religious institutions rest, should know that Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and the Communistic orders are all of foreign birth and utterly at variance with our free institutions, and must be destroyed or they will destroy all that is dear to the Christian patriot.

Reader, you want to know more of the movement against secretism. Are you a voter? You ought to read the platform of the American party. You ought to know at least what influences are at work in your own caucuses and county offices to defeat the will of the people, to screen defaulters, and open jail doors.

There is an easy way to it. Read the Christian Cynosure.

Are you a Christian? You should know what the churches and Christian organizations are doing, what testimony they are bearing. You ought to know how the Methodist Bishops stand; how the Congregational Council is run; how Presbyterians and Baptists are intimidated; how the Friends toil to keep out the false paths, and the Wesleyans to strengthen their godly testimony; how the United Brethren maintain the noble action of their General Conference; how the Free Methodists and Dunkers make seceders; and how staunchly the Presbyterians, United and Reformed, stand the storm.

You will find the record in the Cynosure.

Are you a professed opponent of secretism? Grieve, pray, fight no longer alone. Read how your brethren have united, and meet yearly from all parts of the land Read how our self-denying lecturers are awakening the people, while they are mobbed, egged, stoned, poisoned, slandered,—and yet glory in their sufferings for Christ.

Read how skillful Masons repenting of their ed oaths, are rousing thousands to the evils of th and displaying its every secret to all the worl this entrenched, boasting system is made to t with rage and fear. Read it in the Cynosure.

Read the Cynosure and take courage at the evinced in the official statement of Josiah mond, Sovereign Grand Inspector General, (33d that one hundred and fifty thousand Freemaso left the order within the past ten years, and the of the order is not only stopped, but its membe actually decreasing. Odd-fellowship is also on cline in most of the States, and the Grange, powerful, is nearly dead in the Northern States YOU aid in the final triumph?

WONDERFUL PROGRESS OF THIS REFORM

THE RICH should read the Cynosure in orde wisely to use their wealth and influence for th of God and the good of their country.

THE POOR should read the Cynosure the b understand how to oppose and remove the e their social, civil and spiritual prosperity.

FARMERS should read the Cynosure to see h higher degree sharpers of the Masonic ring unsuspecting country people by means of the and other organized secret measures.

ALL PATRIOTS should read the Cynosure t the principles of permanent local and national p ity, or, already understanding them, to unite forces in the defense of that righteousness wh alteth a nation.

CHRISTIANS should read the Cynosure to s Masonic lodges and numerous other secret Je training schools are ruining souls and subvert Christian religion.

TEMPERANCE MEN should read the Cynosure t that the Masonic order is a bulwark of the rum which they are seeking to overthrow.

BUSINESS MEN should read the Cynosure to s confidence is impaired and their interests injured secret system of organization.

SCIENTIFIC MEN, REFORMERS, EDUCATORS, I ED LODGE MEMBERS, PHILANTHROPISTS, MEN a MEN every where should read the Cynosure their patronage and example give a new impetus defensive war against their sly and deadly enemy. orders compel us to rise in self-protection. "Wh men associate the good must combine, or one fall the unpitied victims of an ignoble struggle.'

Notice a few of the many testimonies show importance and value of the Cynosure whic recently come to us:

The Evangelical Repository for September, 1879, says: "The Cynosure still deals its sledge-hammer blows against Masonry, O ship and every other organization carried on under the cloak of sec facts and arguments are drawn from every point of the compass. ness of information it displays in regard to that system which i combats is remarkable. It is doing a good work, and deserves h port."

The Gospel Preacher of Ashland, Ohio. one of the organs of th Baptist or Tunker church says: "The Christian Cynosure, pub Chicago, Ill., comes to our table this week filled with excellent mat the leading anti secret journal of America, has an extensive circul is ably edited. Its attacks on Masonry are evidently intended to Scriptnral injunction: 'What thy hand findeth to do, do with all Its stinging blows are having their effect and we trust will be th shedding light in all the dark places of our land."

Wm. H. Taylor, Sparta Center, Kent county, Mich., writes: " take my bread and butter but do not stop the Cynosure. While I pect its companionship. The principles it advocates are my prin friends are my friends and my chief desire is God speed the day w they shall triumph."

"THE TWENTY-FOUR INCH GAUGE

Is an instrument used by operative masons to measure and lay out their work; but we, as Free and Accepted Masons, are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of dividing our time. It being divided into twenty-four equal parts, is emblematical of the twenty-four hours of the day, which we are taught to divide into three equal parts; whereby are found eight hours for the service of God and a distressed worthy brother, eight for our usual vocations, and eight for refreshment and sleep."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 38.

NOTE 63—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"In Masonry by the shock of enlightenment we seek humbly, indeed, and at an incouceivable distance, to preserve the recollection and to embody the idea of the birth of material light by the representation of the circumstances that accompanied it, and their reference to the birth of intellectual or Masonic light. The one is the type of the other; and hence the illumination of the candidate is attended with a ceremony that may be supposed to imitate the primal illumination of the universe." Mackey's Ritualist, page 34.

"The rough ashlar is a stone as taken from the quarry in its rude and natural state. The perfect ashlar is a stone made ready by the hands of the workmen, to be adjusted by the working tools of the Fellow Craft. The trestle-board is for the master workman to draw his designs upon. By the rough ashlar we are reminded of our rude and imperfect state by nature; by the perfect ashlar, that state of perfection at which we hope to arrive by a virtuous education, our own endeavors," [etc.] Mackey's Ritualist, page 58. [See page 140 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

THE POINT WITHIN A CIRCLE.[98]

"Lodges were anciently dedicated to King Solomon,  but Masons professing Christianity dedicate theirs to St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, who were two eminent patrons of Masonry; and since their time, there is represented, in every regular and well-governed lodge a certain point within a circle, the point representing an individual brother, the circle the boundary line of his conduct to God and man, beyond which he is never to suffer his passions, prejudices, or interest to betray him, on any occasion. This circle is embordered by two perpendicular parallel lines, representing those saints, who were perfect parallels in Christianity, as well as in Masonry; and upon the vertex rests the Holy Scriptures, which point out the whole duty of man. In going around this circle we necessarily touch upon these two lines, as well as upon the Holy Scriptures; and while a Mason keeps himself thus circumscribed, it is impossible that he should err."—Sickels's Monitor, page 50.

The Point within a Circle.

NOTE 94 FROM "FRREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"To every Mason, whatever may be his peculiar religious creed, that revelation of the deity which is recognized by his religion becomes his trestle-board. Thus the trestle-board of the Jewish Mason is the Old Testament; of the Christian, the Old and the New; of the Mohommedan, the Koran." Mackey's Ritualist, page 59.

NOTE 98—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The Phallus was an imitation of the male generative organ. It was represented usually by a column, which was surrounded by a circle at its base, intended for the cteis, or female generative organ. This union of the phallus and the cteis, which is well represented by the point within the circle, was intended by the ancients as a type of the prolific powers of nature, which they worshiped under the united form of the active or male principle and the passive or female principle. The two parallel lines, which in the modern lectures are said to represent St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, really allude to particular periods in the sun's annual course.—" Mackey's Ritualist, pages 62-63.

NOTE 100—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"PENALTY. The ceremony of entering into a covenant among the ancient Hebrews is alluded to in Jeremiah, XXXIV. 18. It was usual for the parties covenanting, to cut a beast in twain and pass between the parts thereof. Jeremiah also relates the penalties to be inflicted upon the people for a breach of their covenant. An English writer, Brother Goodacre, (quoted by Dr. Oliver,) thus fully explains the whole ceremony of making the covenant. The allusion will not escape the attentive Mason. 'After an animal had been selected his throat was cut across [Entered Apprentice's penalty,] with one single blow, so as to divide the windpipe, arteries and veins, without touching any bone.' The next ceremony were to tear the breast open and pluck out the heart, [Fellow Craft's penalty] and if there was the least imperfection, the body would be considered unclean. The animal was then divided into two parts and placed north and south, [Master Mason's penalty] that the parties to the covenant might pass between them from east to west; and the carcass was then left as a prey to voracious animals." *Mackey's Lexicon. NOTE 131—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

"This has very properly been called the sublime degree of a Master Mason, as well for the solemnity of the ceremonies which accompany it, as for the profound lessons of wisdom which it inculcates. The important design of the degree is to symbolize the great doctrines of the resurrection of the body and the immortality of the soul; and hence it has been remarked by a learned writer of our order that the Master Mason represents a man saved from the grave of iniquity and raised to the faith of salvation." Mackey's Ritualist, page 109.

NOTE 114—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"We may not call in question the propriety of this organization; if we would be Masons we must yield private judgment. 'To the law and to the testimony—if any man walk not by this rule, it is because there is no light in him." Pierson's Traditions, page 30.

NOTE 121—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

NOTE 112—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

NOTE 161—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The small hill near Mount Moriah can be clearly identified by the most convincing analogies as being no other than Mount Calvary. Thus Mount Calvary was a small hill; it was situated in a westerly direction from the temple and was near Mount Moriah; it was on the direct road from Jerusalem to Joppa, and is thus the very spot where a weary brother, traveling on that road, would find it convenient to sit down to rest and refresh himself; and it was outside of the gate of the temple; and lastly, there are several caves, or clefts in the rocks in the neighborhood, one of which it will be remembered was, subsequently to the time of this tradition, used as the sepulchre of our Lord. The Christian Mason will readily perceive the peculiar character of the symbolism which this identification of the spot on which the great truth of the resurrection was unfolded in both systems—the Masonic and Christian—must suggest."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 116.

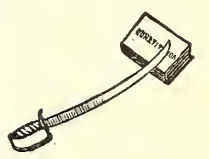
EMBLEMS[383] OF THE MASTER MASON'S[180] DEGREE.

"THE THREE STEPS

Usually delineated upon the Master's carpet, are emblematical of the three principal stages of human life, viz: youth, manhood, and age,. In youth as Entered Apprentices, we ought industriously to occupy our minds in the attainment of useful knowledge; in manhood, as Fellow Craft, we should apply our knowledge to the discharge of our respective duties to God, our neighbor, and ourselves; that so in age, as Master Masons, we may enjoy the happy reflection consequent on a well-spent life, and die in the hope of a glorious immortality.[159]

"THE POT OF INCENSE



Is an emblem[384] of a pure heart, which is always an acceptable sacrifice to the Deity; and as this glows with fervent heat, so should our hearts continually glow with gratitude to the great and beneficent Author of our existence, for the manifold blessings and comforts we enjoy.

"THE BEE HIVE

Is an emblem of industry, and recommends the practice of that virtue to all created beings, from the highest seraph in heaven to the lowest reptile of the dust [etc. See page 307 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

"THE BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS GUARDED BY THE TYLER'S SWORD

Reminds us that we should be ever watchful and guarded in our thoughts, words and actions, particularly when before the enemies of Masonry; ever bearing in remembrance those truly Masonic virtues, silence and circumspection.

"THE SWORD POINTING TO A NAKED HEART

Demonstrates that justice will sooner or later overtake us; and although our thoughts, words and actions may be hidden from the eyes of man, yet that

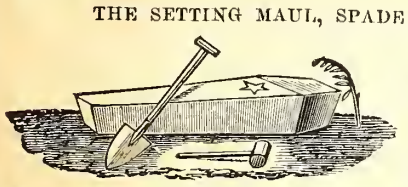
"THE HOUR GLASS



Is an emblem of human life. Behold! how swiftly the sands run, and how rapidly our lives are drawing to a close! [etc See page 310 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

"THE SCYTHE

Is an emblem of time, which cuts the brittle thread of life, and launches us into eternity. Behold! what havoc the scythe of time makes among the human race! If by chance we should escape the numerous evils incident to childhood and youth, and with health and vigor arrive to the years of manhood; yet, withal, we must soon be cut down by the all-devouring scythe of time, and be gathered into the land where our fathers have gone before us."—Sickels's Monitor, pages 113-119.

By them he is reminded that it is his sacred duty to lift from his mind the heavy weight of passions and prejudices which encumber his progress towards virtue, loosening the hold which long habits of sin and folly have had upon his disposition, and removing the rubbish of vice and ignorance, which prevents him from beholding that eternal foundation of truth and wisdom upon which he is to erect the spiritual and moral temple of his second life."—Sickels's Monitor, Part 2, page 65.

GRAND OMNIFIC OR ROYAL ARCH WORD.[359]

Each with his right hand grasps the right wrist of the companion on the left, and with his left hand the left wrist of his companion on his right, throwing forward his right foot, hollow in front, his toe touching the heel of his companion on the right. This is called three times three, as there are three right hands, three left hands and three feet forming three triangles. They then repeat the verse on page 500 of F. M. Illustrated.

Group of Three, Giving Graud Omnific Word.

They then balance three times three with a short pause between each three, when they raise their right hands over their heads, as shown in cut, and the Grand Omnific Royal Arch word is given in low breath in syllables, as follows: The first one says Jah, second one buh, third one lun; then the second one says Jah, third one buh, and first one lun; then the third one says Jah, first one buh, second one lun.

The word Je-ho-vah is treated in the same way, and the word G-o-d is given in the same way, but letter by letter, thus each of the three being repeated three times, varying each time as explained. In some Chapters only the word Je-ho-vah is given in this way, and in others the word Jah-Bel-On was formerly used.

"This incommunicable name of God consists, as we have already observed, of four letters. Yod, He, Vav, and He, equivalent in English to the combination JHVH.
